The little playfellow's uncle, who had been up stairs with the child, had run instantly to call the father, and but a few moments elapsed before he sprang into the middle of the group. He had been told all, and asked no questions. I had time to remark that his eye was very stern, and that his lips were very firmly compressed. Others, too, remarked it; and I knew afterwards, that a murmur ran round the circle of how strange it was that he betrayed no feeling.

He reached out his hands and took the child from its mother. Its eyes were now closed and a white ooze coming from between the blackened lips. Was ever death more assured? I saw him open the eyelids and give a sigh of relief. He told me afterwards that the eye was not shrunken, and so death had not begun. He then attempted to open the mouth, but the teeth were tight set, and they resisted his efforts. But with a force that seemed almost brutal, he wrenched the teeth apart, and opened the mouth.

"Shame," cried one of the bystanders. The father did not heed them, but motioned to a neighbour to take the child in his arms. He did so.

"Bring me the egg basket," he spoke, very sternly, almost without opening his teeth, to the servant.

"What do you want of it?" "What can you do with it?" "He's crazy." and many such remarks followed; but the basket was there in a moment.

He seized one of the eggs, broke it, inserted his fingers again between the teeth and wrenched them open by force, though they shut with so convulsive a motion as to tear the flesh from his fingers, and poured the albumen into his throat.—There was a slight struggle, nothing more, and the spectators were horrified at the action.

"Don't, the child is dying," said one.

"Please don't hurt the little thing—it can't live!" the mother had voice to say, laying her hand upon his arm.

"Mary, be still!" he answered sternly, while his teeth were relaxing from their clenching, and his face as hard as if he were entering a battle; "and don't any of you meddle with me; keep off?"

The bystanders involuntarily obeyed, with many harsh remarks upon his cruelty, but he did not heed them, and went on. Another and another egg was broken, and still there was no sign of life.—Then the whole body of bystanders broke out into a loud murmur, and cries of "the brute!" "Let the child die in peace!"—"He is crazy—take the child away from him!" were heard around him.

He desisted for a moment from his efforts, and turned with a fierceness which had before been altogether foreign to his nature, but no one who saw him afterwards forgot it. "Fools," he hissed, mind your own business and leave me to mine! Take her away will you! Try it!" and he went on emptying egg after egg down the apparently lifeless throat.

The mother could stand this no longer. Her first born was being tortured to death before her eyes, and she imploringly flung herself on her knees before her husband's father, who had that moment arrived.

"O, father, do stop him!" she gasped; "he will obey you; do stop him. He is torturing that poor dying child."

The grandfather started forward a step to interfere, for he, too, thought the proceeding an outrageous one; but he stopped and said, "Mary, let him alone. The child will die if he does not go on. It cannot do more if he does I would not say a word to him for the world. The child is his, let him use it at his pleasure!"

There was a silence then. In a moment more there was a quiver of the eyelids, a convulsive movement of the chest, and the teeth lost their tension. The father seized his child, turned her face downward, and the poison began to flow from her mouth. Again and again as the retching ceased, he repeated the experiment—the life returning still more, and the face losing its black color every instant. More than twenty tin [illegible] albumen had been administered, and more than half those times followed by the expulsion of the poison; when the eyes opened, the father desisted, the little sufferer lay just alive in his arms, exhausted, its little life terribly shattered, but saved!

Then—when the necessity for exertion and determination was over—when the physician had been summoned, and they knew that darling little Eveleen might live, after many weeks of struggle between life and death; when the relieved friends had acknowledged they had wronged him first; when the beautiful and sorrowing wife had blessed him through her kisses and tears, and all knew that, under God only such an almost fierce determination could save the child—then the father sat down, unnerved, and wept like a child.

Not as in "Little Sister Evelyn" did the poison do its fearful office. Eveleen is alive to day, and her brown eyes are opened upon womanhood. But there is no hour in my life that brings so thrilling a recollection as that of the father's struggle for the life of his child

Snakes and Peafowls.

The peafowl is the natural enemy not only of the adder, but of every kind of snake found in our island. A friend assures us, that some years ago he witnessed the following curious scene in Gloucestershire. His attention was attracted one morning by the loud call of a peacock, which was followed by the immediate flight of its congeners to the spot whence it proceeded. Upon arriving there himself, the birds were encircling an adder, and each striking it on the head in turns. The reptile was coiled up, and apparently had just died. The blows had all been given close to the little orifice in the neck (the ear!) which was very much lacerated.

The Bachelor.

A bachelor sat by his blazing grate,
And he fell into a snooze,
And he dreamed that o'er his wrinkled pate,
Had been thrown the nuptial noose.

And a rosy boy came to his side,
And bounded on his knee,
And back from his beaming face he shook
Fair curls in childish glee.

Then clear rang out his merry voice,
He shouted loud "Papa,
I don't love anybody else
But you and dear mamma!"

O! the father's heart o'erran with joy,
So long by love unlit,
And from its unseen depth poured out
Affection infinite.

Outstretching arms of strength unshorn,
He hugged THE OLD HOUSE CAT,
Which as 'twas wont, when master slept,
Had leaped upon his lap.

Song of the Spinner.

BY .W W. CALDWELL.

Whir away, my busy spindle.
Ask not rest or quiet now,
Bridal bed and swaddling raiment
And the shroud preparest thou.

Golden threads—ah! who can tell us
What your destiny may be!
Whether joy or whether sorrow
At the last shall come to thee.

Otherwise than we expected
May our fondest wishes fall;
What is spun for festal uses
Soon may chance to be a pall.

Whir away, my spindle, softly,
Life is changeful like to thee,
Joyous starting on our journey,
Oft return we mournfully.

Soon our voices die in silence,
Dark clouds dim the brightest day,
Onward rolls the tide of pleasure,
Love and friendship will decay.

Whir away, my busy spindle,
Rest and peace are not for thee—
And my tears, so gently flowing,
Still flow on unceasingly,

Camp Meeting Talk.

A chap down South went to camp-meeting, and gives the following amusing account of the disjointed conversation he heard there:

Preaching had not begun, and promenading was in progress. We took a convenient stand, and tried to catch the remarks of the various couples, as they went slowly by us.

'Yes, indeed,' (two girls talking, of course,) 'and my brother Tom says that Henry Soker brags about how many times he has kissed her right in the mouth, and she never slaps him at all when nobody is by, and I am sure I should die if people was to talk of me as they do about her'—

'Corn is up you know, and I shall make at least six hundred barrels if I make a peck, and consequently'—

'What a spectacle this is to be sush Ah wondah if these people—dem'd pooty gurl, ain't she?—build theyah own tents or hiah men to do it fowah 'em. Must be a great boah to'—

'Be married in six weeks from last Tuesday. I heard ma talking about it, but you mustn't mention it for the world It's a great secret.'

'Really, now, and she's as ugly as!—

'The finest sow you ever saw, sir. Pure Berkshire, and has nine splendid pigs. It was the best trade I ever made, and I wouldn't take thirty dollars for'—

'Scolloped petticoats! only look, Amy! Nine flounces and hoops in the bargain! Oh, how I should love to'— 'Go to pic-nic on Thursday? Oh, thank you. You don't know how I wo'd love to be present, sir, I am so fond of the exhilarating dance, but father says that'—

'I am truly gratified, my dear young friend, to learn that you are so deeply impressed with the necessity of immediate repentance, and I shall make'—

'Ten yards of gimp for the bosom, and maroon velvet binding for the neck and sleeves, and oh! Emily'—

'The finest baby you ever saw, black eyes and large limbs, six weeks old and weighs'—

'Sixty-one pounds and a quarter to the bushel. None better in the country.—Free from garlic, cockrel, and large grained. I hold it at'—

'Stillopolis, next Saturday. Bob Bothsides, the former Congressman will speak as he says'—

'Ah, Mr. Pepper, you flatter me so! Just see how horribly Kate Willmot is dressed. She will wear yellow, though it makes her look like'—

'Fever and Agy, I believe. They've all been laid up with it, and now the poor man's got'

'The sweetest bonnet I ever saw.—Where did you get it? I must recommend my sister to your'—

'Watermelon patch. Stole every darned one. Some of 'em about half ripe. I swow, I'll shoot 'em if they don't'—

'Go to the White Sulphur. It is the best place in the world ma'am. I've seen some of the most wonderful effects of the waters. Tom Holocaust was cured of'—

'Twenty-five pounds of butter a week. And always get a quarter of a pound, and sometimes'—

'Four eggs, two handsful of flour, a dab of yeast, half tin full of molasses, and it makes'—

'His grey hairs in sorrow to the grave. Oh, it is awful to think how'—

'Close she hangs to his arm. She ought to be ashamed of herself, and never saw him until'—

'William was born 25 years ago last April. I am an old woman now, and the grey hairs makes'—

'Toot! toot! Preaching will now commence,' said the Presiding Elder, and we heard no more.

Respect Old Age,

There, give him all the path. Tread slowly and reverently in his presence — Hush that rude laughter; check that idle jest. See you not upon his temples the snow of many winters? See you not the sunken eye, the bowed form, the thin hand upon whose surface the blue veins stand out like cords? Gone are the beauty and the strength of manhood; and in that faded eye but little light is left, save that of love and kindness. That voice has lost its music, save the soft undertone of affection.

Sit down, young friend, and hear that story of the olden time; and if, in looking backward into the mists of the past, he sometimes forgets—sometimes confounds dates, and incidents, or tells the same old tale, for the 20th time—think over what a vast, vast field his laboring memory wanders Think over what a checkered web of events, thought takes her beaten track down into the depths of years. Oh, the joys and sorrows, the hopes and disappointments, the anxieties, and wrongs, and sufferings he rouses from their dreamy beds, as he fights 'life's battles o'er again,'

"And scenes long lost, of joy and pain,
Come wildering o'er his aged brain."

Standing upon the boundary line between life and the untried future, his feet would fain turn backward into the paths of the past. One moment he longs for rest—the next come back the mocking memories of departed joys. The thorns have dropped silently away amidst the leaves of the roses he gathered in childhood and youth—their beauty and fragrance alone remain.

Oh, you in whose bounding veins young life yet lingers; and you in the full beauty and vigor of manhood, respect the aged! Speak gently, hush the rude laugh, check the idle jest, listen to the wisdom which is the voice of experience. Cheer him with kindly words; encircle him with your strong arm, and lead him as he descends the western hill of life, the shadows deepening into night—the white hairs upon his temple already drifting in the cool breeze which comes up from the valley of death.

Honor the aged that he may crave you his blessings on the threshold of the unknown land. Honor him, and God will raise up for you friends to remove the thorns from the last league of your own life-journey; for the sake of the weary one of the long ago, who wept for your ingratitude, whose bowed form struggled with a weight of care or grief which you might have carried, while you walked carelessly along, intent, upon your own ease and pleasure.

Honor the aged for His sake who was old before the world was—whose life is from everlasting to everlasting.

"Honor him that feebly walketh
With his staff—the white haired sage;
God will curse the wretch that mocketh
Hoary hairs, with slighted age"

It makes us rejoice to think that these two lines fill this column.

The Lesson of the Storm.

Long time the skies had gaily smiled,
No clouds disturbed the ether bright,
Till Nature dozed, like weary child,
And fainted 'neath the excess of light.

Swift moving up the azure plain
Black, threatening clouds were swiftly piled,
Came down the early dashing rain
And flowers that drooped in thirst grew wild.

Again shone out the peaceful blue,
The skies smiled gayly as before
On flowers, that, clothed in vigor new,
Blessed the bleak storm's enlivening power.

It taught a lesson to my heart—
A lesson of endurance high,
To hope, though joys might all depart,
To trust, though darkness veil the sky.

O, thou, who veil'st in grief thy brow,
Whose cheeks are wet with sorrow's rain,
Know that the storm, so bitter now,
Is but to cleanse from earthly stain.

Soon, stronger, braver for its woe,
Thy heart's glad harp in every string,
In numbers musical and low,
Shall bless its God for suffering.

Then ask not for a cloudless sky,
Ask not for an unruffled sea,
But when afflictions cluster nigh,
Rejoice that they are lent to thee.

And shrink not from the driving blast,
But meet it as a brave heart should,
So shalt thou, when Earth's toils are past,
Rest on the bosom of thy God.

Banks and Brokers.

In the midst of a money panic, and of a profusion of slips and circulars volunteering to inform us at what rates, our kind friends who stand behind the counters of a broker's office for the accommodation of the public, are willing to take the risk of an uncertain or at least discredited currency, from off our hands, it may perhaps, be worth while to consider more carefully what relations they sustain to the public and to the banks.

There is undoubtedly a popular prejudice against banks, and as they were once conducted it was not without cause. But that day and that cause has for the most part passed away. The people, and State Legislatures, taught by a former experience, have learned of late, better how to protect the people in this matter, and to require a better security from the banks for the ultimate redemption of their issues.

It is an undoubted fact, notwithstanding all the panic, and discounts that the people are just now imposing upon themselves, to their own discomfort and loss, (and possibly to the annoyance of the brokers, although we don't quite believe that,) that the currency of the country is at this moment in a better condition, and the issues of the banks better secured, than at any time within the last twenty-five years.

A large amount of our bank issues, are so secured by State, and other reliable stocks, that whether they suspend or not, the billholders cannot in any event be subjected to a loss of over ten or fifteen per cent. The issues of our suspended banks at Detroit, for instance, are so secured by Michigan State stocks that even although they should never resume again, as they probably will however, the bill holders must in the end be paid off nearly in full—and so of all the free State Banks of New York, a large portion of Illinois and Wisconsin money, that it is at this moment so difficult for us to use and so, in fact of three-fourths of all the money which goes to make up the circulation of this portion of the country.

Do you ask why then all this panic, discount &c? Why that, do you not see, is for the benefit of our friends the brokers and no one else! It was commenced in Wall street for the sole and simple purpose that they might thereby be able to realize, from five to twenty five per cent, out of the public through a discredited circulation, and it is continued out of Wall street for the same purpose, and the dear people, kind hearted as they always are, and have been, just turn in and do what they can to help the matter, and then bless their stars, that they still have left such kind friends, to help them out of so embarrassing a dilemnea and all that for only five or ten per cent discount. Now this the Brokers can undoubtedly afford, but the question is whether the public can afford it quite so well. Did it never occur to you, when looking at one of those circulars, that there might be something a little fictitious about it, after all? That it might perhaps be a better indication of what amount of shave these financial agents deemed it safe and desirable to ask the public to contribute towards their support, rather than any indication of the real value of the money? Did you ever know a broker who was buying up money of a specie paying bank at a discount, to have any of it to sell if it so happened that you wanted to buy? Not a bit of it. They can do better than that. But they cannot well do better than to buy it it in, so long as they can find a people gullible and stupid enough to sell in that way just for their benefit.

It is true that there is occasionally a bank which is badly, or dishonestly managed and becomes badly broken. But this, is not among the modern banks, nor can it be done under the modern system of banking. State stocks are not repudiated, now a days, and issues secured by State stocks must eventually be paid, let the bank be managed as it may, that is, if the State officers, who hold the stocks and control the issues are even ordinarily honest men.

And nine times out of ten, when a bank is broken, it is the brokers who do it. When specie is worth from five to ten per cent, it is very pretty business to collect in the bills of some conveniently located bank, and draw it out and sell it, and thus instead of allowing the public to enjoy a safe and well secured currency, compel the banks to withdraw that currency from circulation, thus adding to the general embarrassment, but not thereby lessening the revenues of the brokers.

Now we are not disposed to be mealy mouthed about this matter. We do not hesitate to say, that in our opinion, this whole system of Brokerage, as now managed, and used, is an unmitigated nuisance and imposition upon the public. That no man who respects himself and his own common sense, should consent to be dictated to by them, or their circulars, in any respect.

That our merchants and business men from the sea-board to the Rocky Mountains, should insist upon acting wholly independent of them—and either, take money, or refuse to take it, as in their opinion its credit deserves, but especially, and preremptorily to refuse all that class of doubtful currency, for the most part brought into circulation and issued by these same brokers for purposes of discount and speculation; and then not to submit to any discount, beyond a fair and current rate of exchange, upon such as they do take, either to brokers or anybody else.

That a good sound banking currency, well protected and secured should be encouraged, and Brokers taxed, if need be, to prohibition. And lastly, that the banks in justice to themselves, and to the public, should organize general clearance houses, determine fair and equitable rates of exchange, publish their own Bank Note Reporters, and thus save themselves from such needless discredit, and the public, from an unbearable and unmitigated imposition.

As an indication of the effect of hard time, several of the prominent hotel keepers of New York City have resolved to reduce their tariff of board fifty cents a day.

From the London Times, Oct. 14.

A Mysterious Murder in London.

From vestiges of the most imperfect character, and by inferences of the acutest kind, it seems placed beyond doubt that a dreadful murder has disgraced our metropolis, but whether the deed can be brought home to its perpetrators, or whether it will be buried in the obscurity which envelops it, is a question yet remaining to be determined. We can only hope that where, under such difficult conditions of discovery, so much has been brought to light, the rest will not be permanently hidden.

On Friday last, in the gray of the early morning, some lads rowing up the river observed a bundle resting on one of the abutments of Waterloo Bridge. It proved to be a carpet bag, locked and corded, with a considerable portion of the cord hanging in the water. The boys carried off what they considered to be a prize; but when the bag was opened it was found to contain the mutilated fragments of a human body. Twenty peices of what had previously been a living creature were exposed to view with every incident of horror. Limbs had been sawed into bits, flesh had been hacked from the bones, the trunk had been disemboweled and the head was wanting. So complete had been the comminution of the corpse, and the obliteration of all external features of humanity, that it was only by direct conclusions that the sex could be established and yet from these and almost inscrutable data a story of some coherence has already been framed.

The bag contained, besides these portions of the body, a complete suit of apparel, coat, surtout, waistcoat, trowsers, drawers, socks, shirt and undershirt, the hat and shoes alone being not forthcoming. No mark or other means of identification could be found on any of these articles; but they were peirced in various places, as if with a sharp knife or dagger, and they had all been ripped up the back—the overcoat as well as the rest apparently while on the person. The front parts of the dress-too, especially were found saturated with blood. The fragments of the body itself seemed at first to promise little testimony, but under a scrutiny, such as they yielded enough to establish first certainity of crime. A portion of the chest showed a distinct stab or hole, corresponding precisely in position and direction with one of the cuts found in the clothes, and it was proved by the evidence of the divisional surgeon of police that this wound must of necessity have been inflicted during life. The testimony to this important point was positive, clear and sufficient. With equal success was it established that the remains could not represent the relics of any subject employed for purposes of anatomy.—Not a single trace was found of the dissecting knife. "A medical man" says Mr Paynter in his evidence, "must have wanted a body either for the muscles, nerves, arteries or bones. The muscles, nerves and arteries, I can most positively assert, have not been dissected, and the bones have been destroyed." The deduction drawn from the appearance of the fragments extended a little further. The state of the joints showed that the right thigh must have stiffened completely at right angles with the rest of the body, and the right arm had also stiffened with the forearm under, and pointing in the direction of the trunk. It had been observed from the first that the body had been salted or soaked in brine to preserve it, but a certain portion had escaped the action of the antiseptic, and it is judged from this that death must have occured upward of a week before the discovery of the remains. The cuts in the shirt exceeded in number those found upon the body, but this discrepancy was explained by the evidence that the portions of the body which might have displayed these particular wounds were amongst those which were missing.

To this evidence certain additions have been derived from other sources. The clothes found in the bag appeared to be of foreign make, the socks having been pronounced to be undoubtedly of German manufacture, and the shirt collar was obviously intended to be worn turned down over the neck tie, from which circumstance it is reasonably inferred that the deceased person was not a native of this country Here, up to the present time, terminates what may be called the internal evidence of the case: by one incident only are we brought in contact for a moment with those cognizant of the crime. It happened that the toll keeper on duty at Waterloo Bridge on a Thursday evening took especial notice of a woman or a person in woman's apparel, who had passed on to the bridge from the Strand side with a carpet bag in her hand. This bag he assisted her to lift over the toll stile, and observed its pattern so particularly as to be able to identify the article to the best of his belief, with that in which the remains were found. He remarked that the woman appeared agitated, and so much in a hurry that he imagined she was hastening to catch a train at the Waterloo station. Her voice was decidedly masculine, but she seemed only about 5 feet 3 inches in height. To the best of his remembrance she did not come off the bridge again. She passed about 11½ o'clock.

Such are the features, as at present discernible, of this most horrifying case. By the aid of a little latitude of interpretation and conjecture an approximation has been made to the supposed particulars of the crime. That the deceased was murdered with all his clothes on, including his overcoat, appears plain, and it is supposed, from the saturation of the front portions of his apparel with blood, that he lay dead on his face. In this position—the position immediately resulting from the murder—it was conceived that the body stiffened, and it was found neccessary to rip the clothes all up the back before they could be removed from the rigid limbs To prevent the decomposition of the corpse pending the further proceedings, recourse would be had to the process of salting; and at length, when the work of mutilation had been completed, it was attempted to dispose of the remains by dropping them into the river at the end of a rope, so as to avoid a splash. Such is the manner in which the outlines supplied by direct testimony have been filled up by inference or surmise, and though the conclusions may, of course, be erroneous, it is impossible to overlook the detection to which guilt has become liable through one or two fortuitous circumstances. Had another bridge been selected instead of Waterloo bridge, by the bearer of the bag, there would have been no toll taker to depose to the one overt act in this dark transaction, and the fact points to the probability of the scene of the crime having lain in the vicinity Had the bag, again, not lodged on the abutment of the bridge, instead of falling into the water, the portions of the body which it contained might have disappeared, like the rest, and every vestige of the crime have been lost.

There is one incident connected with this investigation which is suggestive of rather alarming conclusions, and to which it is desirable, we think, that attention should be drawn. No sooner was it known in the metropolis that a body had been discovered, admitting possibly of some identification, than application was made by a succession of persons—8 or 9, we are assured, in number—each of whom had lost some relative or friend within the last month, for whose disappearance no reason could be assigned. It would be dreadful to think that heinous guilt could prevail among us undiscovered; nor are we indeed, of opinion that any such conclusion need be accepted. In a population approaching to 3,000,000 it is natural enough that instances of eccentricity or accident should remove individuals now and then from the cognizance of their friends while the foreign extraction apparently attributed to the victim on this occasion, tends of itself, possibly, to withdraw the case from the category of ordinary crimes. On the whole, though it is certainly not agreeable to think that in the present day persons can disappear unaccountably in the metropolis of Britain, we are not disposed to believe that such occurrences need be connected with such outrage or undetected crime. The present example, we feel assured, is an example of its own kind alone, and we devoutly trust that before many days have elapsed we may experience the satisfaction of announcing that jusiice is on the track of the guilty.

Suicide.—On the morning of the 26th of October, a man was found hanging at the mill of Cyrus Williams, in Clay township, in this county. To all appearance the person had hung himself during the night of the 25th. An inquest was held over the body, and nothing could be discovered as to who the deceased was. We here give a brief description of the person as near as we can. He was about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches high, light complexion and light hair—rather thick set—from 25 to 30 years of age. He had 3 warts on the back of the right hand. The jury, on examination of the body, found he had a breach and wore a truss. He had on a black frock coat, light vest, a coarse linen shirt, red flannel under it, heavy cassimere pants, and blue drill overhalls. On the lower part of the bosom of his shirt were the letters, F. B. worked in with red silk and to all appearance, he was a native of Germany.—Ottawa Dem.

The Monster Gun.—The monster gun of the United States corvette Plymouth, weighs 16,000 lbs avoirdupois. It is covered with a coating of vermilion and and beeswax, and therefore has a red, instead of the usual black appearance of a ship's gun. The heavy Dahlgreen guns have 2 vents which facilitate their rapid and safe firing. The weight of each shell they discharge is about 136 lbs. and that of each solid shot 174 lbs. The sound of the shell and shot traversing a distance of three miles, is lost in the enormous space which it traverses. One peculiarity of the Dahlgreen gun is its enormous strength and thickness where the greatest force of the powder is expended. In experiments to test the strength of these guns, one of them had been fired nearly 2,000 times with a large proportion of solid shot without bursting.

General News.

Washington, Oct. 31.

Previous to the election in Kansas Governor Walker received instructions from the Administration, relative to his duty on that subject, and which precluded him from paying the polls, as he recently did in rejecting the returns from the Oxford district. He acted without authority from Washington and clearly violated the instructions sent to him. His conduct is emphatically condemned. There is reason to believe that both Gov. Walker and Secretary Stanton will be removed unless they shall choose to resign.

The amount in the Treasury subject to draft is $9,562,000. The receipts of the week ending on Monday last were, $441,000.

In reply to a postmaster, who complains of being overwhelmed with small change, the 1st Assistant P. M. General, King says, a postmaster is not compelled to receive cents in payment, either of postmen or for stamps, or from any one person at one time, more than thirty cents in 3 cent coin. The P. M. General has appointed 6 route agents to accompany the mails between Philadelphia and Columbus, Ohio, with a view to insure their prompt transmission.

Application was made to-day for the employment of the U. S troops on Wednesday next, to assist if neccessary, with the State authorities of Maryland, for preserving peace at the election in Baltimore; definite action was not taken, though it is highly probable that the request will be refused. Sir Wm. Gore Ouseley is expected to arrive at Washington about the 15th of November, and it is believed that his instructions will be such, as will lead to the adjustment of the Central American question, in a manner entirely satisfactory to the U. S. Government.

Attorney General Black has given an opinion that the Government of the U. S. has ample power, and is, by treaty stipulation, bound to redress the wrongs of the Kansas nation of Indians, and to protest them against unlawful intruders upon their reserved lands.

By the arrival of the Southern mails, we have detailed news from Mexico. The old rumors of the retirement of President Comonfort are again rife. The present government appears to be strongly in the confidence of the people. Senor Gresup, Chief Engineer of the Vera Cruz and Mexico railway, was about to organize a corps in the United States. Alvarez's success has been confirmed. Eighty bandits had been captured at Pepes, and all of them would be shot.

From Texas we learn that Mayor McCullough denies any complicity with Nicaraguan affairs The run on Galveston bank had subsided. The bank continues to redeem its notes, but refused its depositors specie till it could receive news from New Orleans. The News says that the sugar crop in Brazoria was between 1500 and 2000 hhds. Cotton crop in the same county promised a full average. After the first of January, vessels bringing cargoes to the Island, and taking away molasses, will be compelled to pay duty on its tonnage.

It is now ascertained by a specific inquiry that the Reports of last night which were prevailent in unusually reliable and well informed circles of the intention on the part of the Administration, to remove Gov. Walker and Secretary Stanton is without the least foundation, or that either intend resigning. The last dates from either have only come down to the 10th of October.

Another dispatch from Richmond confirms the report of a loan of 3,000 muskets by Gov Wise to Gov. Ligon, of Maryland. Six boxes containing 40 each, passed through this city yesterday. About thirty boxes more arrived this morning and remain at the depot.

Baltimore, Oct. 30.

The Governor was waited on to-day by a number of prominent citizens who urged him to withdraw his proclamation, but he gave no definite answer. A town meeting has been called for to-morrow afternoon.

The Mayor has issued a notice requesting the citizens not to attend the meeting, fearing it may tend to inflame the present excited state of public feeling.

A number of the military officers have called upon the Governor, informing him that the military will not obey their orders, and that most of the Companies were temporarily disbanding.

Democratic politicians are enrolling to offer their services to the Governor as armed citizens, under the military commanders.

The Mayor will issue a proclamation on Monday, proclaiming his arrangements for the preservation of the peace and the protection of voters.

Baltimore, Nov. 1.

Governor Lig a has withdrawn his proclamation calling out the military; and negociations have been going on all day between committees of citizens representing the Mayor and Governor, and finally this evening the committees issued the announcement jointly that they were authorized to state that the Governor being satisfied that the arrongements made by the Mayor for preserving the peace and securing uninterrupted exercise of the rights of suffrage are sufficient, the military will not be made use of. The day has passed without disturbance, though the streets in the vicinity of the Mayor's office and Barnum's Hotel were crowded all the afternoon. Crowds were standing about awiting the result of negociations.

New York, Nov. 2.

The Nebraska correspondent of the Times writes as follows, under the date of Oct. 22d:

News has just reached here, from our frontier Mormon settlement on Roop Fork, Platte river, near the mouth of Beaver river, that some seceders from the Mormon church were fleeing from the Danites of the Salt Lake, reaching that settlement a few days since, bringing news that a large force of Mormon militia, under Brigham Young and H. C. Kimball, were preparing to leave Salt Lake City with provisions for six week's campaign in the mountains, and thus, if possible, to stop the passage of the U. S. troops.

Although the positive destination was secret, yet it was generally supposed that at the pass in the mountains, near Bear River cut off, or at Steeple Rocks the stand would be made, with an almost certainity of whipping out the entire force sent amongst them

Philadelphia, Nov. 2

There was a grand parade of the order of U. M. A. this morning, on the occasion of the dedication of their new Hall.

MOFFAT'S LIFE PILLS AND PHOENIX BITTERS.

For the griping colic, inflamation of the spleen, want of appetite and dyspepsia, these popular medicines may be used with entire confidence in the result. In all liver and bowel complaints the Moffat medicines have never failed of a cure.
Sold by W. B. Moffat, 335 Broadway, N. Y. Taylor & Curtis Agents, Tecumseh.

Rheumatism—Neuralgia.—The agonies of Rheumatism and Neuralgia are among the most acute with which the human frame is ever afflicted, and have heretofore been found the most difficult to remove. Happily a remedy is now discovered by which the most obstinate cases can be immediately cured.—This sovereign remedy is Bragg's Arctic Liniment, for sale by Druggi is generally. It is only necessary for the sufferer to try it, to be assured of its efficacy.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, the world renowned Chemist of New England, is now stopping at the Burnet house in this city. He has been making a tour of the Western States, with his scientific associates, to investigate their remedial productions, or such as he can make remedial. We notice he has been received with marked distinction by our leading citizens of the West and are rejoiced to find they have shown a proper estimate of the man who has perhaps done more for the relief of human ills than any other American.—Cincinnati Journal.

The most skeptical people can be convinced by trial that all the family medicines are not humbug, and that among the thousand of butterfly like here are a few of great merit, and undoubted worth. Of these, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy stands first and foremost among the remedies of the day that can be relied on as a medicine that is all that is reccomended by its proprietors.

It advertises itself on every trial, for there are none who use it but tell their friends to do so, and so it goes from mouth to mouth till all the people of the Union have learned the good of this truly valuable medicine It is recommended with testimonials to prove its virtue for the cure of liver complaints of every kind, from the worst Dyspepsia to a common headache, and is particularly adapted to Jaundice, Deranged Stomach, Bowel Complaints and diseases of children.

One or two doses are said to cure a cold with scarce a failure It is worth a trial for this alone. It is particularly adapted to use of ladies, particularly those of sedentary habits. Some ladies of the highest standing in society have given their certificates of its efficacy, and we say to all who are ailing, try one bottle, and you will never be without it.

Volume VIII.

This issue will close volume seven of the Tecumseh Herald. We flatter ourselves that a number will be seen to be an improvement upon the same into our hands six and it is our intention that months, shall show, at least, tional advance upon the present. We have labored faithfully and diligently, often amid discouragements and deprivations, to do our patrons justice, and at all times, so to do, that it should not be our fault, if they did not find, at the end of the year, that in this respect, at least, they had got the worth of their money. We have had to pay cash promptly for paper, ink, and help, and what we desire and feel that we have a right to ask those to whom we furnish the paper, so many of them as have not yet done so, is that they as promptly refund to us the money which we have thus for six months past been from week to week paying out on their account. To those wishing to commence taking the Herald for the coming year, we will only say, now is the time to do so. The paper is put to you at the lowest possible figure, and the terms are cash in advance. When your subscription expires, it will be discontinued, so you need not borrow any trouble about being put in for a bill that you have not bargained for in this matter.

☞ Mr. Smalledge has opened a new Bakery, one door west of the New Block

☞ Mr. L. M. Mooney has completed his Time Register. It is well adapted to suit the wants of Farmers, Mechanics and Tradesmen. It is the most complicated Register we have ever seen. For sale at all Book Stores.

☞ The new fence around Military Square is a very substantial one. Its cost is about $400.

☞ We noticed at the Marble Shop, a few days since, a beautiful specimen of a double-barreled gun, which was manufactured by Jerry Allen, to the order of R. U. Wright, of Lima, Ind., who, by the by, is a noted sportsman, and is a capital judge of a "Shooting Stick." The cost of this gun when finished, is $75. In our opinion it is hard to beat.

☞ A large amount of Personal Property and Real Estate will be sold at Public Auction, as follows:

John Culbertson, Tecumseh,	" 10.
Jacob Cheever, Ridgeway,	" 11.

"Have you much fish in your bag?" asked a person of a fisherman, who was returning home. "Yes, a good eel," was the slippery reply.

An editor, who was short of travelling funds, sat upon a saw horse for an imaginary journey in the country, and wrote a letter home to his paper.

A VALUABLE CROP.—Two brothers, named Smith, proprietors of a splendid peach orchard near Sacramento, California said to have realized between $60,000 and $70,000 this year, from the sale of peaches.

A lady cowhided a gentleman in the streets of Richmond, a few days ago. It was a new edition of her affections, profusely illustrated with cuts.

"John," said a father to his son one day when he caught him shaving the "down" off his upper lip, "don't throw your shavings without where there are any barefooted boys, for they might get their feet pricked.

If Gen. Walker is so dreadfully anxious to "conquer" somebody, why don't he and Nena go to India? Nena Sahib, at last accounts, was at the head of 100,000 mutineers, expecting soon to be en route for Calcutta.

☞ A proclamation has been issued by the Governor of Maine, fixing on Thursday, the 19th of November, as a day of Thanksgiving.

A Quaker's Letter.

TO THE WATCHMAKER.—I herewith send thee my pocket clock, which greatly standeth in need of thy friendly correction. The last time he was at thy school he was in no way reformed; for I perceive by the index of his face that he is a liar, and the truth is not in him. Examine him therefore, and prove him, I beseech thee, thoroughly, so that thou mayest, being very well acquainted with his inward frame and disposition, draw him from the error of his ways, and teach him the way wherein he should go. It grieves me to think of him, for verily I am of the opinion that his body is corrupted with disease. Cleanse him, therefore; for I will place him for a few days under thy care, and pay for his board as thou requirest. I entreat thee, friend John, that when thou layest the correcting hand upon him, let it be without passion, lest thou shouldst drive him to destruction. Do thou regulate his motions for a time to come, by the motion of the Light that ruleth the day; and when thou findest that he is converted from the error of his ways, do thou send him home, with a just bill of thy charges, drawn up in the spirit of moderation, and it shall be paid to thee, in the root of all evil.

Oak Grove Academy.

The next term of Oak Grove Academy, at Medina, Mich., commences Monday, Nov. 20th, in charge of its present teachers.

SATANIC!—A country exchange says: As our Devil was going home with his sweetheart a few evenings since, she said to him: "John, I fear I shall never get to Heaven!"

"Why?" asked the knight of the inkkeg.

"Because," said she, with a 'melting look,' "because I love the Devil so well!"

☞ A Yankee, boasting of a visit which he had paid to the Queen, clinched his remarks by declaring, "I should have been invited to stay to dinner, but it was washing day."

☞ C. B Stebbins, Esq, late of the Adrian Expositor, has been solicited and accepted the editorial control of the Lansing Republican.

☞ Two murderers were last week received into the State Prison, from Ottawa Co, under sentence of solitary confinement for life. Fifteen days previous they were at large, and considered respectable men. Cause—Liquor. It made quick work with them.

☞ Mr E. Wolverton, editor of the Hudson Saturday Evening News, died at that place on the 9th inst. Mr. W. had published the News about a year, during which time he had won many warm friends in that vicinity, who will mourn his death.

GOING HOME.—It is said that the packets for Europe carry out full loads of passengers—natives of Great Britian and the continent, migrating homeward to escape the hard times here. This step may seem preferable to them now, but in a few months there must be many thousands of laborers thrown out of employ in the old countries, in view of the sudden stoppage of the American trade. Many of these home returning emigrants carry with them considerable means, the result of years of toil and economy. A letter from Newburyport says that quite a number of the Irish population of that section are now returning to Ireland with the money they have saved. Probably this may explain the steady run made on the savings banks in many cities by persons of European nativity.

☞ "The principal avenue of our city," writes a learned friend in Detroit, "has a toll-gate just by the Elmwood Cemetery road. As the cemetery had been laid out some time previous to the construction of the plank road, it was made one of the conditions of the company's charter that all funeral processions should go back and forth free. One day, as Dr. Price, a celebrated physician, stopped to pay his toll, he remarked to the gatekeeper.

"Considering the benevolent character of our profession I think you ought to let us pass free of charge."

"No, no, doctor," the gate keeper readily replied, we couldn't afford that—You send too many dead heads through here as it is.

A coffin (said an Irishman) is the house a man lives in when he is dead.

Punch advises the Gov. of Utah to "go it while he's Young." The advice is sensible, for somebody is Cumming who'll check him.

"Lotteries are illegal, and marriage is the greatest lottery in life." Ergo, it is against the law to commit matrimony.

"Hallo!" said Mr. Rathergreen, "what's this," pointing to the telegraph wire, "a clothes line?" "Yes," replied a friend "here's where they hang the sheet lightning."

☞ These lines so solemn, just fill out the column.

Lenawee County Farmer.

Tecumseh, Michigan, November, 1857.

The Analyses of Soils.

The Genesee Farmer, whose editor is a practical chemist, recently contained an article that shows exactly what may be expected from the analyses of soils. Here it is:

Here is a soil too poor for cultivation. Ten acres of it do not produce grass enough to keep a cow, and the last time it was sown to wheat, it yielded only four bushels per acre. "Now Mr. Chemist, I want you to analyze this soil, and tell me what it lacks to make it produce good crops. Can you afford me the desired information?" Such inquiries are frequently addressed to us. We always reply: "We can make an analysis of your soil, but to be candid, we think it will be of no use to you. It will not show you what your soil needs to make it productive. The analysis may afford you some interesting information—it may point out the presence—but it will not furnish you the information you desire." Our reasons for this advice we will breifly state.

In addition to the four organic elements, oxygen, nitrogen hydrogen and carbon—and of which the atmosphere is the original source—all our commonly cultivated plants contain lime, potash, soda, magnesia, phosphoric and sulphuric acids, silica, and chlorine. When a plant is burned in the open air, the four former are dissapated in the form of carbonic acid, ammonia and water; the 8 latter substances are found in the ashes. They are usually termed "inorganic elements," or soil constituents. Plants can obtain them only through their roots, from the soil. If a soil is destitute of even one of these 8 substances, no agricultural plant will grow on it. All cultivated soils, therefore contain every one of these inorganic substances. If they did not, no plant would grow upon them. All naturally fertile soils contain a full supply of these substances in an available condition, or in such a state that they are rendered available by the ordinary processes of tillage. Poor soils may be unproductive, and even incable of profitable cultivation, from a deficiency of some one or more of these substances—but they are not entirely destitute of any one of them, if capable of producing a blade of grass or a Canada thistle.

It is unecessary, therefore, to resort to chemical analysis to ascertain the presence or absence of any of the inorganic elements of plants. Messrs. Bramble, Thistle & Co. assure us that they are all present in the soil, and their authority on this point cannot be questioned.

If any analysis of a soil, therefore, is of any practical value, it must be in determining not the presence or absence of this or that particular substance, but whether it exists in sufficient quantity for the growth of maximum crops. We think that the most thorough chemical analysis cannot determine this point For instance, we have seen, growing side by side, two crops of turnips. One crop yielded less than seven hundred pounds of bulbs per acre. One soil was evinently too poor to grow turnips, while the other gave a fair crop. Now, what was the difference between these two soils? Simply this: the one had been manured with superphosphate of lime and the other had not. In all other respects obese soils were alike. One acre contained 50 pounds more of phosphoric acid than the other.—Could any chemist in the world have determined by the most rigid analysis which soil contained the extra 50 lbs of phosphoric acid? Let us see. An acre of soil seven inches deep, weighs at least 2,000,000 pounds. Fifty lbs of phospheric acid mixed with it would be one part in 40,000. Such a minute quantity is far beyond the range of quantative analysis. The determination of phosphoric acid in a soil so difficult that a chemist congratulates himself when duplicate analyses of the same soil agree within one part in a thousand. If our friend Dr. Lee should make two analyses of the same soil, and one analysis gave the percentage of phosphoric acid as 0.1, and the other as 0.2, he would consider the analysis a good one, and, taking the mean—say the soil contained 0.15 per cent. of phosphoric acid. This, at least is the usual way. Now, according to one of these analysis, an acre of the soil 7 inches deep, contains 3,000 pounds of phosphoric acid, and according to the other 4,000 pounds. The actual quantity present in the probably lies between these figures, but the exact amount it is impossible to tell, and there is no certainity whether it is nearest to 2,000 or 4,000 pounds per acre. How utterly impossible is it, therefore, to determine the difference between two soils, one of which contains 50 pounds more phosphoric acid than the other, and yet one is poor and the other productive. Admitting that it is sometimes possible to get duplicate analyses to agree within one ten-thousandth, the chemist would still be utterly incapable of telling the difference between these two soils.

These same remarks apply to ammonia. We have seen. growing side by side, two crops of wheat, one yielding 35 bushels per acre and the other 15 bushels. The only differnce between the two soils being that one contained 100 pounds of ammonia per acre more than the other, which had been applied in the form of sulphate and muriate of ammonia. This 100 pounds of ammonia mixed with an acre of soil 7 inches deep would be 1 part in 20,000. We hazard nothing in saying that no chemist could determine so minute a quantity. It is far less difficult to determine the amount of ammonia in a soil than phosphoric acid, but if duplicate analyses agree within one-tenth of 1 per cent (0.1) it is considered good work. In other words, if one analysis showed a soil, when calculated to the acre, to contain 2,000 pounds of ammonia, and the other four thousand pounds, the chemist would think this a very accurate analysis, and. taking the mean put it down at three thousand pounds. It is evident, therefore that the one hundred pounds of ammonia, which changed the comparatively poor soil into an unusually fertile one, could not be detected by the analyst.

Chemists who undertake to prescribe for a sick soil, frequently say: "Your soil, according to analysis, is deficient in potash and soda, and phosphates and ammonia; you should, therefore apply twenty bushels of unleached wood ashes, a bushel of salt, four hundred pounds of the improved superphosphate of lime, and two hundred pounds of the best Peruvian guano.—These will furnish what your soil lacks, &c." Now no honest chemist will claim that he could tell by analysis which part of the field had been so treated and which had not. The facts we have mentioned above show that it is utterly impossible for the most rigid analysis to determine the least difference.

These considerations lead us to the conclusion not only that $5 soil analyses are a great humbug, but that the best soil analyses made are, in the language of Boussingault "more curious than useful."

How to cook Sweet Potatoes.—Boil two large sweet potatoes, rub them through a seive, then add a peice of butter the size of an egg, a little salt, one pint of buttermilk, a tea cup of sugar, a table spoonful of ginger, a tea spoonful of saleratus, dissolved in warm water. Bake in an earthen dish. Serve up cold, with cream.

Varnish for Leather.—Take two parts by weight of resin, and one of India rubber and beat them in an earthenware vessel until they are fusel together, after which they should be stirred until they are quite cold; a little broiled linseed oil may be added while the materials are hot.

ONE DOLLAR
WILL BUY

ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public, namely DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REMEDY, that acts as a Cathartic and/or mild and more effectual than any other medicine known. It is not only a Cathartic, but a lower regulating tone on the bowels to expel its morbid matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter, thus accomplishing two purposes at once, without any of the painful feeling experienced in the operations of most Cathartics. It strengthens the system at the same time that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects.

Though possessing rare medical powers, these Gums have been but little known to Physicians and never used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the Invigorator which met with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known in its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure Liver Complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged liver is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver, and as a proof that the Invigorator relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses on retiring, and it assists nature in her operations. By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work as regularly as clock work.

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the Invigorator, which corrects all acidity and sourness of the stomach.

For an over-loaded stomach it has no equal as it relieves all oppressive or uneasy feeling after eating heartily. For a family medicine generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to be recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints and all diseases arising from a Diseased Liver; testimonials of so many of our Physicians in favor, induced us to try it, and now convinced that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to Dyspeptics, for it made a complete cure the first bottle was taken, and no we eat anything edible without trouble, while before using but the lightest food would digest, and that gave pain. Now what more we want to say to all our readers is, if Liver Complaints or Dyspepsia trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.—State Fact.

We take a pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER, and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty, and thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of diseases incident to children, as DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR; nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it, for it acts as a Cathartic so mildly and gently, and seems to renovate the system so thoroughly that we think we are doing a service to all in advising them, when they need medicine, to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where great benefit has been received in diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels, where all other remedies failed to give relief. It has become so useful in our family that we will not be without it.—Jacksonville, Ills. Republican.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Dear Sir—I have been troubled with the worst headache any body can have by a loss of your Pills. If anyone is ailing, from a foul stomach, they cleanse at once. If they will state others as they see, the facts worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PEIRCE.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints.

Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. Nov. 26, 1856.

Sir: I have used your Pills in my general practice ever since you made them, and cannot know they are the best cathartic we employ. They are a blessing to the afflicted, acting on the liver as only they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious ease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO HALL, M.D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

Dr. Ayer: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, or any of the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

Warsaw, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1856.

Dear Sir: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M.D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Mo. 4, 1856.

Dr. Ayer, Your Pills are the paragon of all cathartics for the cure of all those diseases originating in impurities of the blood. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and on her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORRIDITH.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

Pulaski House, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 5, 1856.

Honored Sir: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

Vincent Chambers, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec., 1855.

Dr. Ayer: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that has afflicted me for years.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred complaints, requiring an active purge, they are a excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and as a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Indigestion, and even Deafness and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which though a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences following its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of the virtues of this article. Throughout every town, and almost every family in the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, for so many families in any civilized country to this constantly furnish some personal experience of its effects; and few persons in communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and various serious diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the Cherry Pectoral will save more lives by preventing consumption if prevent than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable, and do not neglect them until no human skill can master the lingering cough or deep-seated cancer that, fastened on the vitals, eats away its victim. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and they know too the virtues of this remedy, we need say no more than to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who use it the best agent which our skill can furnish for the cure of King and Peasant.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA.

Our home is a vine-wreathed cottage,
Our life a sunshiny walk
Of toil at morning and noening,
Of rest at the twilight talk;
We have neither gold nor silver
To store in a secret hoard;
We've not a rare or costly thing
To garnish our peasant board;
But we're over the gayest, happiest train
In all old Basleyford.

The King rides by in his chariot,
With his pages robed in blue—
The glitt'ring pomp of the cortege
Is a pleasant thing to view;
The ladies nod their coronets,
And smile with a haughty scorn,
As out to the hunt in the morning,
They go while the dew's on the thorn;
But I'd not exchange my life-lot
With that of the noblest born!

What reck we, love, of the flashes
That fall from the lamps of gold,
Hung over the palace glories
With gorgeous splendor cold?
What value to us the wine-stream,
Brimming red o'er the silver cup?
We've the lamps of Heav'n to look upon,
That our Father's hand set up!
And the crystal water of God's own love,
When we break our bread to sup.

The King and his jewelled ladies,
List mass in a chapel grand,
Drapered in silk and damask
From many a fine old land;
They kneel in the vast Cathedral
Whose dome is the blue arched skies,
And the soft music 'neath their feet,
Is made of violets' eyes,
And the thunder o' the mighty organ-voice
That swells in the symphonies.

The King is lord of the country;
His will the law of the land;
Cities rise, and fall at his pleasure,
And life goes out at his hand;
But we have a nobler empire;
We rule with a mightier away;
We've the rich, ripe, burning bliss-world
Of Love, all the blessed way;
The Eden-home of life's glory,
Love's rainbow-garlanded day!

The King may joy in his greatness,
Rejoice in his banquet feast;
Our love is grand as the splendor
That breaks o'er the drowsy East!
We have God-ward hopes to cheer us,
High yearning dreams divine;
We yield up our life's rich fullness
On the altar of Love's dear shrine!
If there's peace in this world of beauty
It dwells in my heart and thine.

FARMINGTON, Strafford Co., N. H.

A Little too Punctual.

A STEAMBOAT SKETCH.

The hour was approaching for the departure of the New Haven steamboat from her berth at New York, and the usual crowd of passengers, and friends of passengers, news boys, fruit venders, cabmen and dock-loafers, were assembled on and about the boat. We were gazing at the motley group, from the foot of a promenade deck stairs, when our attention was attracted by the singular action of a tall, brown Yankee, in an immense wool hat, chocolate colored coat and pantaloons, and a fancy vest. He stood near the starboard paddle-box, and scrutinized sharply every female that came on board, every now and then consulting an enormous bull's eye watch, which he raised from the depths of a capacious fob, by means of a powerful steel chain. After mounting guard in this manner, he dashed furiously down the gang plank and up the wharf, re-appearing on board almost instantaneously, with a flushed face, expressing the most intense anxiety. This series of operations he performed several times, after which he rushed about the boat, wildly and hopelessly, ejaculating,

"What's the time er day? Wonder if my repeater's fast? Whar's the cap'n? whar's the steward? whar's the mate? whar's the boss that owns this ship?

"What's the matter, sir?" we ventured to ask him when he stypped.

"Hain't seen nothin' of a gal in a blue sun bonnet, with a white Canton crape shawl (cost $15,) pink gown and brown boots, eh: come aboard while I was looking for the cap'n at the pint end of the ship—have ye?"

"No such person has come aboard."

"Tormented lightnin', she's my wife!" he screamed; "married yesterday. Al her trunks and mine are aboard, under a pile of baggage as tall as a Connecticut steeple. The darned black nigger says he can't hand it out, and I won't leave my baggage anyhow. My wife, only think on't, was to come on board at half-past four, and here it's most five. What's become of her? She can't have eloped You don't think she's been abducted, do yer, mister? Speak! answer! won't ye! O! I'm ravin' distracted! What are they ringing that bell for? Is the ship afire?"

'It is the signal for departure, the first bell. The second will be rung in four minutes.'

'Gracious! you don't say so? Whar's the captain?'

'There he is, the gentleman in the blue coat.'

'The Yankee darted to the captain's side.

"Cap'n stop the ship for ten minutes, won't ye?"

Can't do it, sir."

"But ye must, I tell you. I'll pay you for it. How much will ye take?"

"I could not do it."

"Cap'n, I'll give ye tew dollars," gasped the Yankee.

The captain shook his head.

"I'll give you five dollars and a half—and a half!—and a half!—and a half!" he kept repeating, dancing about in his agony.

"The boat starts at five precisely," said the captain shortly, and turned away.

"O! you stony-hearted heathin!" murmured the Yankee, almost bursting into tears. "Partin' man and wife, and we just married."

At this moment the huge paddle wheels began to paw the water, and the walking beam descended heavily, shaking the huge fabric to her center. All who were going to New Haven went ashore. The hands began to haul in the gang-plank, the fasts were already cast loose.

"Leggo the plank," roared the Yankee collaring one of the hands. "Drop it like a hot potato, or I'll heave ye into the dock."

"Yo, yo!" shouted the men in chorus, as they heaved on the gangway.

"Shut up, you braying donkeys!" yelled the maddened Yankee, "or there'll be an ugly spot of work."

But the plank was got aboard, and the boat plashed past the pier.

In an instant the Yankee pulled off his coat, flung his hat beside it on the deck, and rushed wildly at the guard.

"Are you drunk or crazy," cried a passenger seizing him.

"I'm going to fling myself into the dock, and swim ashore," cried the Yankee. "I mustn't leave Sally Ann alone in New York City. You may divide the baggage among you. Let me go, I can swim."

He struggled so furiously that the consequences of his rashness might have been fatal, had not a sudden apparition changed his purpose. A very pretty young woman in a blue bonnet, white Canton crape shawl, pink dress and brown boots, came towards him.

The big brown Yankee uttered one stentorian shout of "Sally Ann!" clasped her in his arms in spite of her struggling, and kissed her heartily, right before all the passengers.

"Where did you come from?" he inquired.

"From the ladies' cabin," answered the bride. 'You told me half-past four, but I thought I'd make sure and come at four."

"A little too punctual!" said the Yankee. "But it's all right now. I don't care about stopping Come nigh losing the passage money and baggage—but it's all right now. Go ahead, steamboat!—Rosin up, fireman. Darn the expense!"

When the sun set, the loving couple were seen seated on the upper deck, the big brown Yankee's arm encircling the slender waist of the young woman in blue bonnet and pink dress.

We believe they reached their destination safe and sound.

BROTHER JONATHAN AND JOHN BULL.—An Englishman in favor of his own country said to Dr. Thompson:

"You have no coal and it is this that gives England its manufacturing importance."

The doctor replied.

"We are not entirely destitute of coal; we have one small bed called the coal field of Illinois, which is larger than the whole of England. If you will wait till we scoop it out, and then bring your island over we will drop in and annex you!"

"Ah! but you have no nobility," said he.

The doctor replied.

"We are a nation of Kings," then with all the pompousness he could assume, he made a bow and said, "You are now in company with one of the royal family of the United States of America."

☞ "Pray Miss C.," said a gentleman the other evening, 'why are the ladies so fond of officers?"

"How stupid" replied Miss C., 'is it not perfectly proper and natural that a young lady should like a good offi-cer sir."

The Black Sables.

MESSRS. EDITORS: I have a good story to tell you, and you must read me patiently to the end, in order that you too may enjoy what has made my poor sides ache with laughter, as they have not done for many a day. You remember that pretty little Mrs. L., who you met here one day last summer. Did I, or did I not tell you what a perfect witch she is, and how she contrives to twist her husband and everybody around her finger almost without an effort? Well, she came dancing in yesterday morning, wearing the most superb set of sables—they must have cost a little fortune. No one but myself would have seen them, for the bright face above them was radiant with beauty and gladness, and would have riveted the gaze of the cynic in creation But I have been persecuting T. for a set of Genin's ermines, and of course my eye fell at once upon the sables, and I exclaimed—"You extravagant creature! Where did you get them?"

"Extravagant?" said she; 'not a bit of him. Where did I get them? My husband, of course. See what beauties they are! They must have cost an immensity, —poor fellow. But then he had to get them.'

'Because you fascinated him?' said I.

'No, indeed, I won them on election.'

'On the election! How? you havn't certainly, been betting on Buchanan?'

'Not I—I wouldn't have bet a pin on him, though they say he has gained the day. I'll tell you all about it, but first let me get off this thing from my neck—your parlor's like an oven.'

So saying, she pitched her cape at the cat, and laughing to see how the creature's back rose at the insult, began thus. 'You know how George and I have fought about this election, he for Fillmore and I for Fremont, and how many times he has tried to silence me, by saying that 'women know nothing of politics.' which, by the way, I don't in the least, believe. Do look at the cat!'

'Never mind the cat—go on with your story.'

'Yes, certainly, where was I? O, yes Well, as I said we did everything but de vour each other. It was such a mortification to me to have him vote for one who would 'stoop to conquer,' as Fillmore has done. So one day I said, well I shan't let you vote. I shall keep you at home. He laughed heartily, and replied:

'That's more than you can do, my dear.'

'Will you give me leave to try?'

'Yes, and more. I'll promise you a set of sables, if I don't cast my vote for Fillmore on the fourth of November.'

'Honetly and truly?'

'He promised; 'yes.' That was two weeks before election—just look at the cat —here, puss, puss.' It was plain that she never would get through her story while the cat remained in the room, so I picked up pussy, without saying a word, and put her out.

'That means go on, I suppose,' laughed Sophie. "Well, as I said before, this was two weeks before the fourth, and from that time I didn't open my lips to George upon the subject. The next day the T.'s came to make us a visit, and our time was so completing occupied with catering for their amusement that the election was scarcely alluded to, and as for the bet, why, it seemed quite forgotten. But you may be sure that my brain was busy enough, revolving ways and means to win the sables. I whispered the secret to the T.'s, who entered into my feelings entirely, and no wonder, for one of them has no furs at all, and the other carries a muff, which she declares is seven generations old.—We concluded to invite company for Monday evening, and so on the morning of that day we drove around among our sympathising, that is our Fremont, friends and neighbors, and gathered up as many as we could get at conveniently. In the evening we mustered twenty, ourselves included, all on tiptoe to dance till morning, if necessary, to the success of our plans. George, who dearly loved merry-making, was delighted at the prospect of a romp, though he wished I had deferred it till after the election, when it would serve as a celebration of the approaching Fillmore victory.'

Here I interrupted Sophie, to tell her how ridiculous such an idea was, and I added that I thought her husband knew better. She flew at me in a minute.

'There, now, don't laugh at my husband—that's my privilege alone, madam.'

I was still as a mouse, and she went on.

'But to make a long story and a long night short as possible, we danced till four o'clock in the morning when I told George that if he wanted to be in town early he had better retire. He took the hint, and before many minutes was sleeping like a top. I crept up to his room and quietly closed the shutters outside and in, drawing down the curtains till it was dark as Erebus. Believe it or not, as you please, the creature slept till four in the afternoon! We kept the house as quiet as possible, and about 5 o'clock I had the table set as if for breakfast, and went up to call him. He yawned and asked the time.—'Quite late,' I said, and added, 'do come down soon, for the girls and I are hungry.' Ere long he made his appearance in the breakfast room, bowing 'good morning' all round, we meantime trying our best to look demure as so many nuns. I poured out his coffee, which he was quite witty over, declaring, as he handed his cup to have it replenished; that it was Pill-more coffee to a certainty; upon which we screamed with laughter, glad of any excuse to give vent to our pent-up amusement. It grew darker and darker, till finally we could scarcely see. George rose, and walking to the window said he thought we should have a severe storm. Then he called us to look 'what a strange light there was in the west.' Now, I had never thought of the sun, and, if I had, I couldn't have kept it from setting, you know; so I marvelled and wondered, and suggested somebody's barn on fire, or some other body's hay stack, anything that would keep him loitering and gazing to pass away time. We watched the light till it faded away, and just as George turned from the window, saying that he had never known so dark a day, the door opened, and little Harry came bounding in. He ran to his father, and put up his lips for a kiss, saying,

'Dood night, papa.'

'Dood morning, you mean, little fellow,' said George, laughing.

'No, no, dood night,' persisted the child, nursy put Harry to bed.'

A light broke in upon my husband's brain. He turned, and seized me by both hands, said:

'Is it true Sophie?'

'You've seen the sun set,' I replied, 'now you owe me a set of sables.'

You never saw a man so utterly discomforted as George. It was quite too late for him to attempt to reach town before the closing of the polls. I felt so sorry for his disappointment, that I wished in my heart that all the sables were in the Red Sea, and the tears filled my eyes in spite of me. He saw what was passing in my mind, and drawing me to him, kissed me, before them all, I never was so ashamed!

'Never mind, Sophie,' said he, 'it's all fair and square; you've won honestly, and admirably too.'

The next day he brought me these sables, which are really superb, just feel that cuff.'

'Yes, I see; but didn't he ask you how you made him sleep so long?'

'Certainly he did.'

'And what did you tell him?'

'That I put morphene into his chicken salad!'

A Cool, Self-Possessed Wife.

In one of the interior towns in Vermont, an aged widower of parsimonious ideas, recently married an ancient maiden who likes to expend a larger amount of her husband's worldly goods than he is willing to see pass from his possession.—Even before the honey moon waxed pale there was strife between them, and one night after they had retired to rest, Mr. F. commenced his usual lecture on extravagance. She suffered in silence for a short time, and then retorted so bitterly that Mr. F. declared that he would go to the attic and sleep alone, for no rest was to be obtained by her side. He sprang from his bed and opening the door, which in his rage he thought led to the chamber, took one step forward, and the next instant he was rolling down the cellar stairs at railroad speed. For a few moments he was stunned, but at length he gathered up his bruised form, groaned and had the satisfaction of hearing his wife call from her bed, in a sarcastic tone, 'well Mr. F., have you had a good nap?'

Since that eventful night Mr F. has grown more prodigal, and neighbors wonder at the change in him, but his wife does not.

The Coming Winter.

The premonitions of a long, cold winter are already upon us, and hundreds of families are without the slightest preparation for its rigors. They must have employment at such prices as will support them, or, failing in that, they must choose between beggary, robbery and starvation. That the first, and even the second alternative will be resorted to by many, who, under other circumstances, would shrink from either, as from a pestilence, there can be no question. Some unable to bend their proud natures so much as to ask for assistance, and too ugwright to commit a crime, will yield themselves up to their fate and suffer—perhaps die. In proportion to our population, there is probably no other city with so few who have been thrown out of employment. This is owing probably, to the limited number of manufacturing establishments; and to the cheering fact that we have felt the pressure of the financial storm, that has swept over the country, less than other cities; yet we have enough that are needy, and soon we shall hear the wail of despairing women and the pitiful cry of half famished children, calling for charity.

The following extract, from the Chicago Press, is applicable to this city, and we reccommend it to the consideration of all:

"The best kind of charity, where it is possible is to give employment. It is not only the best, but the most acceptable, to such as are worthy objects of assistance. But when every kind of business is in process of curtailment, and scores of laborers are being discharged, how is this to be done? This is a question of great importance, and we make the following suggestions to both employers and employees, as a partial answer.

1 Let employers make no compulsory discharges because of the pressure. The great object being to get safely through the winter. Let the employer notify his employees as to the amount he can afford to pay weekly for carrying on his establishment, and what will be the share of each man; then let the employees decide whether they will accept it or not as equivalent for their labor. For example, if an establishment can pay $150 per week for labor, it would be far better to divide the sum among 15 necessitous men, each of whom might support his family with his proportion of it, than to pay it to 10, leaving the remaining 5 unemployed. It would be still better to divide it among 20. A proposition of this character, made in good faith and for the purpose set forth would meet the appropriation of every reasonable laborer. If objection, however should be made by any, let that person understand that he is at liberty to seek employment elsewhere, and that the vacancy will be filled by some one who will be glad to get it.

2 Let all employees put their family expenditures upon a scale of the most rigid economy, and call upon their employers at the end of each week for only so much of their wages as will meet their necessary expenses, agreeing to let the remainder go over until the revival of business in the spring. This course will induce our manufacturing and all other establishments that give employment, to increase rather than diminish their force of laborers through the winter, and thus diminish the number of the unemployed and the destitute.

There must be also a reduction in the price of rents, and all the necessaries of life. When flour is selling for $4.62½ per barrel, Bread should be cheap. much cheaper than it is at the baker shops. and flour itself should be sold to the consumer much less than it is. To effect this, let families club together and buy in quantities, and save the retailer's commission. When beef cattle are bought at three cents per pound and pork for five cents dressed, our butchers should sell at prices corresponding, somewhat, with the cost; and so with all articles of pure necessity.

Wit Contest Between Father and Son.

Sheridan had a great distaste to anything like metaphysical discussions, whereas his son Tom had a great liking for them. Tom one day tried to discuss with his father the doctrine of Necessity.—'Pray, my good father,' said he, 'did you ever do anything in a state of perfect indifference, without motive of some kind or other?' Sheridan, who knew what was coming and by no means relishing such subjects even from Tom, or any one else, said, 'Yes, indeed.' 'What! total indifference—total, entire, through indifference? Well, then, my dear father, tell me, what it is you can do with (mind) total, entire, indifference?' 'Why listen to you, Tom,' said Sheridan. The rebuff as Tom told a friend, so disconcerted him, that he never forgot it, nor had ever again troubled his father with any metaphysics.

A Reverie.

In moments of joy, when the spirits are flowing,
How memory delights to waft'er away!
And fancy to paint, in colors bright glowing,
The bright hours of bliss, that roll'on our day.

But where are they now? they have gone o'er the wold,
With soft'ning of fortune, in homely contrasts,
And the memory of friends, graven charts in the mould,
That floats with enchantment the deep feeling mind.

The gay notes of mirth fall quickly are fled,
For a pleasure more solemn and deeper by far;
The pleasing communion with spirits that are sped,
Which nothing of Earth for a Season may mar.

The spirits of those, whom we saved in their lives,
From Heaven's bright dwelling in radiance descending;
The victim of death in glory survives,
And a moment we list to the voice of a FRIEND.

The sorrows of Earth for a time are forgot,
Amid the pure rapture of seasons like these,
And the grief and the care that belong to our lot,
Die softly away into calmness and peace.

Dead Letters.

During the last quarter, $12,655 was received in about 2,200 letters at the dead letter office. Not quite $50,000 a year is generally thus received in about 10,000 letters, or about, on an average, $5 a letter. Of this it is calculated that nine-tenths are returned to the sender. The method of operation at the dead letter office is probably well known. A confidential clerk opens the letters merely to see whether there is any money in them, without reading a word. If no money appears they are packed away and burnt. But if there is any sum, or any valuable, however trifling, another clerk simply takes note of the writer's name, and encloses the whole back to him. This delicacy of examination is in marked contrast with the official tampering which is known to the post offices of other governments' and so far as our system goes, it is faultless.

But it is a question whether the return of all letters would not be a good plan, and worth more than the trouble it might require. A valuable letter, in every sense of the word, may have no money in it, for it may convey information equivalent to hundreds of five dollar letters. Again, though the value is not susceptible of pecuniary estimate, it might be priceless to the feelings of the receiver. The whole question is probably a difficult one; but when we think of the enormous destruction of the warm and living correspondence of the country at the so-called "dead letter" office—and reflect that the post office system is wholly for the benefit and enjoyment of the people—we do feel that all possible improvement in the system ought to be adopted. No other department of government comes so near "the hearts and homes" of our people as the Post Office department, and while we rejoice in its present admirable condition, we trust that progress will always be its watchword. Boston Journal.

Michigan Currency.

Macomb county bank will probably resume specie payment at the end of the sixty day's suspension. Farmers' and Mechanics' and Peninsular are worth 80 cents on the dollar; at least that is what their stock sold for lately. They are secured by State stocks, and when they become par the injunctions will be removed and they will resume. Brokers are reaping a fine little harvest from their suspension. They give only 60 cents for their currency although it is apparent that the money is really worth much more. We would advise our friends not to sacrifice to much on what they have in their hands as the bills will ultimately be par, or nearly so. Michigan Insurance has also suspended; but is still current—more from the effort of Detroit men to make it so than from any real strength in the institution. We are inclined to believe that it is all a sham about her being unable to pay specie because the New York banks are unable to pay specie. She is better able to pay specie now than before—if she had it. We are inclined to think that she is down, never to come up again. Her charter soon expires.

Tecumseh weathers the storm nobly. She has not failed to redeem with specie, an hour since the crisis began. Notwithstanding the kicks, and blows and cuffs given her by these same Detroit banks she has lived to see them trail in the dust.—When the crisis began she had five times as much circulation as Macomb, well nigh as much as any of the Detroit bank and still she is upright, has not failed to meet all her engagements, and will come out the only reliable, the only specie paying bank in the State. Facts are stern things, and the fact that Tecumseh has had a hard fight against newspapers brokers and bankers, ever since her entrance upon the financial field, and that she has triumphed, and still triumphs over all, is conclusive evidence, to our minds, that those at her head are soun', practica', careful men, and that she is deserving of our confidence.—Monroe Commercial.

PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency, Kinsley S. Bingham, Governor of the State of Michigan.

In conformity with a long established custom I have thought proper to designate, and do by these presents appoint Thursday, the 26th day of November next, as a day of public and general thanksgiving and prayer to Almighty God.

I cordially invite the good people of this State, to assemble in their several places of public worship on that day, and unite in a humble acknowledgement of his goodness, which has crowned another year with propitious seasons, with plenteous harvests and with peaceful habitations. Let us be thankful that pestilence and famine have been averted, that an unusual degree of health has prevailed, and that an abundance of food has been stored against the coming winter for man and beast. Let us humbly beseech his blessing upon our labors, and that in this great mercy He was no other events, as will promote the happiness and prosperity of our people, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto signed my name and caused the seal of the State to be affixed at Lansing, this twenty-sixth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, and of the Independence of the United States the eighty-second.

School Houses and Schools.

As the season of the year again approaches for the commencemeot of our winter Schools throughout the country, we do not know that we can better subserve the public interest in our present issue, than by calling public attention to some of the requisites pertaining to their successful operation.

The teachers are for the most part employed, we shall therefore say nothing with regard to that matter.

Let the School Houses be thoroughly repaired, if they need it, before the School commences. You cannot afford to waste the time of your teacher, nor of your children, in stuffing old hats into broken windows, mending leaky stoves, or clearing out filthy rooms, after the time comes when they should be at study. Let the rooms be ventilated by letting down the windows from the top, and so save both the unwholesome breathing of bad air, and the taking of severe colds, so common in our winter schools. Have the windows curtained, prepare good well-seasoned wood for the stoves, and make everything neat and comfortable, as you would desire the health and comfort of your children and yourselves to be provided for at home.

See that your children are well supplied with books. A most miserable economy is sometimes practised by parents in this respect. What would you think of a neighbor who should hire a man, at great expense, to work on the farm or in the woods, and yet because of the additional expense, refuse to furnish him with the tools necessary for that work. Would you not say that he was a fool or a madman? And yet this is precisely the course many parents pursue with regard to their children's books. You cannot afford so to waste their precious time. You have no right to do so, if you can by any honest means, better subserve their welfare in this respect. There should also be a uniformity of books in the school, and it is the duty of the school board to give attention to this matter, and not leave it to every new teacher to change the books according to his fancy, but at serious and unnecessary expense to the school.

And above all, before the school commences, determine among yourselves, and within yourselves, that it shall be well disciplined and controlled, or at least that if it is not so, it shall not be your fault. That the authority of the teacher shall in all proper ways, and to the extent of the law, (which gives him the same authority over the pupil at school, for the purpose of an educational training, that it does to the parent at home for the purpose of family discipline,) be fully and unequivocally sustained.

That, no matter what the circumstances may be, you will not consent to indulge in yourself, nor permit on the part of others, any individual interference, or dictation with respect to the management or discipline of the School, but leave these matters where they properly belong, with the teacher, and if advice or suggestion seems to be necessary, with the board.—Do this before it becomes a personal matter, or anybody claims to be individually aggrieved, and every one will then see that it is best and right. Do it promptly and thoroughly, and rest assured all jarring, discord and insubordination will cease longer to disturb the harmony, and usefulness of your school, but quiet, industry and success will prevail instead.

Go where you will, and it is from the ungoverned violence and selfishness of parents, and not the children, that insubordination arises, and 'tis there if at all, that it must be checked. If an unlovely, unruly child receives no countenance and sympathy at home, in his turbulence and mis-doing, he will not long continue to disturb the peace and harmony of the School. But if the darling is told how much he is injured and abused, every time he pours his hyperbolical complaints into the willing ear of a sympathizing parent, he is not likely soon to submit to wholesome control anywhere, but will in all probability grow up to be to society, what he is to the school, a nuisance and a pest, and is very likely to see the day, when he will find the strong arm of the law, more harsh and unrelenting, than his severest teacher in school, ever thought of being.

Wood-Choppers Fight in Tennessee.

A most sanguinary and fatal rencontre occurred about 18 miles north of Memphis, in Shelby County, in the Mississippi River bottom, on Monday last, between two wood-choppers (one whom was named Chambers) on one side, and two men, named Meriwether and Slaughter, on the other, which resulted in the instant death of Slaughter and the mortal wounding of Meriwether and one of the wood-choppers.

It seems that some time ago the two wood-choppers had a trading flat-boat on the point of being wrecked when Slaughter went to their rescue, and assisted them very materially in saving their effects. During his efforts in their behalf he lost his coat and hat, and the wood-choppers, as Slaughter said, gave him a coat and hat to replace them.—Subsequently the wood-choppers called upon Slaughter to pay for the coat and hat.—Slaughter refused; and out of this difference the whole difficulty grew.

On Monday morning last, after the difficulty had been brewing some time, Slaughter and Meriwether went into the bottom where the wood choppers were at work, for the purpose, as Meriwether avers, of attempting an amicable settlement. They, however, went armed—Slaughter with a shot gun and revolver, and Meriwether with a shot-gun alone. Meriwether was also attended by a fierce dog which ably seconded him in the affray.

Soon after their arrival at the place where the wood choppers were at work, the fight commenced by the latter, who advanced upon their antagonists with drawn axes. Slaughter commenced firing with his revolver, but before a single ball took effect, one of the wood-choppers clove him down, splitting his skull wide open. They then doubled teams upon Meriwether, who fired the whole load of his shot-gun into the bowels of one of them—of course fatally wounding, but not disabling him. His gun having but one barrel, and finding himself with no adequate weapon to oppose the axes of the advancing wood-choppers, Meriwether turned to retreat, but in doing so stumbling over a log and fell.—The wood-choppers then pounced upon him and hacked and hewed him about the head and breast most fearfully. They got Slaughter's gun and attempted to fire the whole load in his face, but fortunately it missed fire. The man whose bowels Meriwether had shot out, jumped upon him while he was down and stamped repeatedly upon his breast, the blood flowing down from his wound the while in torrents upon his prostrate victim. In the meantime, Meriwether's dog came to the rescue of his master so savagely that the wood-choppers were fain to resist for a moment, during which diversion Meriwether managed to crawl out of sight; and after lying out all night in the bottom, attended by his faithful dog, finally dragged himself home, where, at 11 o'clock on Wedesday last, he was thought to be in a dying condition.

The Slave Trade at Havana.

A letter from a gentleman in Havana makes the following remarks, in regard to an African Prince, who was seized on the coast of Africa, and brought to Cuba, and there landed as a common slave:

Among the negroes landed in this port from the slave schooner Villanueva was the eldest son of one of the African princes. It seems that he had been sent by his father to the factory to deliver the slaves, and while there was induced to visit the schooner. The captain, it seems, was no more scrupulous than others of the same school, and considered that the prince's fine physical appearance would be a good recommendation to a Cuban planter, and without further ceremony sent him below to keep company with his father's captives. When landed here he began to talk the French and Portuguese languages to all whom he saw, complaining bitterly of his sad fate. After a few days he found means to get loose from his master's house, and, in company with a fellow countryman, he proceeded to the Real Audiencia, and there demanded in pretty good French, his liberty and rights as the first-born of Congo. An examination was held, and conclusive evidence produce of the truth of the African's story. He appeared to know the names of the captain, mates and supercargo; but was told that enough proofs had been adduced to identify him as one of the Villanueva's cargo. He has been sent to the deposit of the "Emancipados," where he will be provided with a master for eight or more years, according to the honesty of the Captain-General and his subordinates. I wonder that Concha, who pretends to be such an ardent supporter of regal blood and its prerogatives, does not receive him with the same honors that he would pay to one of the petty German Princes, who probably has no better right to his titles than this wild African. I had the pleasure of seeing him one evening last week at the "Deposito," and he appeared to be contented, no doubt having been persuaded that he would be sent back to his native land. His body is tatooed and marked in all the peculiarities of the African style. The negroes manifested the most marked deference for him, and looked upon him as their chief. The keeper informed me that he was quite an intelligent young man, and was employed by his father in bartering his prisoners of war with the whites. Several of the Judges of the Supreme Court have displayed unusual interest in his behalf, and I should not be at all surprised if he were sent back to Africa.

CURIOUS ESCAPE.—The stage between Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids is a 4 horse post coach, and during the severe storm of Tuesday, met with a perilous accident. The driver, Philip Patter, discovered, too late to avoid it, that a tree had been wrenched from the soil by the gale, and was falling across the road. Before he could give any alarm or clear the danger, it came crashing down on his team, striking the wheel horses and crushing them beneath it. One of them was killed itstantly, and the other died in 20 minutes. The leaders were not touched and took to their heels. The stage was full of passengers but no one was hurt, and no injury done to the stage, except the breaking of the tongue.

They marched about the city in procession, carrying a banner on which was inscribed, "We want work." This demonstration was not so numerous or noisy and threatening as that of yesterday.

TRENTON, N. J. Nov. 9.

The despatch of Saturday, from this place, gave an exaggerated account of the distress among the working classes. It is not correct that 3,000 people are likely to starve. Only about 200 are out of work and a good feeling prevails among the citizens, and all calls of distress will be promptly met.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.

The hungry mob are getting turbulent, and fears are entertained of an outbreak. They gathered in front of the City Hall to-day, calling the mayor a humbug and threatening to drag him from his office. A squad of 50 Metropolitan police was sent for when the crowd dispersed. At three o'clock the gates of the City Hall were closed and guarded, in consequence of certain threats thrown out by the mob.

Assistant Treasurer Cisco has telegraphed to Washington for authority to use the government troops on Governor's Island and Navy Yard, if needed, to guard U. S. funds in the sub-treasury and the banks. Marshal Rynders has also telegraphed to the same effect.

This evening's Post states, on good authority, that Gen. Walker will sail this week, from New Orleans for Nicaragua with 1500 troops, in a fine steamer, with plenty of ammunition and provisions. Col. Duncan, of the U. S. Army, goes out to command the artillery.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.

There was another gathering in Tompkins Square this morning. Speeches were made, not, however, of an incendiary character.—There were, also, about a thousand persons in the Park, but the police would allow no speech making.

There is a strong force of police inside of the City Hall, and it is said that a rigiment holds itself in readiness for any outbreak, though there are now no signs of one.

Both boards and the common council have acted on the Mayor's message in reference to the unemployed poor. The Alderman resolved not to adopt the suggestions to procure large supplies of food. They however, passed resolutions, having for their object the employment of the poor. The councilmen also reported that they had not the power to provide relief in the direct manner pointed out by the Mayor; they however passed resolutions urging on the different boards having charge of the public works to employ laborers and also, recommend the Governor of the Alms House to purchase a store of provisions in anticipation of destitution among the laboring classes.

The American Mayoralty Convention nominated Jas. T. Cooley, a Democrat for that office. The Republicans have not yet nominated.

The City Banks, last night, resolved to call upon the country Banks to redeem daily at the Metropolitan Bank, after Monday, the 16th. The present accumulation of the country currency will be carried by the city Banks until the 1st of May next. A fifth, however, will be taken up on the 1st of Jan. 1st of February, 1st of March, 1st of April and 1st of May, at the rate per cent., to be allowed after the 1st of December. The proceedings are understood to look to an early resumption, provided the arrangement is agreeable to country banks.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.

Orders were issued to day for the immediate contraction of the Marine Corps stationed at Boston, Philadelphia and Washington, to protect the Sub-Treasury properly at New York, from rioters. If necessary all the available army will also be ordered for the same duty. Col. Harris commanding the Marine Corps at Brooklyn, who was here on special duty, went to New York to-night under orders to report to Gen. Scott forthwith. Mr. Mason has forwarded to the State Department his resignation of the French mission, to take effect in January.

It is rumored that Frassari is to be received as Minister from Nicaragua to-morrow. The statement is discredited though possibly true. Much apprehension exists in regard to the view of the Administration on the Tehuantepec question, but the Administration has nothing to do with any agreement entered into between Mexico and the Louisana Company, nor does it favor any other private interest.

Mexico has offered to extend, for a large pecuniary consideration the rights which the United States acquired under the Gadsden Treaty. Connected with that subject the correspondence will be transmitted to Congress.

The Government has been officially advised that Senor Esculante has been selected by Costa Rica as Special Envoy to the United States. He is expected to arrive by the next steamer, but will not interfere with the functions of Moline. His mission is connected with the freedom of the Nicaragua Transit route, under the protection of the Great Commercial Powers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.

There were large gatherings to day of idle laborers, both in Thompkins Square and the City Hall Park, but no organized attempts at riot. Several impromptu outbreaks at the latter place were promptly suppressed by the police, and one or two incendiary speakers speakers arrested. A squad of 150 policemen were on guard at the City Hall. There were also gathered at the Custom House a detachment of U. S. Troops to guard against any attempt upon the Sub-Treasury and Banks. Gen. Scott and aid were present and had an interview with the Collector.

The Mayor was pretty severely denounced by the mob in the Park, and some individuals who attempted to defend him were roughly handled.

ALBANY, Nov. 10.

The rain storm west of this place has proved very destructive. Several culvers in the Central Road are broken. The bridge over the Genessee, at Rochester, was for a long time considered to be in danger. All trains from the West have been delayed. One freight train broke through a culvert at Weedsport, and six cars, loaded with grain, were precipitated into the ditch. No person was injured.

The rain is spoken of as the heaviest rain for years.

The Canal breaks overflow the Rail Road, and no trains are sent West.

The latest information says the hopes are entertained that the old Road, between Syracuse and Rochester, will be passable to-night. If it is, a train will leave here at 6 P. M.

ELMYER, Nov. 10.

The water in the river here has overflowed the N. Y. & E. R. R. bridge, which, it is feared, will be carried away. The track at Corning is washed away and the place inundated. A number of buildings have been washed away.

GOSHEN, N. Y. Nov. 11.

The Goshen Bank at this place was robbed last night of $20,000 in bills and about $2,200 in specie. No clue to the perpetrators has yet been found.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Nov. 10.

The Susquehannah river at this point has risen ten feet, and is still rising, at the rate of two inches per hour.

MOFFAT'S LIFE PILLS AND PHOENIX BITTERS.

For the griping colic, inflamation of the spleen, want of appetite and dyspepsia, these popular medicines may be used with entire confidence in the result. In all liver and bowel complaints the Moffat medicines have never failed of a cure.

Sold by W. B. Moffat, 335 Broadway, N. Y.—Taylor & Curtis Agents, Tecumseh.

RHEUMATISM—NEURALGIA.—The agonies of Rheumatism and Neuralgia are among the most acute with which the human frame is ever afflicted, and have heretofore been found the most difficult to remove. Happily a remedy is now discovered by which the most obstinate cases can be immediately cured.—This sovereign remedy is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT, for sale by Druggi ts generally. It is only necessary for the sufferer to try it, to be assured of its efficacy.

DR. J. C. AYER, the world renowned Chemist of New England, is now stopping at the Burnet house in this city. He has been making a tour of the Western States, with his scientific associates, to investigate their remedial productions, or such as he can make remedial. We notice he has been received with marked distinction by our leading citizens of the West and are rejoiced to find they have shown a proper estimate of the man who has perhaps done more for the relief of human ills than any other American.—Cincinnati Journal.

The most skeptical people can be convinced by trial, that all the family medicines are not humbug, and that among the thousand of butterfly life there are a few of great merit, and undoubted worth. Of these, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy stands first and foremost among the remedies of the day that can be relied on as a medicine that is all that is reccomended by its proprietors.

It advertises itself on every trial, for there are none who use it but tell their friends to do so, and so it goes from mouth to mouth till all the people of the Union have learned the good of this truly valuable medicine. It is recommended with testimonials to prove its virtue for the cure of liver complaints of every kind, from the worst Dyspepsia to a common headache, and is particularly adapted to Jaundice, Deranged Stomach, Bowel Complaints and diseases of children.

One or two doses are said to cure a cold with scarce a failure. It is worth a trial for this alone. It is particularly adapted to use of ladies, particularly those of sedentary habits. Some ladies of the highest standing in society have given their certificates of its efficacy, and we say to all who are ailing, try one bottle, and you will never be without it.

☞ The inland trade is dropping Detroit, and going to Chicago and Toledo The Detroit papers wonder at this fact.—Look over your exchanges from the interior, and you will discover that Chicago and Toledo advertise largely in the country Press, while Detroit limits its advertising to Monroe, Adrian, and a few other places. Perhaps this is an oversight of Detroit, if so, they will bear in mind that the 31 day of December next, the majority of the Michigan Publishers hold their Convention in Detroit, and will afford an excellent opportunity for business men to show their horn throughout the State.

GEOGRAPHY.—Maine is situated on the Androscoggin River, near Bangor, and within sight of the White Mountings, in New Hampshire. The principal produce of Maine are hoe handles, Herring, Down and pickled shad. The inhabitants live in houses, very seldom leave them, and when they do, leave merely to go Boosting to dispose of their hoe hand and shad. Michigan Fruit Shipped.

Jas. Birdsall, of Jonesville, has shipped to Chicago, 500 bbls of fall apples this season: Hiram Smith, of Homer, Calhoun county, has shipped 200 bbls of peaches and 300 bbls of apples.

Mr. George Parmelee, residing at St. Joseph has a peach orchard containing eight acres, which has been bearing fruit three years. He has shipped to Chicago market two thousand baskets of peaches, the proceeds of which realized him $5,000 or more than $620 per acre. All his trees bear fine grafted fruit.

Thus Michigan is steadily and rapidly becoming a great fruit producting State. Ten years from now will see the products of her Orchards forming one of her staple exports and one of the chief scources of her wealth.

Now, query: Why was this fruit shipped to Chicago instead of Detroit? Is the trade of Southern Michigan to go in this direction hereafter!—Detroit Tribune

The Peach trees in this section, were nearly all killed last winter; but, they are being replaced, from the Nursery of our friend, Charles Strong. He is also shipping daily, large quantities to different sections of the West. We doubt if a better, or larger collection, of Peach, Pear and Apple Trees, can be found in the State, than at the Tecumseh Nursery.

BURGLARIES.—On Saturday the Post Office at Dowagiac, was broken into and robbed of its contents.

On Wednesday night, the store of J. K. Witter, at Cassopolis, was broken open, and silks and light goods to the amount of from $500 to $1,000 was stolen.

ARREST OF COUNTERFEITERS.—The Jackson Patriot of Wednesday, says:

"The officers of this city have been on the look-out for a gang of counterfeiters, and have at length made a successful haul. Yesterday afternoon Wm. Fishburn, an old offender, and ——— Rouse, were arrested, and $700 in counterfeit bills on the Gloucester Bank found in their possession. These coveys have been operating in Calhoun county, we understand. Two others of the gang were arrested last evening for uttering counterfeits on the Boston Bank. They will have an examination before Justice Welling to-day, (Wednesday.)

ASSAULTED AND ROBBED.—A daring robbery was committed at Marshall, last Monday night. James Aley was assaulted by a man named William English, knocked down and robbed of a gold watch valued at $100. The scoundrel has been arrested and committed for trial.

DISCOVERED.—The man who saved Sandusky from famine, by shooting off the tail of the pilot porker of a train of blind hogs, and leading the captives in triumph into the city, has been "resurrected." The Register says his name is JOE B——, and that he recently "keeled over" seventy two ducks at a single shot, down among the marshes thereabouts.

TOWNSEND CONVICTED.—The Cleveland Review states, upon the authority of Mr Isles, of that city, who has just returned from Canada, that Townsend, the notorious robber and murderer, has been tried in Welland county for the murder of the police officer at Port Robinson, and convicted.

WHO'S AFRAID.—We admire real pluck; but the following from the Lafayette Courier, a little overdoes the thing. Speaking of the crisis, it says:

"There is no occasion for a panic, and the cry of hard times is ridiculous croaking. The country is rich beyond all precedent, and a little confidence is all that is wanted to put things in trim again. It is true we were all a little extravagant last year, but we were rich and could well afford it. It isn't going to break us. In common parlance, we shall all be flush of money when 'we sell our hogs'."

It may be so. There is no doubt that "panic" does much toward bringing about the present disarrangement; but the extra confidence of the Courier reminds us of a little boy who rushed all breathless into the house to escape the indignant attentions of a wrathful old turkey which he had in some way provoked. Shutting the door and bracing himself against it, he triumphantly exclaimed—"Who's 'fraid of the Bobbler? I ain't."

☞ An Illinois paper says there is a man in Olney so dirty that the assesser put him down as "real estate."

☞ The Times, Eastmanville, Michigan, offers $30,00 in cash prizes, for the two best original stories sent that paper by Dec. 24th, 1857. Should any of our friends wish to compete for the cash, they can learn the necessary particulars by sending for a specimen copy of the Times.

☞ A certain divine of Massachusetts, being called upon to offer prayer at a Masonic celebration, and not being initiated into the secrets of the institution, made use of the following form:

"O Lord! we have come to offer our prayer unto thee, for what we know not if it be for anything good, will thou bless it! If for anything bad, wilt thou curse it!"

On being remonstrated with on account of the nature of this prayer by one of the fraternity, he replied:

"If you tap the barrel, you must take the cider as it runs."

☞ "My tenants are a world of bother to me," said a testy landlady to her nephew. "Quite likely; ten aunts might be considered enough to bother any one," was the reply.

Lastly, I have been compelled to wait for payment of Goods sold on Six Months time, long enough for a man to visit California, get rich, and return, before payment could be forced or coaxed.

Now I wish to say, to my numerous friends and patrons, that I am thoroughly convinced that the mode of buying goods on time is both injurious to the buyer and seller.

HIEBER & UNTERKIRCHER,

Lenawee County Farmer.

Tecumseh, Michigan, November, 1857.

Are you Ready.

The weather indicates the proximity of winter, and every farmer who is not prepared for its advent should be on the alert. Barns, cattle sheds and sheep yards need to be put in such order as will warrant the greatest protection to the animals to be placed therein. Feed what and when you will, it is of no avail, animals cannot be kept in good condition if exposed to the severities of the season we are entering upon. True economy would dictate the comfort of stock, for to re-invigorate a system impoverished by harsh treatment, undoubtedly costs more than to keep it in readiness to supply the demands of nature, not to mention the greater tendencies to disease developed by lack of food or want of protection from storms and cold.—There is another point connected with stock raising—upon which much of the logic of reason and argument ought to be brought to bear—that should receive the attention of those interested. Give them the best your barn and granary affords. Instead of marketing the cleanest and sweetest of the hay and feeding out such as was pooly cured or musty, reverse the mode. The richer the food the richer the manure; the more concentrated fertility possessed by the latter, the better for land and crops: both of which have a direct relation to the pockets of the owner. Keep no more stock than can be wintered well. If, however, you should run short of long fodder, cut up into small peices—an inch or an inch and a half long—the corn stalks and steam them. A bushel will make a good meal for an ox or cow.

The long evenings are here again, and isolated as the farmer is, the question naturally arises, in what manner is he to spend them? So much of life is made up of the hours of Nature's darkness, that our prosperity may depend on their right use. The labors of Spring Summer and Autumn are of such character as to almost to deprive the farmer of any mental development, but winter gives the time for obtaining a fund of information that will enable him, when the season of toil returns, to work with confidence earnestness that is its own guarantee of success. Be observing, and if some in your vicinity have met with extraordinary success in the culture of any crop, fathom the reason therefor, and leaving the "beaten path," strike out anew in the cause of progress. Think, study, lay plans and devise experiments for the coming season, and resolve to perform what portion of labor is assigned you in rolling forward the car of Improvement. Be a farmer, or else, by change of employment, seek an occupation more congenial to your tastes. Science is lending its light to agricultural pursuits; art and mechanical skill are devising and manufacturing aids to its promotion, and he who discards their assistance, enters the battle field of life half armed. Something beside bone and muscle, strength of sinew and power of endurance is necessary to elevate the farmer's calling; these are accessorics, but mental enlightenment must be the directing force.—Intellectual and mechanical agriculture are co laborers; to meet the fullest reward, both must be employed. A position must be chosen; an elevated one can be taken and maintained, if the means within your reach are judiciously used; the stores of practical, scientific skill are open, and you can mentally grasp what you will —are you ready?—Ex.

To Promote Health in Cattle. Mix 4 to 6 parts of wood ashes, with one part of salt, and give to different kinds of stock, summer and winter. It is said to be good against bots in horses, murrin in cattle, and rot in sheep.

Cholic in Sheep.—Half an ounce of epsom salts, one dramch ginger, six drops essence of peppermint,—or a dose of linseed oil, or hog's lard.

Washing Compound.

In compassion for those housekeepers who are obliged to do their own washing, allow me to give a recipe for preparing and using a compound which is more simple than those we sometimes read in newspapers, and which I prefer to anything I have ever used, not excepting several kinds of highly recommended patent machines.

Four pounds common bar soap, 4 pounds sal soda, 5 gallons soft water, dissolved and simmered together.—When cool, put away for use. My mode of using it is this:—The clothes are put to soak in warm, not hot, clear soft water, as soon as convenient after rising on Monday morning When breakfast is over, (in an hour, or an hour and a half,) the boiler is put over the fire, with as much water as will be needed for boiling all the clothes the compound is then added in the proportion of 1 pound to 3½ gallons of soft water. While it is dissolving the finest and cleanest part of the clothes are wrung out for the first boiling; a part of the suds is taken from the boiler, leaving only a sufficient quantity for the first boiling; the clothes are then putsin, and after they commence boiling, are not allowed to remain more than half an hour; when taken out, a part of the suds must be removed, and cold added; then another quantity of clothes put in and boiled as before, the coarsest and dirtiest part being reserved for the last; suds and rinse thoroughly. The boiling water is much better for cleaning floors than ordinary suds; the sudsing water is good for washing calicoes, and other colored clothing.

A compound may be made with soft soap, nearly or quite as good, as follows:—1 gallon soft soap, 4 gallons soft water, 2½ lbs. sal soda, boiled together.

For 3½ gallons of soft water, use 1 pint of this, and proceed in washing as before. This compound should be well stirred before using.

Some have supposed that soda alone added to the boiling water, would answer just as well, but having tried both ways pretty thoroughly, I prefer making it into soap. I have found nothing heretofore, that saves so much time, and hard work. But very little rubbing is ever necessary, and the clothes look very white and nice, if well rinsed; besides they are not at all injured, unless the soap is used in much larger proportions than those stated.—Ohio Farmer.

Preserving Grain.—Grain to keep well should be perfectly ripe, and then be placed in a situation where it can remain cool and dry. It has been recommended when you have small quantities only to keep, a few barrels, for instance; to put in dry bricks in different parts of the mass. These would absorb and retain any moisture that would be in their immediate neighborhood, not being liable to any action such as heating by any decomposition, and hence have a tendency to preserve the good condition of the grain in which they are placed. We have never seen the experiment tried, but the theory looks plausible. —Ex.

☞ Cabbages may be headed in winter by setting them with their roots in good rich earth just as they grow, and covering the tops so they will not freeze. This may be done with a roof of boards hay or dirt, with little air holes. Cabbage grown in this way is blanched sweet and tender, and will pay much more than the cost of arranging the late stalks which failed to form heads in the fall. The work should be done just before the ground freezes and at first only slightly cover the tops.—Ex.

Joseph's brethren cast him into the pit, because they thought it a good opening for the young man.

ONE DOLLAR WILL BUY

ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public, namely DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REMEDY, that acts as a Cathartic, assists, relieves and cures sooner than any other medicine known. It is not only a Cathartic but a Liver remedy, acting first on the Liver to expel its morbid matter, thence the stomach and bowels to carry off the latter, thus accomplishing two purposes effectually, without any of the painful feelings experienced in the operations of most cathartics. It strengthens the system at the same time that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely, Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred pounds of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects.

Though possessing rare medical powers, these gums have been but little known to Physicians, and never used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the Invigorator which met with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known to its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure Liver Complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver, and as a proof that the Invigorator relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses on retiring, and it assists nature in her operations. By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and, active state, and work as regularly as clock work.

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the Invigorator, which corrects all acidity and sourness of the stomach.

For an over-loaded stomach, there no equal, as it relieves all oppression or uneasy feeling after eating heartily. For a FAMILY MEDICINE generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints, and all diseases arising from a Diseased Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to Dyspeptics, for it made a complete cure before the first bottle was taken, and no we can eat anything edible without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain. Now what we want to say to all our readers is, if Liver Complaint, or Dyspepsia trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.—Mystic Press.

We take infinite pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER, and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty, and thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of diseases incident to children, as DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR; nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it; for it acts as a Cathartic so mildly and gently, and seems to renovate the system so thoroughly that we think we are doing a service to all in advising them. So when they need medicine, to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where great benefit has been received in diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels, where all other remedies failed to give relief. It had become so useful in our family that we will not be without it.—Jacksonville, Ills. Republican.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

(SUGAR COATED,)

ARE NOW PUT UP IN

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THEIR

Invalids, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, send their Effects and Judge of their Virtues.

FOR THE CURE OF

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach,

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Sir: I have been troubled for the last two years with the worst headache any one can have up to date, and at your Pills. It seems to settle from the stomach, and they cleanse it sure. If they will from others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, Eli W. Perrill,

Clerk of Senate Virginia.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints,

Department of the Interior,

Washington, Dec. 1, 1856.

Sir: I have used your Pills in my general practice ever since you made them, and cannot say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M.D.

Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

Post Office, Hartland, Liv. Co., Mich., Nov. 16, 1856.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months. We gave off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. She then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from the body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, and others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctor bills, and lost much time, without being cured after even them. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

Dr. Ayer: I have used your Pills with astonishing success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends.

Yours, J. V. HIMES.

Warsaw, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1855.

Dear Sir: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M.D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawtrs, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

Pulaski House, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1856.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sore upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grieviously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and face. After one bottle of your Pills was taken, she tried no more. Pills, and they have cured her. Asa Morgridge.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawtrs, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

Pulaski House, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1856.

Dr. Ayer: I should be ungrateful were I to withhold from you the meed of praise due to the skill has brought me. If I did not report my case to you, I should feel that I was wanting in gratitude. Nor will I do it. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

Senate Chamber, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec., 1855.

Dr. Ayer: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. Vincent Sliddell.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or Kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury which though a valuable remedy in skilled hands, is in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

COLDS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, INFLUENZA, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the people of the United States of its virtues. Throughout every town and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country on the habitable globe that are not in some measure aware of its effects; and fewer yet the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the Cherry Pectoral save more lives by its timely use than even those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable, for neglect them until no human skill can master the fatal cankor that, fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and they know too the virtues of this remedy. We need say no more than to assure them it is still made the best that can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who need it the best agent which skill can furnish for their cure.

The Old Play Ground

I sat an hour to-day, John,
Beside the old brook stream;
Where we were school boys in old time,
When manhood was a dream;
The brook is choked with falling leaves,
The pond is dried away,
I scarce believe that you would know
The dear old place to-day.

The school-house is no more, John,
Beneath our locust trees;
The wild rose by the window side
No more waves in the breeze;
The scattered stones look desolate;
The sod they rested on,
Has been plowed up by stranger hands,
Since you and I were gone.

The chesnut tree is dead, John,
And what is sadder now—
The broken grape-vine of our swing
Hangs on the withered bough.
I read our names upon the bark,
And found the pebbles rare—
Laid up beneath the hollow stile,
As we had piled them there.

Beneath the grass-grown bank, John,
I looked for our old spring,
That bubbled down the alder path
Three paces from the swing;
The rushes grew upon the brink,
The pool is black and bare;
And not a foot, this many a day
It seems has trodden there.

I took the old blind road, John,
That wandered up the hill,
'Tis darker than it used to be,
And seems so lone and still:
The birds sing yet among the boughs—
Where once the sweet grapes hung,
But not a voice of human kind,
Where all our voices rung.

I sat me on the fence, John,
That lies as in olden times,
The same half pannel in the path,
We used so oft to climb;
I thought how o'er the bars of life
Our playmates had passed on,
And left me counting on this path,
The faces that are mine.

The Printer's "Hour of Peace."

A PARODY.

BY ROBERTS COFFIN, THE BOSTON BARD. 1826.

Know ye the Printer's hour of peace!
Know ye an hour more free from joy,
Than ever felt the maid of ease,
When kissed by Venus amorous boy!

'Tis not when round the mazy case,
His nimble fingers kiss the types;
Nor is it when, with lengthened face,
The sturdy devil's tail he gripes,

'Tis not when news of dreadful note,
His columns all with ninion fill;
'Tis not when brother printers quote,
The effusions of his stump-worn quill.

'Tis not when all his work is done,
The glimmering fire he hovers near,
And, heedless of the coming dun,
Grows merry o'er a pint of beer.

'Tis not when in Miss Fancy's Glass
Long advertisements meet his eye,
And seem to whisper as they pass,
"We'll grace your columns by and by."

Nor is it when with numerous names,
His lengthened roll of vellum swells,
As if 'twere touched by conjurer's wand,
Or grew by fairies' magic spells.

No, reader, no; the Printer's hour,
His hour of real, sweet repose,
Is not when by some magic power,
His list of patrons daily grow.

But, ah, 'tis when stern winter, drear,
Comes robed in snow, and rain, and vapor,
He hears in whispers kind and dear,
"We've come to pay you for the paper."

From Putnam's Monthly.

Sunken Treasures.

BY WILLIAM CULLEN BYRANT,

When the uneasy waves of life subside,
And the soothed ocean sleeps in glassy rest,
I see, submerged beyond or storm or tide,
The treasures gathered in its greedy breast.

There still they shine, through the translucent past,
Far down on that forever quiet floor;
No fierce upheaval of the deep shall cast
Them back—no wave shall wash them to the shore!

I see them gleaming, beautiful as when
Erewhile they floated convoys of my fate;
The barks of lovely women, noble men,
Full sailed with hope, and stored with love's own freight.

The sunken ventures of my heart as well,
Look up to me as perfect as at dawn;
My golden palace heaves beneath the swell
To meet my touch, and is again withdrawn.

There sleep the earthly triumphs cheaply won,
That fed ambition to its utmost verge,
And still his visions, like a drowning sun,
Send up receding splendors through the surge.

There wait the recognitions, the quick ties,
Whence the heart knows its kin wherever cast;
And there the partings, when the wistful eyes
Caress each other as they look their last.

There lie the summer eyes, delicious eyes,
The soft green valleys drenched with light divine,
The lisping murmurs of the chestnut leaves,
The hand that lay, the eyes that looked in mine.

There lives the hour of fear and rapture yet,
The perilled climax of the passionate years;
There still the ruins of wan December wet
A naked mound—I cannot see for tears!

There are they all; they do not fade or waste,
Lapped in the arms of the embalming brine;
More fair than when their beings mine embraced—
Of noble aspect, beauty more divine.

I see them all, but stretch my hands in vain;
No deep-sea plumet reaches where they rest;
No cunning diver shall descend the main,
And bring a single jewel from its breast.

A Good Lesson Wittily Taught.

FROM THE LOUISIANA COURIER.

A NEW PROFESSION.—We hope our readers will not be startled when we say that there is needed a new profession.—We shall not stop to argue that doctors, lawyers, and preachers do their duty.—We have little or nothing to say in complaint of them. We recognise their necessity, and do not see how society could well get on without them. We duly appreciate their learning, and have the highest regard for their ability and influence.

But in the doubts and perplexities of life, in its various phases and constantly-changing conditions, most feel often, and all feel at times, the want of truthful and candid advice relative to matters out of the range of either medical, spiritual, or legal advisers. Thousands every day have occasion to ask themselves, "What ought I to do? How am I to meet this difficulty? How shall I escape from the troubles which surround me? How shall I act to escape public censure and the sacrifice of principle?" and other similar questions.

Could there be established a profession composed of men who should engage to make it their sole business to give frank and honest advice to those who should apply for it, seems probable that such a profession would be sustained, and that it would contribute largely to the welfare of society.

The members of this new profession might assume the designation of Truthtellers. They might guaranty to applicants an honest opinion upon any subject, when it was fully and fairly presented. They might make it known that they would charge at the rate of ten dollars an hour for time spent in listening to statements of clients, and in preparing their deliberate opinions as founded upon those statements. They would open convenient offices, where men and women, in doubt as to what they ought to do, might consult those whose professional duty it was to tell them the "truth and the whole truth" relative to the matter which had caused them perplexity, regardless of the wounds that they might give to the vanity of applicants, and with the plainness and simplicity which, in friends, would seem blunt and discourteous. Those who distrusted their own judgement and those who are involved in unusual difficulties, would find in the members of this new profession an infallible resource. They could not safely apply to friends for the advice they want, because they know that a fear of giving offence would prevent them from telling the truth. Neither could they be assured that their friends would give a full and careful hearing to all the matters involved; not that an equal friendship for other parties interested in the verdict might not warp their judgement. But in these professional "Truthtellers," they would feel sure of strict veracity and absolute candor in advice, rendered after systematic investigation and without unnecessary delay.

To illustrate more fully the advantages of this new profession, let us imagine it already initiated and a firm already established who offer advice for stated fees on every matter of business, taste or affection. We will suppose that Messrs. Keen, Short & Blunt, three middle-aged gentlemen, of varied experience, have opened an office on Canal street, offering to hear statements and to render advice to all parties applying to them in good faith.—They have their rooms of audience and examination, their clerks to record facts as detailed, and examiners to enquire elsewhere to ascertain the veracity of statements, reserving to the members of the firm the duty of rendering written and formal opinions upon the cases presented.

Early in the morning enters Mrs. Heartease, a young widow of twenty-three, whose husband has been dead two years, and who has recently received an offer of marriage from Mr. Flourish McHumbug. She opens her heart to her business confidant, tells how she admires Mr. McHumbug, how scanty the funds are that were left by her late dear Heartease, what a nice and amiable man her new suitor is, how fond her little curly-headed daughter is of him, and how happy she expects they will all be when Mr. McHumbug comes to live with them. Keen, Short & Blunt listen for an hour or two to her story, and learn more about McHumbug's character and purposes than the sweet widow could learn in forty years, tell her that they will take the matter under advisement, and send her away. The next day they send her their bill:

Mrs. Virginia Heartease,
To Keen, Short & Blunt, Dr.
Two hour's conversation- - - - - - - $20.
One and a half ditto, consultation- - - 15.

The boy who presents the bill gives Mrs. H. a note in legal envelope, which she opens and reads as follows:

"DEAR MADAM: We have come to the conclusion that you are deceived.—We are satisfied that McHumbug is a knave and entertains no regard for any thing but your money. We are professionally constrained to say that you are a very silly young woman to have any thing to do with him.

Yours, truly,
"Keen, Short & Blunt,
"Confidential Counsellors."

At noon enters a young man with a roll of manuscript. He timidly salutes Mr. Blunt and tells him he was about to send his manuscript to an editor for publication but had concluded to consult their firm before venturing to do so. He hands his production to Mr. Blunt, who reads very attentively for an hour, consulting his library very frequently. At last he looks up over his spectacles and asks: "Have you ten dollars about you?" and having received his fee he proceeds: "Young man, you have come here to be told the truth. You have shown me a parcel of stuff which you say you intend to publish. It is my candid opinion that you had better throw it in the fire. Your command of language is none of the best; your choice of topics is injudicious; your classical allusions are ill timed; your style is strained; your efforts at humor are mere sham; and you have not learned to confine your effusions within anything like reasonable compass. Remember, sir, I mean no offence, but you have paid me for telling you the truth, and I hope you will value and act upon it accordingly." The young aspirant departs without his ten dollars, but a wiser if a sadder man.

Next comes a man who thinks he has a good law-hitch on his neighbor, and desires to consult Keen, Short & Blunt as to the propriety of commencing legal proceedings. He explains the case, and shows them how he hopes to win. They listen patiently, but admonish him from time to time to speak the truth if he wants a truthful opinion. He concludes his application, pays twenty dollars, and receives from Blunt the following opinion:

"DEAR SIR: We have carefully considered your case. Your design is to swindle your neighbor. We think a smart lawyer would enable you to succeed, yet you will be foolish in prosecuting the attempt. Go home, invite your neighbor to dinner, give up the paper you hold against him, and never again think of what is justly his because you have an apparent legal right on your side. Hoping for further patronage from you, we remain,

"Your obedient servants,
"Keen, Short & Blunt."

An hour afterwards an application is made by young Highfalutin Sonorous, a politician in embryo, who desires to take advice on the propriety of his accepting an office that has been tendered to him by his party. He goes over the matter with as much truthfulness as repeated hints from the counsellors can command, and is dismissed to the parlor while the members of the firm consult. In a few minutes a servant asks Mr. Sonorous for twenty dollars, which being paid, he presents the following note:

"DEAR SIR: You have been educated for business at some expense. Your father evidently designed you for a practical business man. You have talent, though it has been somewhat dispated.—But we are compelled, in obedience to our professional duty, to say that you will ruin yourself if you embark in politics. You are unable, in all essential respects, to fill the proposed role. You would undoubtedly fail. Stick to your law books, Mr Sonorous, and let politics go to grass. Mind your own business, and you will soon be rich; begin to serve the political public, and you will soon become worthless. "Yours sincerely,

Keen, Short & Blunt."

We can fancy hundreds of other cases in which the members of the new profession of Truthtellers would be consulted. All of the large class who are justly distrustful of their own judgement would be glad to refer delicate and dubious matters to men whose business it should be to speak disagreable truths for a proper reward. No doubt the new profession would suffer from the unprofessional falsity and flattery of the unworthy, but consistent and uniform candor and absolute veracity would secure to the deserving the great bulk of the consultation business. In an age when so many men are paid for chicanery and deception. It would be refreshing to see a class established whose emolument depended upon their candor and veracity. We must say, however, that we have very little present hope of the establishment of the profession of Truthtellers on the plan proposed.

Short Patent Sermon.

The following verse composes my text for this morning:

Alas! by some degree of woe,
We every bliss must gain;
The heart can ne'er transport know,
That never knew a pain.

My hearers—it is singular, indeed, that we shouldn't know exactly how sweet the honey of bliss is, till after we have taken a swig at the sour cider of woe; and we cannot always tell then, for, what is new and sweet is always sure to taste sweeter than it really is, when partaken of immediately after what is stale and sour. There is a great deal of imagination about the matter. For instance, you fancy that a buss from a cherry-cheeked, rosy-lipped young damsel, is sweeter than that of a blear-eyed, saffron-skinned old maid; but, can it be shown by any chemical annalysis, or philosophical deduction, that there is any difference between the two kisses? No! one kiss is just as the other; and sweeter too, if it contain the greater quantity of the sugar of love.

My friends—woe and pain are deep and dark shades thrown in life's picture to give an extra burnish to bright and sunny spots of joy—apparently. I say apparently, because, in reality, those spots are no brighter with than without the shadows. A world covered with roses wouldn't look half so pretty as a few here and there, blooming in deserts and wilds, and beautifully contrasting with the duller and less interesting objects of earth. If, then, the force of this reasoning be admitted, how can a mortal ever be made to enjoy a terrestrial paradise? a perpetual and unchanging paradise? Yet God told Adam and Eve to be happy in the garden He had planted for them (some where away off east) They were, so, but they didn't know that they had been happy till after they had eaten of the apple of sin; got pierced by the thorns of pain; and had taken up lodgings in the lone wilderness outside of Eden. Consequently, their happiness at all Now the question is, did the Creator, or did He not, constitute our first parents, so that they could appreciate joy and bliss without having a slight acquaintance, at least, with pain and misery? If He did, he don't make folks so now-a days. So Satan, not appreciating the happiness of Heaven, because there wasn't anything else there, kicked up a row, and got expelled from the country; and it is a matter of no great surprise that he coolly remarked, on taking his leave, that he'd rather be boss in hell than boot black in Heaven. Any thing for a change was all he cared for: and now see what a poor, miserable despised devil he is! Don't you have anything to do with him, my friends; he is the meanest dog that ever skulked a corner.

My hearers—making my discourse like a double and twisted dough-nut, it is by some degree of woe that we gain what are termed blisses—which are nothing but air blown bubbles, after all, mirroring a little mimic world of joy for a moment, and then burst and evaporate forever.—We wander in the woods of woe, wearily in search of some wild flower of delight, that fades as soon as found; sweat, fret, and tear our mortal trowsers in climbing to the mountain top of Fame, whose shining summit, instead of being gilded by a warm, golden sunshine, is crowned with eternal snow; toil and slave ourselves for the wheat of wealth, and find the harvest smutted with sorrow, and filled with the tares of care and anxiety. In the web of love, there are thorns, thistles, and briars, as well as roses—bitter almonds and aloes in our cups of pleasure—turpentine, tobacco juice, pokeberries, and a "worm that dieth not" in the gin, brandy, and port wine, that we swallow to give our spirits a booster.—This is the case in the town where I was made; and I haven't the tail-feather of a doubt but it is so all the world over.

My dear friends—you must experience more or less pain before the heart can be sensible of a transport. Therefore, it is necessary that you should suffer a considerable sum here, before you can be prepared to enter upon, and rightly appreciate the extra jeweled joys of hereafter.—If you think you are taking the world too uncomfortably easy, go and butt your heads against that post; wear tight boots; put your noses to a grindstone, get upon a treadmill; edit a newspaper; stick pins in your own cushions; or sit upon the seat that Nature has given to all, and slide down a rough plank to poverty, against the slivers. Do all this, and your joys, blisses, and pleasures, will shine with unwonted lustre—when you find them.—Every thing must be well rubbed before it can be polished; so you, my worthy brethren, need a vast sight more rubbing than you get to make you reflect the rays of happiness, or even good humor. But don't look for a perfect peace or pure joy among the rotten wood and rubbish of earth. They are not to be found here; if they were, they would have been discovered by somebody years ago. Look up, then, among those glittering stars! There all is peace and tranquility; and as for joy—why, we see it forever sparkling in those witching eyes of Heaven! So mote it be!

Dow, Jr.

Going Home with a Girl the First Time.

We were between 16 and 17 years of age when the event about to be related transpired, and as a description of our personal appearance at that time is absolutely essential to the point of our story, we will give it as concisely as the subject will allow. In reference then to that period, to say that we were green in the usual acceptance of that term, would give the reader but a poor idea of the figure we displayed. Rather imagine a tall lean cadaverous, swaggering looking chap, with legs like a pair of tongs, a countenance about as expressive as a plate of Dutch cheese, a mouth that came near making an island of all the head above it, a face covered with a furze that looked very much like the down on a newly hatched gosling, with a gait that would lead the beholder to suppose that we designed to go down both sides of the street at the same time, and you have a correct daguerrotype of Jeems in the seventeenth year of his age.

One dark, gloomy night in the month of December, we chanced to be at 'spelling school' not a thousand miles from Baldwinsville, while our eyes fell upon a 'fairy form' that immediately set our susceptible heart in a blaze. She was 16, or thereabouts, with bright eyes, red checks, and cherry lips, while the auburn ringlets clustered in a wealth of profusion around her beautiful head, and her person to our ravished sight, was more perfect in form and outline, than the most faultless statue ever chiseled by the sculptor's art. As we gazed, our feelings, which had never before aspired girlward, were fully aroused, and we determined to go home with her that night, or perish in the attempt.

As soon as school was dismissed, and our lady-love suitably bonneted and cloaked, we approached to offer our services as contemplated, and we then learned an important lesson, viz: the difference between resolving and doing. As we neared her, we were seized with a partial blindness—red, green, blue and yellow lights flashed upon our vision, and appeared and disappeared like witches in a phantasmagoria—our knees smote together like Belshazzar's when he discovered the handwriting upon the wall, while our heart thumped, with apparently as much force as if it were driving tenpenny nails into our ribs. We, in the meantime, managed to mumble over something, which is perhaps known to the Recording Angel, but certainly is not to us, at the same time, poking out our elbow as nearly at right angles with our body as our physical conformation would permit.

The night air blew keenly, which in some sort served to revive us, and as our senses returned, what were our emotions on finding the cherished object of our first love, clinging to our arm with all the tenacity a drowning man is said to clutch to a straw. Tell of Elysium, or sliding down greased rainbows, or feeding on German flutes! what are such "pheelinks" in comparison to those mighty ones that swelled our bosom nigh unto the bursting of our waistcoat buttons! Our happiness was sublime sublimity, sublimely sublimited, and every person who has felt the divine throbbing of a fledged love principle, fully understands the world of bliss couched in the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th words at the commencement of this sentence.

Well, we passed on pleasantly towards our Sally's home, talking of "love and dove, and dart and part," until so courageous had we become, that we actually proposed "to go and sit awhile," to which our Dulcinea very graciously assented.—Alas for us! how soon we were to be reminded that the "course of true love never did run smooth."

Sally had a brother of some ten summers, who accompanied us all along the way, and who was in wonderful high spirits at the idea of his sister's having a beau, and would walk around us frequently, giggling in the height of his glee, and eyeing us as closely as if ourself and Sally were world renowned Siamese twins, and he was taking his first look.

Bill, by the way was a stubbed, chuckle-headed boy, whose habiliments would have made the fortunes of any two dealers in mopraps.

At length we reached the bars, and while we were letting them down, Bill shot past us and entered the house as if pursued by a thousand bulls of Bashe. He flung open the door with a bang, and exclaimed at the top of his voice:

"Mother! Mother! Jim Clark is coming hum with Sal!"

"Is he?" screamed the old woman reply; "wal, I declare! I didn't think the sap head knew enough!—Jeems of the Baldwinsville Gazette.

My Dream.

I dreamed last night, and my heart went back
To the home of my early days;
And I walked once more downthe lightsome track
That shone with young Hope's bright rays.

I strayed with my sister, hand in hand,
Through the paths we knew so well;
I stood 'neath the trees where we used to stand,
And our childish farewells tell.

Oh! gaudily as ever rose the woods,
With their tops 'gainst Heaven's dome,
And sweet as erst was the song of birds,
That sung in my childhood's home!

But then mid the circle of our joy,
A shadow seemed to stand,
And a saddened thought came o'er us, of one
Who was missed from our household band.

Then I turned, my Father, to thee, in tears;
And I spoke of her gentleness;
And I sighed to think of the weary years
That her love might never bless.

I thought of the rough paths we must tread,
Ere life should reach its even,
And my heart shrank trembling, so I said,
'Oh! would we were all in Heaven.'

But thou saidst that our life-work here below
As yet was not wholly done,
And to reach the goal where no grief drops flow
Must the Earth-race first be run.

Then we'll patiently wait, to meet at last
By Edens sparkling river,
Where no pall is on the spirit cast
And the heavens shall smile forever.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1857.

PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency, Kinsley S. Bingham, Governor of the State of Michigan.

In conformity with a long established custom, I have thought proper to designate, and do by these presents appoint Thursday, the 26th day of November next, as a day of public and general thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God.

I earnestly invite the good people of the State, to assemble in their several places of public worship on that day, and unite in a humble acknowledgement of his goodness, which has crowned another year with propitious seasons, with plenteous harvests and with peaceful habitations. Let us be thankful that pestilence and famine have been averted from us, general degree of health has prevailed, and that an abundance of food has been stored against the coming winter for man and beast. Let us humbly beseech his blessing upon our labor, and that, in His great mercy He will so order events, as will promote the happiness and prosperity of our people, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto signed my name and caused the seal of the State to be affixed at Lansing, this twenty-sixth day of [L. S.] October, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and fifty seven, and of the independence of the United States the eighty-second.

By the Governor,
KINGSLEY S. BINGHAM.
JOHN MCKINNEY, Sec'y of State.

The uses of the Present Crisis.

There are those who no doubt regard the present commercial crisis as only an unmitigated calamity. That it has brought sudden ruin to many, and great temporary inconvenience to all, none will deny, and yet we are inclined to regard it as, upon the whole, the richest dispensation of good that has fallen upon this community for many years.

Americans are not ordinarily inclined to plod along too slowly, and under the strong impulse of an uninterrupted success, the whole country was getting on entirely too fast. Extravagance, and an almost dishonest recklessness were making fearful inroads upon the happiness and integrity of the nation. Under the full tide of prosperity it was useless to call public attention to these tendencies. They had no time to stop and think of them. They felt at the time no need of doing so.

But now when everything is brought to a stand still, and crash after crash of some specious bauble whose glittering splendor had dazzled the eyes and turned the hearts of men, gives ampletime and food for thought, we naturally look back in a spirit of more sober reflection upon the windings of that devious way that has brought us to those dangerous and giddy heights upon the very verge of which we find ourselves standing.

Americans have more of the impulsive and excitable element of the French, in their character than is generally supposed and although unsurpassed in active energy and determination, need oftener than any other people, unless it be the French, the reverses of fortune to keep them rational and steady. However much excitement and temporary relish it may afford, there is no true or permanent enjoyment to be found in a course of reckless expenditure and extravagance, but on the contrary its uniform and direct tendency is towards discomfort, demoralization and ruin

Anything therefore short of absolute pecuniary ruin, or personal and individual suffering and want, that is calculated to put check upon such a career, and its influence upon the habits and character of a people is not a calamnity, but a blessing and will be so found and felt to be in the end. At the end of another year we have no doubt, our people as a whole will be happier and stronger, more self-reliant, and far more potent for usefulness and good than if they had continued on in an uninterrupted course of their former commercial prosperity.

THE IMPENDING CRISIS, of the South, How to meet it, by Hinton Rowan Helper of North Carolina; 13th thousand, Published in N. Y. by Burdick Brothers, 8 Spruce street. For sale by J, K. Wel an, Adrian Mich.

The above work, which is placed upon our table by the kindness of Mr. Wellman, is one which, though written by a Southern man, others here at the north would do well to read and ponder. It is truthful, instructive, and to all who have any appreciation of the crisis at which our country has arrived in this matter, intensely interesting. We cheerfully reccommend it to the attention of our readers.

☞The late financial embarassments in the United States are driving home great numbers of Americans, who had otherwise intended to remain abroad for the winter. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good." One gentleman lost a sum of $50,000 net in one establishment.

☞Jones says that it's all folly for his friends to tell him that he must't enlarge his debts when he is doing all he can to contract them.

Mayor Vaux is creating no little excitement among the Philidelphia police. By his direction a list of the force is being in which against each mans name are placed general remarks as to whether he is married or single, has private resources or otherwise; his personal habits, and other minutia connected with his history' It is supposed the mayor intends to overhaul and reform the whole of the forces.

From the London Times Aug 29

Effect of the Panic on the English Manufacturing Towns.

The trade reports from the manufacturing towns for the past week are much less unsatisfactory than might have been expected. It must be presumed, however, that throughout the remainder of the year the amount of our exports will be considerably reduced by the cessation of the American demand. Of course, the various houses on this side desire to say as little as possible of their lossess, but hitherto the actual mischief seems not to have been of dangerous extent, the steady conduct of our principal firms having kept them in a position to meet any temporary inconvenience. At Manchester, the failures although numerous, have been entirely limited to secondary establishments, and the large suspensions at Glasgow are believed chiefly to have comprised houses long notorious for trading beyond their means.

At Birmingham, it is said no severe injury has, thus far, been inflicted while from Leeds we have the remarkable statement that £1,000 would cover all liabilities that have yet arisen in connection with the New York disasters. It can scarcely be hoped that these instances of imunity will continue, and there is little doubt that the aggregate of debts due to England from failed house in New York Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore is enormous, although from the manner in which they are spread, and the stability of those upon them they have fallen, the public in a majority of cases will be spared a knowledge of them.

The Pressure at the East.

From our exchanges we glean the following in regard to the hard times in the East.

"An Industral Womans Association has been formed in Philadelphia, for the purpose of affording relief to destitute women in that city. It is proposed to devise means for sending the unemployed to the West. The Stat of Indiana, it' is said can furnish employment at once for 2000 women. The river towns of Iowa, also call for 1000. Mrs. Sarah J. Hale, the authoress, is named as the probable President of the new organisation. The proposition was broached at a public meeting at the Musical Fund Hall, on Wednes evening, and the arrangements will be set on immediately.

The whole number of persons thrown out of employment by the stoppage of the extensive manufacturing establishments of Manayunk (Philadelphia) is estimated at 3000.

At Norristown Penn.. some 2000 opertives are unemployed.

In Philadelphia, since the panic began nine ward Howard Associations have been formed to afford relief to the destitute.—The German Press of Philadelphia discountenances the proceedings of German citizens at the recent meeting, the participants in which wanted 'bread or war.' The Democrat declares that those who took part in the meeting made themselves ridiculous to their reasoning countrymen.'

In Boston the organization known as the 'New England Protective Union,' established for the supply of the necessaries of life to consumers at cost prices, has establish a new Centr'l Division for the coming year, headed by Francis Phelps as President, General Purchasing Agents have been appointed for Boston and New York."

The 'Bread or Fight,' organization of Philadelphia.

Another meeting of the German laborers in Philadelphia was held on Friday evening. The Philadelphia Inquirer says of it:

'The meeting was a very large one.—several speeches were delivered.

'A series of resolutions adopted, in substance asserting that the present deplorable state of affairs are attributable to the corruptions which pervade all classes of society that the innocent working classes, being the victims, should obtain relief at the hands of the guilty; that the true remedy is in the prosecution of our public works, in the manner indicated by Mayor Vaux, in his recent message, and similar measures are recommended to the General and State Governments. Organizations to assist disabled workmen are suggested, and the laboring men throughout the Union are urged to combine, and to pledge themselves to each other, that in future elections they will disregard party predilections, and suppor only such men as are honest and capable, and prepared to unite in securing a judicious revision of the tariff, a sound currency, the prohibition of the issue of small bills, and a liberal homestead bill for actual settlers.

TO CURE WARTS.—Place a cent in vinegar, and when it has become coated with verdigris, rub it over the wart—Repeat the operation for a few days or weeks, and the warts will gradually disappear. The action of the acid and verdigris cobined is supposed to effect the removal.

What kind of sweet meats did they have in the ark? Preserved Pairs.

General News.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.

James Rodgers who murdered Savinson, some weeks since, in the 10th Avenue has been convicted.

Dr. James T. Curtis, the first American Physician to practice Homeopathy in this country, committed suicide in this city, yesterday, while in a fit of temporary insanity.

There was a large meeting to-day in Wall st. of the citizens opposed to the re-election of Mayor Wood. Henry Nicoll, Democratic ex-Member of Congress, presided. William S. Havemeyer, Democratic ex-Mayor received a unanimous nomination, but declined. A committee was appointed to select a candidate, when the meeting adjourned. The meeting was attended by a large number of our most prominent bankers, merchants and mechanics, and the proceedings througout were quite enthusiastic.

Our money market closes for the week with more decided symptoms of improvement than for many weeks.

The business at the stock board has been quite large for the week, footing nearly $9;000,000 with quite a large advance on all descriptions. The money market has been amply supplied at rates tending continually downward. Our banks were never in a stronger condition than at present. Their specie on hand reaching fully it is believed, $18,000,000, and, it is said, the immediate resumption of specie payment was one of the topics of discussion at the meeting held this afternoon.

Stocks at the 2nd board were not so active and prices of some description easier.

Captain Storm was arrested to-day on the charge of fitting out the schooner Merchant for the Slave Trade. The M. was seized some months since but afterwards released.

LOCKPORT, Nov. 16.

A destructive fire broke out last night about 9 o'clock, in Draper's mills, and before it could be subdued destroyed most of the building, together with the celebrated Spaulding mill, owned by N. H Wolfe & Co., of New York. At one time during the fire, the buildings on Main Street were in imminent danger. Three persons were severely injured by the breaking of a ladder. Their names are Bruce Oliver, Wm. Stephanson, and J. G. Atwood.—The first two had each an arm broken, and Oliver is still insensible and in a critical condition. A large number of persons are thrown out of employment.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.

The Secretary of War has received no official dispatches from Col. Johnson, in command of the Utah Expedition, but private advices leave no doubt on his mind as to the truth of the statement made in Judge Eckel's dispatch, about the destruction of the Government trains.

Gen. Scott is absent from head quarters and as Colonel Johnson's dispatches go there, they are no doubt, lying in New York.

The Expedition was supplied with provisions for one year. I am authorized to say that the Expedition will not suffer the slightest inconvenience from the destroyed trains, and the forces under Col. Johnson are in no peril from either the Mormons or the season. The Administration is undecided what course it will pursue.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.

The screw steamship City of Washington from Liverpool 4th inst., has just arrived Her advices are of the same date as those received by the Ariel, via. Cape Race. The City of Washington left Liverpool at noon on the 4th. Confidence at Liverpool and Manchester and the manufacturing districts generally, is still upheld in a manner to excite surprise. The stoppage of the Borough's Bank of Liverpool has been followed by less excitement than was feared.

On Tuesday, the 3rd, the Consul market was heavy, closing at 89 5 8 a 89¾ for money and account. The discount market was unchanged, but money was rather easier to be obtained, although there was no diminution in the pressure.

Over $200,000 in gold had been drawn from the Bank, since Saturday, and apprehension prevailed that a further rise in the rates of discount to 9 per cent would be the consequence.

At the attempt to launch the Great Western, now formally christened the Leviathan, after 3 hours hard labor, had moved six feet by the stern and 4 feet by the bow, when one of the powerful purchase chains broke and the work had to be suspended.

The funeral obsequies of Gen. Cavaignac took place at Paris, on the 31st, and were very imposing. About 15,000 people followed the hearse to the cemetery.

The inundations in Piedmont were subsiding after causing immense damage.

Yeh, the Viceroy of Canton, has been appointed a Lieutenant to the person of the Emperor, a rank which is never given except to princes and members of the Imperial family, when on a Mission. It is said that eh Yeh has positive orders to summon the English to evacuate Canton, and is authorized in default of compliance to make an official declaration of war against England.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.

The steamship St. Louis arrived this morning from Aspinwall, via Havana, with California mails to October 20th, 643 passengers and $1,176,000 in specie. Among her passengers are, Gen. Lane, Delegate to Congress from Oregon; Capt. Taylor, U. S. A; Com. Merwin, of the frigate Independence; a portion of his officers and 133 discharged seamen and marines. The dispatch received via New Orleans embraces most of the California news.

Hon. P. H. Burnett had been appointed Justice of the Supreme Court, vice Murray, deceased.

The Morgan organ in San Francisco had been suspended by order of Brigham Young.

Two severe shocks of an earthquake were felt in San Francisco on the evening of the 10th.

The Indians had attacked the settlements at Honey Lake Valley, driving out the inhabitants and carrying off their stock and provisions. An express had arrived at Sacramento for aid.

Business at San Francisco was unusually dull for all kinds of produce. Money easy and demand light. Receipts of gold dust satisfactory.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 13.

The steamship Philadelphia, which left Havana on the 9th inst. for New York, was at Charlestown yesterday. When off the coast of Florida she encountered heavy gales; on the 15th she broke her shaft and disabled her engines.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.

There is little, if any doubt but that the treaty long since proposed between the U. S and Nicaragua, was signed to day at the State department by General Cass and Senor Yrisarri. The Transit route is to be protected by U. S. Troops in the event of Nicaragua being unable to do so in consequence of foreign invasion civil insurrection or other domestic causes but with the return of peace the troops are to be withdrawn. It is further said that a free port is guaranteed at each end of the route.

It protects no company by name, but provides for the protecter of any company having an existing valid grant to be determined by Nicaragua, which shall recognise the obligation of this treaty. The government of Nicaragua has through its Minister, signified to that of the United States in writing, that the only Co. having such valid grant, is the American, Atlantic & Pacific Ship Canal Co, created by Nicaragua, Sept 22d, 1849, the charter of which, was amended on the 19th of June, and approved by the government of Nicaragua, in July last.

Yrisarri will be formall presented to the President to-morrow. The War department to-day received dispatches from the acting Governor of New Mexico, advising it of Col. Bonnouville's entirely successful expedition into the Gila country to chastise the Indians in that region.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.

The official despatches concerning the destruction of the supply train were received to-day, Brigham Young's proclamation declares martial law in Utah. He claims the right to do so by virtue of his authority as Governor of the Territory, and Superintendent of Indian Affairs, not having been suspended from exercising his functions, and by virtue of his power under the territorial organic act. He expressly forbids the United States troops entering the territory without his authority for doing so, and complains that the Mormons have not been treated as American citizens, and that the Government of the United States had acted on misrepresentations, the object being to drive the Mormons from the territory. The language of the proclamstion is emphatically in hostility to the U. S. It is regarded as declaring war. When Col. Alexander was within 30 miles of Ft Bridges, which place is occupied by Mormon troops, he received a letter from Brigham Young, through the commander of the Nauvoo Legion, warning the troops out of the territory, but saying if they desired to remain till spring, they may do so provided they will give up their arms and ammunition.

The Administration has received a schedule and outline of the Constitution of Kansas, and will sustain the action of the Convention with regard to the mode for its adoption, conceiving that the people thus have an opportunity of deciding the question in their own way.

RHEUMATISM--NEURALGIA.—The agonies of Rheumatism and Neuralgia are among the most acute with which the human frame is ever afflicted, and have heretofore been found the most difficult to remove. Happily a remedy is now discovered by which the most obstinate cases can be immediately cured.—This sovereign remedy is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT, for sale by Druggi ts generally. It is only necessary for the sufferer to try it, to be assured of its efficacy.

DR. J. C. AYER, the world renowned Chemist of New England, is now stopping at the Burnet house in this city. He has been making a tour of the Western States, with his scientific associates, to investigate their remedial productions, or such as he can make remedial. We notice he has been received with marked distinction by our leading citizens of the West and are rejoiced to find they have shown a proper estimate of the man who has perhaps done more for the relief of human ills than any other American.—Cincinnati Journal

The most skeptical people can be convinced by trial that all the family medicines are not humbug, and that among the thousand of butterfly life there are a few of great merit, and undoubted worth. Of these, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy stands first and foremost among the remedies of the day that can be relied on as a medicine that is all that is reccomended by its proprietors.

It advertises itself on every trial, for there are none who use it but tell their friends to do so, and so it goes from mouth to mouth till all the people of the Union have learned the good of this truly valuable medicine It is recommended with testimonials to prove its virtue for the cure of liver complaints of every kind, from the worst Dyspepsia to a common headache, and is particularly adapted to Jaundice, Deranged Stomach, Bowel Complaints and diseases of children.

One or two doses are said to cure a cold with scarce a failure It is worth a trial for this alone. It is prticularly adapted to use of ladies, particularly those of sedentary habits. Some ladies of the highest standing in society have given their certificates of its efficacy, and we say to all who are ailing, try one bottle, and you will never be without it.

Steamboat Marriages—A Good Hit.

The Philadelphia Bulletin, under the head of "Travelling Companions," has the following remarks, which are intended most likely, to supply several little scenes that have occured, of late, upon our Western waters. It says:

Half a dozen times within six months the public has been entertained with accounts of unprincipled wretches who were compelled, on board of Mississippi boat to marry young ladies with whom they had eloped. It is all of a peice with the cute business. Unthinking gentlemen, Mr. Green, has lady put under his charge by anybody, perhaps by gentlemanly stranger, who, in the confidence style, asks him to see her ashore, when they arrive at Suagville. Mr. Green rather fascinated by his young protege, more or less. Very dull on board steamboat, passengers tired to death. Mr. Green prosecutes intimacy and meets with bewildering success. Passengers continue to be very dull.—Mr. Green continues to advance. Passengers wouldn't mind a little scandal to pass the time. Green's young lady is observed by other ladies—kind, good, sweet, ladies—to cry a great deal in very conspicuous parts of the vessel, and suddenly muffle up her face and sob or else run. Lady passengers, full of pity, conclude at once that Green is a wretch. Ask girl if he isn't; girl "boo hoos." Grand indignation scene; gentlemen passengers hold a meeting; noble, impulsive hearts, let out their fine feelings; high toned moral captain looks grimly and virtously sagacious; winks to passengers. Takes Mr. Green aside, and bullies him about the girl; Green turns blue. Captain calls him a villain before folks, and orders a marriage forthwith Green declines—Captain produces 2 revolvers, a bowie and a clergyman. Green "caves in" and consents. Young lady overwhelmed, ladies overwhelmed, everybody overwhelmed, especially captain's clerk, who exchanges winks with the bride when unobserved by the rest of the party. All cheerful, captain stands champaigne, gentlemen joke Green, ladies all sympathy to bride, dinner and report in newspapers. Green tears up as a widower 3 days after among the Pelicans Bride has run away with portemonnaie and shirt-studs!

☞ 'Now what's the matter, madam,' said Buckley,—'surely there's no necessity of raising such a rumpus in the depot.'

'But I—boo hoo—But I want to go to Milwa-a-a-ky.'

'Well, madam, go right along to Milwaukee; there's no one to hinder you,' said Buckley.

'But I've niver a cint to take them there,' said she.'

'Them! Who?' said Buckley.

'The five chillern,' said the woman. 'Would yez take care of them?' screamed she.

'Take care of them!' shouted Buckley 'no, madam,—no, madam,—I'm not their father!'

'No, sur,' said she, subsiding into a whine, 'no, sir, you're not their fa a ther Their fa-a-ther—boo hoo—was—boo hoo—their fa-a-ther was a decent man!—boo hoo—boo hoo.'

Thirdly, had to take Long Credit, Orders and Accounts.

Lastly, I have been compelled to wait for payment of Goods sold on Six Months time, long enough for a man to visit California, get rich, and return, before payment could be forced or coaxed.

Now I wish to say, to my numerous friends and patrons, that I am thoroughly convinced that the mode of buying goods on time is both injurious to the buyer and seller.

I will hereafter Sell for Ready pay, at such prices that will defy all competion in this Town, State, or the United States.

Edward Everett on Agriculture.

Hon. Edward Everett delivered an address before the N. Y. State agricultural society, at Buffalo, on Friday the 9th inst. It closes with the following paragraphs.

A greater than Burke in this country, our own peerless Washington, with a burden of public care on his mind such as has seldom weighed upon any other person, conscious, through a considerable part of his career, that the success, not only of the American Revolution, but of the whole great experiment of Republican goverment was dependent, in no small degree, upon his course and conduct,—yet, gave throughout his life, in time of peace, more of his time and attention as he himself, in one of his private letters, informs us, to the superintendence of his agricultura operations than to any other subject. "It will not be doubted," says he in his last annual message to Congress, (7th December, 1796,) "that with reference either to individual or national welfare, agriculture is of primary importance. In proportion as nations advance in population and other circumstances of maturity this truth becomes more apparent, and renders the cultivation of the soil more and more an object of public patronage. * * * * *

Among the means which have been employed to this end, none have been attended with greater success, than the establishment of boards, charged with collecting and diffusing information, and enabled, by premiums and small pecuniary aids, to encourage and assist a spirit of discovery and improvement. On the 10th of December, 1799, Washington addressed a long letter to the manager of his farms—the last elaborate production of his pen—transmitting a plan, drawn up on 30 written folio pages, containing directions for their cultivation for several years to come. In seven days from the date of this letter his own venerated form was "sown a natural body, to be raised a spiritual body."

Nearly all the successors of Washington in the Presidency of the United States, both the deceased and the living, passed, or are passing, their closing years in dignified tranquility of rural pursuits. One of the most distinguished of them, Mr. Jefferson, invented the hillside plow. Permit me also to dwell for a moment on the more recent example of the 4 great statesmen of the North, the West and South, whose names are the boast and ornament of the last generation, Adams, Calhoun, Clay and Webster, who forgot the colossal anxieties, the stern contentions, the herculean labors and the thankless sacrifices of the public service, in the retirement of the country and the calm and healthful pursuits of agriculture. One of these four great men it was not my fortune personally to behold in the enjoyment of these calm and rational pleasures; but I well remember hearing him say, with a radiant countenance that there was nothing in the triumphs or honors of public life so grateful to his feelings as to return to his home in Carolina, at the close of the session of Congress, when every individual on his plantation, not excepting the humblest, came out to bid him welcome and to receive the cordial pressure of his hand. I was often the witness of the heartfelt satisfaction which Mr. Adams enjoyed on his ancestral acres, especially in contemplating the trees planted by himself, thousands of which are now scattered over the estate. While he ministered in this way to the gratification and service of other times, he felt that he was discharging no small portion of the debt which each generation owes to its successors. At Ashland, in 1829, I rode over his extensive farm, with the illustrious orator and statesman of the West; and as the "swinish multitude," attracted by the salt which he liberally scattered from his pocket, came running about us, in the beautiful woodland pasture, carpeted with that famous Kentucky blue grass, he good humoredly compared them to the office seekers who hurry to Washington at the commencement of an administration, attracted by the well flavored relish of a good salary. Mr. Webster reposing on his farm, at Marshfield, from the toils of the forum, and the conflicts of the Senate, resembled the mighty ocean, which he so much loved, which, after assaulting the cloudy battlements of the sky, with all the seething artillery of his furious billows, when the gentle southwest wind sings truce to elemental war, calls home his rolling mountains to their peaceful level, and mirrors the gracious heavens in its glassy bosom.

One more suggestion, my friends, and I releive your patience. As a work of art, I know of few things more pleasing to the eye, or more capable of affording scope and gratification, to a taste for the beautiful, than a well situated, well cultivated farm. The man of refinement will hang with never wearied gaze on a landscape by Claude of Salvator; the price of a section of the most fertile land in the West would not purchase a few square feet of the canvass on which these great artists have depicted a rural scene. But nature has forms and proportions beyond the painters skill; her divine pencil touches the landscape with living lights and shadows mingled on his pallet. What is there on earth which can more distinctly charm the eye, or gratify the taste, than a noble farm? It stands upon a southern slope, gradually rising with a vargate ascent from the north western winds by woody heights, broken here, there with moss covered boulders, which impart variety and strength to the outline. The native forest has been cleared from the greater part of the farm, but a suitable portion, carefully tended, remains in the wood for economical purposes, and to give a picturesque effect to the landscape.—The eye ranges three-fourths of the horizon over a fertile expanse,—bright with the cheerful waters of a rippling stream, a generous river, or a gleaming lake,—dotted with hamlets, each with its modest spire; and if the farm lies in the vicinity of the coast, a distant glimpse from the high grounds of the mysterious, everlasting sea, completes the prospect. It is situated off the high road, but near enough to the village to be accessible to the church, school-house, the post-office, the rail road, a sociable neighbor, or a traveling friend. It consists in due proportion of pasture and tillage, meadow, and woodland, field and garden. A substantial dwelling, with everything for convenience and nothing for ambition, with the fitting appendages of stable, and barn, and corn crib and other farm buildings, not forgetting a spring house with a living fountain of water, occupies upon a gravelly knoll, a position to command the whole estate.

A few acres on the front, and on the sides of the dwelling, set apart to gratify the eye with the choicer forms of rural beauty, are adorned with a stately avenue, with noble, solitary trees, with graceful clumps, shady walks, a velvet lawn, a brook murmuring over a pebbly bed, here and there a grand rock, whose cool shadow at sunset streams across the field; all displaying, in the real loveliness of nature, the original of those landscapes of which art, in its perfection, strives to give the counterfeit presentment.

To Boil Salted Cod.—Wash and brush a dried fish, and put it in a pot of cold water, in the morning; let it stand where it will keep warm until 11 o'clock, when you must change the water, putting in cold water, as at first. 20 minutes before you dine, put it on and boil it. Or you may bind 3 fish together, and boil them, taking the middle one for the table, and using the others for mince fish.

ONE DOLLAR WILL BUY

ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public: Named DR SANDFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REMEDY. Also acts as a Cathartic cleaner, milder and more effectual than any other medicine known. It is necessary to a cathartic but a Liver remedy acting first on the Liver to eject its morbid matter then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter. Does accomplishing two purposes effectually without any of the painful feeling experienced in the operation of most cathartics. It strengthens the system at the same time that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will regenerate and build it up with unusual rapidity.

DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects.

Though possessing the medical powers, these Gums have been found quite active in purifying and by some used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the Invigorator which met with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known in its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure Liver complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver and as a proof that the Invigorator relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses on retiring and it assists nature in her operations. By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work as regularly as clock work.

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the Invigorator, which corrects all acidity and sourness of the stomach.

For an over-loaded stomach it has no equal, as it relieves all oppressive or uneasy feeling after eating heartily. For a FAMILY MEDICINE generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints and all diseases arising from a Diseased Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to Dyspeptics for it made a complete cure before the first bottle was taken and now can eat anything edible without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain. Now what we want to say to all our readers is, if LIVER COMPLAINTS or DYSPEPSIA trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.—State Fact.

We take infinite pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER, and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty and thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of diseases incident to children as DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it, for it acts as a Cathartic so mildly and gently, and seems to remove at once the cause of disease, and the right way are doing a service to all in advising them when they need medicine, to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where great benefit has been received in diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels, where all other remedies failed to give relief. It had become so useful in our family that we will not be without it.—Jacksonville, Ills. Republican.

AYER'S Cathartic Pills,

(SUGAR COATED)

ARE MADE TO

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK.

Invalids, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Effects, and Judge of their Virtues.

FOR THE CURE OF

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach,

Prepared by J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Sir: I have been troubled with the worst headache any body can have, by a single dose of your Pills. It seems to relieve from a deep seated cause, when they cleanse at once. If they will cure others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. FIELD, Clerk of Steamer Chesapeake.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaint.

Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., 7 Oct., 1856.

Sir: I have used your Pills in my general practice ever since you made them, and cannot say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their leading action on the liver renders them peculiarly efficacious in all bilious derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M.D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

Post Office, Hartland, Liv. Co., Mich., Nov. 14, 1856.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell. She had been sick and pining away for months. We off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured. By expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from the body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad. my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, and others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctor bills, and lost much time, without being cured either even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

Dr. Ayer: I have used your Pills with almost success in my family and among those I am called to in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and the blood they are the very best remedy I have known, and I can confidently recommend them to friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

Warsaw, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1856.

Dear Sir: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to change system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M.D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my wife of one of the worst cases of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had become incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and loss of her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Pulaski House, Savannah, Ga., June 6, 1856.

Honored Sir: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which confined me to my room. Soon thereafter I had the best of physicians, but the pains grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of your nearest agent in Baltimore, Mr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were soon felt sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

Senator Chamber, Baton Rouge, La., 6 Dec., 1855.

Dr. Ayer: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years.

VINCENT ALLIBAN.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and as a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alternative action of these Pills.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, INFLUENZA, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town, and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country on this continent which have not some personal experience of its efficacy; and scarcely a community can be found where some of its citizens are not among the living trophy of its victory over the most dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds for believe the Cherry Pectoral saves more lives by its timely administration it prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable, and do not neglect them until no human skill can master the incipient cankor that, fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and they know too the virtues of this remedy, we need but say more than to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely upon it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.

Never fear to tell the Truth.

A story for Boys.

SMASH! went a pane of glass in the window of a small drug store as an iron hoop came bouncing against it. Up jumped the old gentleman who sat behind the counter reading a newspaper, and ran to the door, with the intention of catching the offender; but he was not so quick in his movements as the unfortunate owner of the hoop, and all that Mr. Beebe, the druggist, saw as he looked out, was a pair heels flying round the corner.

'You young rascal,' said he as he shook his fist in the direction of the fugitive, 'just let me catch you that's all!'

But while he is wasting his wrath on the air, let us follow poor Charley (for that was the window breaker) as he ran towards his house.

As soon as he caught sight of his neat little home, with the clean muslin curtain and a face behind them, which he fancied was his mother's he stopped, and said to himself. 'This isn't right—pshaw! what was I thinking of!' Then turning round he slowly retraced his steps towards the druggist's.

Mr. Beebe was in no very amiable mood when Charley went in, and the iron hoop which the latter still held in his hand did not help to mend matters.

'Are you the boy that broke my windows?' asked Mr. Beebe, getting up and seizing his cane in a threatening manner.

'Yes, sir, and I came to say that I was very sorry for it, and to know how much I am to pay for a new pane of glass.'

'You pay for it!' exclaimed Mr. Beebe; 'I don't believe you ever had money enough in your life to pay for that glass.'

'I've got two and ninepence, sir, at the same time putting the money on the counter, 'and I'll work for you and earn the rest if you'll let me."

'Can't your father pay for it?'

'I have no father, sir,' answered Charley rather sadly.

'Well, can't your mother pay for it?'

'She is very poor, sir, and I should hate to ask her for the money.'

'What made you run away when you broke the window?'

'Why, at first,' said Charley, hesitatingly, 'I was afraid I should get a beating.'

'What made you come back again, then?'

'Because I felt that I was acting like a coward, and I knew mother would be vexed with me, and I thought I had better do right and run the risk of your cane, than do wrong and make mother sorry.'

'Don't you call it doing wrong to break my window?'

'Yes, sir, because it was careless of me—mother says we are all apt to do wrong, and, when we do, we should atone for it; and I don't know what I can do except to give you all the money I've got, and try and earn more.' and poor Charles looked sadly out of the broken window.

Now, the fact was, Mr. Beebe was not half so cross as he looked; he was much pleased with Charley's conduct, and only questioned him to try him. 'What is your name?' inquired he.

'Charles Mann.'

'Where do you live?'

Charley told him.

'What does your mother do?'

'She takes in sewing, when she can get any, but she hasn't had any to do for a long while,' and Charley looked wistfully at his two-and-ninepence.

'Perhaps she'll be angry with you for giving me that money.'

'Oh! no sir. I know she would rather I would.'

'How old are you?'

'Twelve years old, sir.'

'And what do you do for a living?'

'Mother wanted to send me to public school, as long as she could earn enough to support us, but this morning she said she was afraid I should have to look around for something to do, as she couldn't get enough work.'

'Well, Charles, I believe I'll take you into my store until you can earn money enough to pay for the window, but I'm almost afraid you'll be breaking the bottles or jars every day.'

'I'll try to be more careful, sir.'

'Well, we'll begin to-morrow morning, and now go home to your mother.'

'Sha'nt I go to the glazer first.'

'Yes; do.'

And off went Charley; the heels flew just as they did before, but it was to a very different music this time. In the meantime, Mr. Beebe walked towards the farther end of the store, and, opening a door which led to the dwelling part of the house, he called his housekeeper, Mrs. Morgan. A trim, bustling little body appeared, and desired to know what he wanted. 'Mrs. Morgan,' said Mr. Beebe, 'didn't I see you making some shirts for me the other day.'

'Yes, sir.'

'How many have you made?'

This question rather flurried the little woman. She had never known her master to make such inquires before, and she was afraid he thought she did not get on fast enough with his work, so she answered with rather a frightened look—'Only three, sir; I have had to go so often to Widow Brown's since her little boy was sick, that I'——

'How many more have you cut out, to make?' asked Mr. Beebe, interrupting her.

'Three more, sir.'

'Well, I'm very glad you have not made more than three. Now, Mrs. Morgan, I want you to put on your bonnet, take a basket, and fill it with some tea and sugar and crackers, and any other little things of that kind you may happen to have in the closet, and take it to Mrs. Mann's, with those three shirts for her to make.'

'Don't I make your shirts neat enough, sir?—to be sure I can't see quite as well as I used to when I was young, but when I get on my magnifying glasses, I see to stitch pretty well.'

'You make them a great deal too neatly, Mrs. Morgan, and I think your eyes can be much better employed. Now, I want you to use them on this errand, and when you come home tell me all they have seen.'

'Who is Mrs. Mann, and where does she live, sir?'

'She is a poor woman who takes in sewing, and she lives in Norfolk-street, the first little white frame house on the left, with a green door.'

'Yes, sir; I suppose it won't hurt if I put some eggs and a little butter into the basket too," said she with a smile.

'I see you know just exactly what to put in much better than I do,' said he, with a nod of approbation; so saying, he went into the store again and took up his newspaper, while Mrs. Morgan prepared a basket full of good things that would have made a poor family happy on any Saturday night. When Charley left the store he hurried to the glazier's but he lived at some distance, and it was late before he reached home.

'Why my son,' said his mother, looking up with a sunny smile, when he entered 'what has kept you so long?'

'I met with an accident, mother,'

Mrs Mann looked anxiously at him to see if any bruises or wounds were visible, but his smiling face reassured her, and he proceeded to relate all the occurences of the afternoon. She commended his conduct, but gently chided his carlessness by saying, 'Well Charley, we have neither of us much money now; if you had been more careful we might have had a cup of tea to night, but as it is we must make milk and water do; and I'm sorry to say we have no more sugar.'

'Mother, are you sorry I gave Mr. Beebe the money?'

'No Indeed, dear, I would rather drink milk and water instead of tea, all my life than have you do anything mean; and let me tell you, Mr. Charley, some poor folks haven't got any milk, we ought to be very thankful that we have; and here's nearly half a loaf of bread; then to-morrow I hope to get some sewing, and perhaps you'll be able to earn a little money so I dare say we shall get along finely.'

But although the widow spoke cheerfully, a sigh finished the sentence

They were just going to sit down to tea, or rather to milk and water and bread, when a gentle rapping was heard at the door. Charley went to open it, and there stood a little woman with a basket on her arm, and a smile on her face so bright and pleasant, that I am sure she must have saved candles wherever she lived

'Does Mrs. Mann live here?' inquired she entering, and setting down the basket. (She must have been a strong little woman, for the basket was pretty heavy.)

'Yes, ma'am; will you walk in and take a seat?' said Charley, as he placed a chair for her.

'Thank you,' said she; then turning to Mrs. Mann, she said: Mr. Beebe, the druggist, requested me to bring you some sewing, some shirts to make.'

'I'm sure I'm much obliged to him for I have found it very hard to get work lately.'

'And he told me to bring you a few things in the way of tea and sugar; I suppose they won't come amiss,' said Mrs. Morgan as she began to unpack the basket; and as her eye glanced over the tea table she felt sure that she had come just in time.

The tears came in Mrs Mann's eyes, as she thanked her, and Charley couldn't say a word, but the good little woman cut short all thanks and bustled out, bidding them good evening, and promising to call soon.

'Mother,' said Charley as soon they were alone, 'my two and ninepence would not have bought all that,' and he pointed to the contents of the basket.

'Honesty is the best policy, Charley.'

How nice that cup of tea tasted, and what a pleasant evening they passed, as Mrs. Mann busied herself with her work and Charley talked over his plans for the following morning; and after the chapter in the Bible was read, and the nightly prayer repeated, how full the widows heart was as she kissed her boy good night.

Next morning he was up and dressed bright and early, his breakfast was ready for him, which he was not long in despatching, and he set of for the drug store with a light heart.

A little girl was sweeping it out, Mrs. Morgan was superintending the operation and as Charley entered, the latter bade him good morning with a cheerful smile, and said, 'You are to be our errand boy, are you?'

Yes, ma'am; shan't I sweep out the store?'

'Well, yes; I suppose that will be a part of your business, now,—so, Bridget you can give Charles the broom, and go and see about the breakfast.'

Biddy did not seem to be at all loth to yield the broom, and Charles began sweeping in good earnest. Mrs Morgan followed Bridget out, leaving Charles all alone. He made the place as neat as he could, and was just thinking what else to do when Mrs. Morgan came in again; she praised him for his 'notions of keeping things tidy,' as she expressed it. Just then Charles caught sight of the new pane of glass; the glazier had put in the night before, and of course left plenty of thumb marks around the edges. 'Hadn't I better wash the window, ma'am?' asked Charles.

'Oh, yes; I'll fetch you some water and towels,'—and away she bustled. She soon returned with the articles; needed and telling Charles to be careful, she left him again to go and attend to Mr. Beebe's breakfast, as Bridget was just ringing the bell, announcing that it was all ready.

Mr. Beebe was a widower; he had lost three children when they were very young and now he had no one to care for, and no one to care for him except, the good little Mrs. Morgan, and he never should have a want if she could help it. And now she was at the head of the table waiting to pour out his coffee.

'Good morning, Mrs. Morgan, said Mr. Beebe, as he came and took his seat at the table. 'I had no opportunity of speaking to you last night, did you find Mrs Mann?'

'Yes; and I got there just in the nick of time; they were just sitting down to tea and there was nothing on the table but some dry bread, and a little milk and water.'

'Has Charles come yet?, asked Mr. Beebe, after some time.

'Yes, sir; and I think he is a real nice boy and will save you lots of trouble.'

What is he doing now?'

'I left him washing the windows.'

'Bless my heart! I must go and see that he doesn,t break everything.'

'I don't think you need be afraid, sir,' said Mrs. Morgan smiling, as Mr. Beebe went towards the store.

Charles was putting the things carefully back into the window when Mr. Beebe went in, and the old gentleman seemed to think that Mrs. Morgan was right. During the day Charles made himself useful in several ways; he was naturally a smart active boy, and now gratitude to Mr. Beebe, and the idea of benefitting his mother, made him work with double energy. Mr. Beebe, began to wonder how he had ever got along without him.

Charles soon earned enough to make his mother comfortable, and his truth and honesty made him respected by all who knew him. 'Mother,' said he one evening, as they were sitting down to tea, and a plate of hot biscuit was smoking between a glass dish of apple sauce and a plate of smoked beef neatly sliced—'Mother, the best day's business ever I did was breaking Mr. Beebe's window.'

'No, Charles the 'best' was owning up to it honestly, and not being afraid to tell the truth.'—Forester's Playmate.

Uncle Snooks.

Uncle Snooks had a pretty hard time on't sometimes, when the women folks used to come and plague him about not selling any more to their husbands. There was one Barney Belcher, who drunk up his farm. They used to say his old cow choked him, because he ate the last of his stock, and died in a fit while he was drinking the very first dram that he bought with the money he got for her.—Barney's wife tormented Uncle 'Zeik from morning to night; and her persecution, together with the loss of his property, as I have always thought, drove him out of his business and shortened his days He was a proper firebrand. There was not a happier couple in our parish, when they first married; and they had a family of four little children, and everybody used to notice their neat appearance.—I've seen them many a time of a Sunday, going to meeting, hand in hand, and all four abreast, with their father and mother. Barney was a very thrifty farmer, and I never thought he was the man to die a drunkard. It used to be said that there hadn't been a likelier couple married in the parish for many ars; for though they had almost nothing to start with, yet they were, both of them, amazing handsome to look at; they were as smart as a couple of steel traps, and very industrious into the bargain. They did surprising well for several years. But he got to be an ensign, and rum and regimentals did the business for poor Barney, in less than no time. When he got to be pretty bad, she first came to the house, and then to the shop, to get Uncle 'Zeik not to let him have any more liquor.—They had a good many talks about it, but Uncle 'Zeik would have his way.—At last she consulted a lawyer, and came over to the shop, and gave uncle a real dressing, before more than a dozen customers.

'Well, Nelly Belcher;' said Uncle Zeik when she came in, resolved to be beforehand with her, 'what do you want to-day?'

'Mercy!' said she, 'if I cannot have it soon. You know well enough what I want. I now request you once again to sell my husband no more liquor.'

'And how can I help it?' said Uncle Zeik, somewhat disturbed by her resolute manner.

'I have taken a lawyer's advice,' said she, 'and you've no right to sell to common drunkards.'

'Do you say your husband is a common drunkard?' said he.

'To be sure I do,' she replied.

'I really do not think your husband is a common drunkard, Nelly Belcher,' said Uncle Zeik.

'Snooks,' said she clinching her fist, 'you are—what you are. You know that Barney is a common drunkard, and you made him so, you old—licensed, rum-selling church-member.'

'Go out of my shop,' cried Uncle Zeik, stepping towards her. 'I wouldn't touch the poor woman, Mr. Snooks;' said one the company; 'she's driven out on by the state of her husband and children.'—'Touch the poor woman!' cried Nelly, stretching herself up—and she was the tallest woman in the parish—'let him lay the weight of his finger on me if he dares, and though I'm poor enough in purse, Heaven knows, I'll show him I've the spirit of my father, who thrashed him when he was eighteen, for stealing a sheepskin. I won't go out of his shop, nor budge an inch, till I have said my say in the presence of ye all.'

'Nelly Belcher,' said Uncle Zeik, 'you'll have to pay for this.'

'Pay for it?' cried Nelly with a stammering voice, 'and havn't you got your pay already? Havn't you got homestead and the stock, and the furniture? And didn't Barney pawn the children's clothes last Friday, and bring you every cent he got for them? You've got every thing from the ridge pole down; you've got it all here among your wages of iniquity.; and as she said this, she gave a blow, with her fist, upon the top of Uncle Zeik's till, that made the coppers rattle pretty nicely I tell ye. 'Snooks,' said she, 'you've got everything. I havn't a pint of meal nor a peck of potatoes for my children. Stop—I'm mistaken; there's an old rum jug in the house, that's been in your house often enough; you ought to have that; and there is a ragged straw bed; you shall have them both, and any thing else you will find, if you don't let Barney have any more rum. You have made your bargain, Snooks, your own way; but there is a third party to it, and that is the devil. You have got poor Barney's money in your till, and the devil's got your soul in his fire-proof, and he'll keep it there safe till the day of judgement.'

Uncle Zeik offered Bijah Cody a handsome present if he'd turn her out of the shop. 'I'd a lettle rather not, Mr. Snooks,' answered Bijah, with a look that showed plainly enough how much he enjoyed Uncle 'Zeik's torment. 'Look here, Nelly Belcher,' said Uncle Zeik—and he was getting wrathy, for he stamped his foot pretty considerable smart—'the second Tuesday in November next, the court will sit, and you shall answer for this.'

'What care I for you court? replied she,' the time will come, and it may come this hour, when a higher court will sit; and you shall answer for more than all this, a thousand fold. Then, you cold hearted old man, I will lead my poor ragged children before the bar of a righteous God, and make a short story of their wrongs, and of that poor young man's who has fallen by your hand, just as surely as though you had killed him with rats-bane. There's none of you here that dosn't remember me and Barney when we were married. Now, I ask if you ever dreamed we should come to this? Was there ever a little farm better managed? And if I was not a careful, industrious wife to Banney, I wish you to say the very worst to my face. And were my little ones ill-treated? Hadn't they whole clothes for Sunday, and were they not constant at meeting for years, till this curse crept in among us like an adder? And till then did you ever see a likelier man than Barney? And as for his kindness for me and the children till that hour, it's for me to witness; and I say it before ye all, before he tasted liquor, there never was a hard thought or a bitter word between us. He was the boy of my foolish love when he was seventeen, and the man of my choice when he was three-and-twenty. I gave him an honest heart, that never loved another, and the trifle of worldly good that my mother left me; but he has broken the one and squandered the other. Last night, as I lay upon my straw bed with my poor children, I thought of our young days, and our little projects of happiness; as I saw poor Barney in my fancy, just the trim lad that he was, with his bright eye and ruddy cheek; I felt my eyes filling with tears, as they are filling now. I hope I may never shed another," said she, dashing them off with the back of her hand, and resuming her look of vengence. "I'm going to cross your threshold for the last time, and now mark me well. I ask you once for all to sell Barney no more liquor. If you do I will curse you till I die, as the destroyer of my husband; and I will teach my children to curse you when I am dead and gone, as the destroyer of their father."

* * * * * * * * * *

Uncle Snooks continued to sell to Barney Belcher as before, whenever he got any money. It was thought by a good many, that Nelly had lost her reason, or very near it about that time. She found out that Barney got rum at our shop; and sure enough she brought her four children and standing close to the shop door, she cursed uncle Zeik, and made them do so too. It worried him exceedingly. Whenever she met him she used to stop short and say over a form that she had, in a low voice; but everybody knew, by her raising her eyes and hands, that she was cursing Uncle Zeik. Very few blamed her; her case was a very hard one, and most folks excused her on the score of her mind's being unsettled by her troubles. But even then, she made her children obey her, whether present or absent, though it is said that she never struck them a blow. It almost made me shudder sometimes when I've seen these children meet uncle Zeik. They'd get out of his way as far as they could; and when he had gone by they'd move their lips, though you could not hear a word, and raise up their eye and hands, just as their mother had taught them. When I thought these children were calling down the vengeance of heaven upon uncle Zeik, for having made them fatherless, it made my blood run cold.

After the death of her husband, she became melancholy, and a great deal more so after the death of two younger children. She did not curse uncle Zeik after that. But she always had a talent for rhyming and she used to come and sit upon the horse block before our shop, and sing a sort of song that was meant to worry uncle Zeik, and it did worry him, especially the chorus. Whenever he heard that, he seemed to forget what he was about, and everything went wrong. 'Twas something like this—

"He dug a pit as deep as hell,
And into it many a drunkard fell;
He dug the pit for cordial pelf,
And into the pit he'll fall himself."

One time when poor Nelly sang the chorus pretty loud, and the shop was pretty full, uncle Zeek was so confused that he poured half a pint of rum, which he poured out, in his till, and dropped the change into the tin pot, and handed it to the customer.

I really felt for him; for about this time two of his sons gave him a sight of trouble. They used to get drunk and fight like serpents. They shut the old gentleman down cellar one night, and one of them, when he was drunk, slapped his father in his face. They did nothing but run him in debt; and at last he got to [illegible] care. Old Nelly was right; for uncle Snooks fell into his own pit before he died.

After the temperance society was formed he lost his license and got to be starving poor, and the town had to support him. He's been crazy several years. I went to see him last winter with father, who has tried to get him into the State hospital. It made me feel ugly to see him. He didn't know me; but all the time I was there, he kept turning his thumb and finger as though he was drawing liquor, or scoring it down with a bit of chalk upon the wall. It seemed as if he had forgotten all his customers but one; for though the wall was covered with charges of rum and brandy, and gin and flip, and toddy, the whole was down against Barney Belcher.

CHINESE SUGAR CANE.—Col. Leathers, a few miles from Covington, on the Lexington road, has been raising the Chinese Sugar Cane during the past summer, and as he deems, with great success. From a quarter of an acre, he obtained 8,000 stalks, which produced 90 gallons of clear golden colored, and well flavored molasses. The cane he ground aster it had been touched by frost he thinks turned out best. We also learned from Judge Moore, who returned on Saturday from Falmouth where he has been holding Court, that the Farmers about Falmouth, have turned a great deal of attention to this cane, and are making a great vuantity of molasses. —*Cin. ☞ God is often lost in prayers and ordinances. "Enter into thy chamber," said He, "and shut thy door about thee." "Shut thy door about thee," means much; it means—shut out not only frivolity, but business; not only the company abroad, but the company at home; it means—let the poor soul have rest and refreshment and God have an opportunity to speak to thee in a still small voice, or He will speak in thunder. I am persuaded the Lord would often speak more softly if we would shut the door.

Smooth softly back her rich dark hair,
Clasp close each weary hand,
For she who was late so full of life,
Now sleeps in the silent land.
Love's strongest chains were powerless,
Love's deepest tones unheard,
As the call of the star crowned Angel
She passed like a swift free bird.
And he who won her pure deep love,
Must pass through earth alone,
For he never may hope a dream again
As bright as he hath known;
For the tones it was music once to hear
His heart will vainly yearn
She hath passed the solemn gates of pearl
And will no more return.
'Tis hard to say "God's will be done,"
For Him wrong can not exist
Where sharpest thorns still choke the flowers'
Upon life's weary track.
When the cup we drink though fair to see
Hath ashes upon its brim,
And eyes that flash with the happiest light
The first with tears grow dim.
'Twas best that she should pass away,
Ere youths' sweet dreams had fled,
But alas, that she so well beloved,
Must sleep among the dead.

Correspondence of the Tecumseh Herald.

Minnesota.

SAUK RAPIDS, M. T. Nov. 1st, 1857.

DEAR EDITOR:—While at your place, about a month since, alarming rumors were in circulation, in relation to the Indians in this Territory. Such was the character of these reports, with so much of particularity, of place and date, that, though I had lived in the Territory, for a period of six years, and had been absent but a few weeks, I confess, that I was apprehensive myself, that there might be trouble here among the settlers, occasioned by some marauding band of Sioux or Chippewas.

It was reported, that near this town, hostile Indians had been seen; and that they had threatened the destruction of certain communities with which they had become displeased.

I have now been at home three weeks, and, from certain knowledge, gained by careful inquiry, I can state positively that these reports of Indian difficulties here, are without the slightest foundation in fact. Not only have no Indian depredations been committed, but no hostile Indians have been seen in this whole region of country. I believe, when at your place, I informed you of the summary punishment of three Indians, by the citizens of Little Falls, 30 miles above this place, for the alleged murder of a German, who was selling spurious jewelry with bad whiskey, to the Indians at Gull Lake, in the early part of August last. This German was killed on Indian territory, vending liquor in violation of the law; and it is generally believed, that the act was done by the Indians when maddened and drunk from the fire-water the German had sold them. The occurrence indicated no enmity of the Indians towards our people; for the perpetrators of the deed were pointed out to the whites by the Gull Lake Indians themselves.

This is the only Indian disturbance that has occurred in this part of the territory for years;—it occurred before I left, and occasioned not the slightest alarm. The reports above referred to, had no allusion to it whatever, but to other Indians and another locality.

I desire to state to you, and your readers, distinctly, and from certain information, that the various tribes of Indians now within the boundaries of Mininnesota, are on perfectly friendly terms with whites; that the Chiefs and Headmen both of annuity Indians, and others, have since the Spirit Lake difficulty, given our Government agents repeated assurance of their desire to be on friendly terms; and that they have denied taking any part with and disavowed all sympathy for Inkpadutah and his band, who were guilty of the Spirit Lake massacre.

These vague rumors of Indian wars, and in fact, anything in connexion with the Indians, bearing against the interest of the whites, are always caught up abroad and by many believed, however exaggerated and incredible they may be, and when wholly unfounded, as in the present instance, it is due as well to those having friends or relatives here, as to the name and prosperity of Minnesota that they should be promptly refuted by those whose long residence in the territory may be a guarranty of the correctness of their statements. Respectfully yours.

The Kansas Constitutions.

We confess ourselves surprised at many things reported to have transpired with regard to this matter, and which if true, are enough to stamp with infamy all who in any way countenance or are connected with them.

The following which we take from the Michigan Argus, the Democratic Organ of Washtenaw Co., edited by E. B. Pond of Ann Arbor, formerly of the Coldwater Sentinel, so entirely expresses our views upon this subject, that we cheerfully receive and adopt it as our own.

The intelligence from Kansas announces that the Constitutional Convention has completed its labors and adjourned. The constitution or its details, has not reached us, and we are, therefore, unprepared to pronounce our opinion of the document as a whole. We have some facts, however, that induce us to believe that the labors of the convention will not prove acceptable to the people of Kansas, and that it ought to be, and will be, rejected by Congress.

The slavery question is disposed of in a single section, which tolerates, legalizes, regulates, and provides checks against getting rid of the 'domestic institution' This clause is to be submitted to the people, and, of course, if a fair expression of the qualified voters of the Territory is had, it will be rejected by a large majority — What provisions are made to obtain such a fair expression, we cannot say, but unless such provisions are liberal and satisfactory the expression obtained under them will go far nothing It is the fixed determination of the Administration, and of the Democratic party it represents, that the people, not a few of them, but the whole people of Kansas, shall regulate their own affairs, and settle their institutons for themselves Hence, not only the slavery section, but the entire constitution should have gone from the Convention to the people.

We regard the non submission of the constitution to the people as fatal There may be very objectional clauses and provisions in it, not to be found in the section upon slavery. One section is not the constitution, and the submission of a single section is not the submission of the constitution. The constitution adopted by a convention is not to be supposed to be the constitution of a Territory. A convention may fairly represent the wishes of its constituents. It may be expected to do so if its constituents are to have the privilege of passing judgement upon its action; but if its action is to be considered final, the members will be likely to consult their own, individual opinions, and especially in cases where they—as in the Kansas Convention—really represent only a small minority of the people for whom they assume to act.

Another objectinal feature in the constitution, if reports are correct, is, that it undertakes to deprive the people at least temporarily, of providing their own government, by creating a provisional government, and legislating into office of certain officers of the convention, thus superseding the present government of the Territory by a government not the choice of the people, an irresponsible concern, answerable to no one for its acts. In view of the difficulties which have existed in Kansas, the flagrant attempts of outsiders to interfere and control the elections and legislation of the Territory, and the jealousy which exists among the people, this establishment of a 'provisional' and irresponsible government cannot be too severely condemned. It was action wholly uncalled for, and is only designed to get rid of Gov. Walker, that frauds may the more readily be perpetrated in conducting the elections to be held under the new constitution, and prior to an election for State officers This design is so palpable that the Administration, we apprehend, will keep a close look to the future elections of the Territory.

Again, it is said that the constitution was really adopted by only a large minority of the convention, a vote of 28 to 4, 28 elected members being absent or not voting This being true, unless sanctioned and adopted by a majority vote of the whole people at a fairly conducted election, it has no claims to be the constitution of the State of Kansas, and the recognition of it as such by Congress would be a complete overthrow of the principle of popular sovereignty.

It is announced, we do not know with what truth, that the free State men of Kansas will refuse to participate in the election on the 21st of December, at which time the slavery section is to be submitted for approval or disapproval.—If the constitution is really objectionable, aside from the slavery clause, we do not see how they can well do otherwise, although we shall regret the necessity of their withholding their votes. It would seem that a trap is designed in the mode of submission, and while the whole constitution is apparently submitted, that the slavery section alone is voted on. From a news article—see another column—we learn that the voting is to be by ballot, and that the ballots are to be endorsed, 'Constitution with Slavery,' and 'Constitution without Slavery.' If this statement be correct, every voter must vote for the constitution, or he cannot vote against slavery. This, to strikes me, is a paltry trick, designed to make men vote for what they do not approve, and for what may be really objectionable, if they will vote against slavery.

The Administration, in justice to itself, or the Democratic party, cannot count this a submission of the constitution to the people. It is no such submission, and unless the whole, or a large majority of the bona fide citizens of Kansas are content with such a partial submission, and participate in the election, we trust that Congress will reject it forthwith and order a new constitution. It is too late in the day to practice such an imposition and it cannot hope for approval.

General News.

CINCINNATTI, Nov 23.

The steamer Republic arrived at Louisville on Saturday night. She reports 16 canal boats sunk during the storm of Wednesday last, in the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, near Cairo, and 100 men lost with 300,000 bushels of coal, valued at $36,000. The crews were principally from Pittsburg.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.

The steamer Atlantic arrived last evening with Liverpool dates to the 11th ult. She brings $128,000. The Asia had arrived out on the 9th, and the Kangaroo on the 7th. On Saturday the 7th, shortly after the departure of the Niagara, the suspension of Dennistown & Co., one of the largest firms connected with the American trade in Great Britain, was announced. Their liabilities are estimated at something like £2,700,000 sterling. The head establishment of the house is in Glasgow. Branches in London, Liverpool, New York, New Orleans and Melbourne, Australia. The Melbourne firm is not comprised The almost total cessation of remittances from America is the immediate cause of the suspension. The private property of the partners is of great magnitude and it is presumed that the embarassment will be but temporary.

The following failures were reported: Babcock & Co., of Liverpool, Glasgow and New York. A surplus of assets confidently expected. Liabilities £200,000 Henry Dukhill & Co., of Liverpool Joseph Foote & Sons, Silk manufacturers of London, with liabilities of more than £40,000, assets fully equal. The share market was considerably lower on Thursday, under heavy sales.

The London Morning Post declares that the Bank of England has succeeded in enlarging credit and checking industry and has failed in giving an inward direction to the gold currency.

A letter from Hamburgh of the 7th, reports a panic in the stock exchange there There was a great want of specie, and bills of exchange were almost unsaleable In American securities business was limited and tendency downward.

The funds were bonyant throughout the day, and advances of half per cent. In consols took place. Taxations for discounts at the Banks continues extremely heavy.

At Hamburg the rate of discount had advanced to 9½ per cent.

On Monday, the 9th, the Bank of England raised its rate of discount from 9 to 10 per cent.

The Western Bank of Scotland, at Glasgow, with a paid up capital of £1,500,000, and deposits supposed to amount to £6,000,000, closed its doors on the 9th. This bank maintained an immense business in Glasgow,, and had about 100 branches scattered over Scotland The suspension caused great dismay; but as the proprietary numbers many very wealthy men no individual loss is feared. The Bank had active connection with America and with American houses in Glasgow.

Paris letters report the large American House of John Munroe & Co., as having stopped payment. The failure of Gallarkamp Bros. at Amsterdam, was announced.

A deputation from Liverpool united to that from Glasgow, for the purpose of indocing the Government to take steps in the financial results, had been obtained. The Manchester Commercial Association declined joining in the movement.

On Thursday the funds were quite bouyant and closed at considerable advance.—The official closing quotations were 88¾ a 89⅞; but afterwards some sales at 88⅞ a 89 for money, 88¾ a 89 ⅛ for account.

Sovereigns to the amount of £300,000 or £400,000 were taken from the Bank for Scotland. The fall of the Western Bank having caused a run on some of the other principal banks at Glasgow and elsewhere, including the Savings Bank.

In mercantile quarters there was rather less uneasiness, but the applications for discounts were still very pressing.

CINCINNATTI, Nov. 24

Private despatches in the Commercial, give some particulars of the burning of the steamer Rainbow. There were 347 passengers aboard, including a large number of coal boatmen on deck. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary, attributed to the deck passengers. The total number of passengers lost is estimated at 75. As soon as the fire was discovered, the boat was run ashore, where she burned to the water's edge.—The wind blew a stiff gale, and in a few minutes after the fire broke out, the boat was enveloped in flames. The steamer Minnehaha, from New Orleans, brought the saved to Memphis, among which are the following:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23

The visit of Sir Wm. Gore Ouseley to the President on Saturday, was one of courtesy merely. He has not officially informed him of the precise character of his mission.

The War Department has designated two columns of military for Utah from the Pacific side, one from Oregon and the other from California.

I understand, from reliable sources, that Count D'Sartiges, the French minister, has received dispatches from Paris, announcing the appointment, on the part of the Imperial Government, of a special minister, to Central America, to arrange with Sir Wm Gore Ouseley and such person as may be appointed on the part of the U. S. Government, the vexed questions pending between the States of Central America and the Great Powers. The diplomatist who has been selected by the Imperial Government is M. Felix Belley, a distinguished literateur and politician.

MOFFAT'S LIFE PILLS AND PHOENIX BITTERS.

RHEUMATISM--NEURALGIA.—The agonies of Rheumatism and Neuralgia are among the most acute with which the human frame is ever afflicted, and have heretofore been found the most difficult to remove. Happily a remedy is now discovered by which the most obstinate cases can be immediately cured.—This sovereign remedy is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT, for sale by Druggi ts generally. It is only necessary for the sufferer to try it, to be assured of its efficacy.

DR J. C. AYER, the world renowned Chemist of New England, is now stopping at the Burnet house in this city. He has been making a tour of the Western States, with his scientific associates, to investigate their remedial productions, or such as he can make remedial. We notice he has been received with marked distinction by our leading citizens of the West and are rejoiced to find they have shown a proper estimate of the man who has perhaps done more for the relief of human ills than any other American.—Cincinnati Journal.

The most skeptical people can be convinced by trial that all the family medicines are not humbug, and that among the thousand of butterfly life there are a few of great merit, and undoubted worth. Of these, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy stands first and foremost among the remedies of the day that can be relied on as a medicine that is all that is reccomended by its proprietors.

It advertises itself on every trial, for there are none who use it, but tell their friends to do so, and so it goes from mouth to mouth till all the people of the Union have learned the good of this truly valuable medicine It is recommended with testimonials to prove its virtue for the cure of liver complaints of every kind, from the worst Dyspepsia to a common headache, and is particularly adapted to Jaundice, Deranged Stomach, Bowel Complaints and diseases of children.

One or two doses are said to cure a cold with scarce a failure It is worth a trial for this alone. It is particularly adapted to use of ladies, particularly those of sedentary habits Some ladies of the highest standing in society have given their certificates of its efficacy, and we say to all who are ailing, try one bottle, and you will never be without it.

CONSOLIDATED LECTURES.—We notice Dr. C. W. Lawrence and Prof. W. J. Hart have consolidated their lectures, and reduced the price of admission to 10cts. Mr. H. pictures life at sea, in all its vicissitudes. We hope they will visit us this winter.

BURNED—HORRIBLE DEATH.—Mr. John Gray living three miles north of this village, left his dwelling to do some trading at Clinton on Tuesday, and had proceeded about a mile, when looking back, he discovered his house was on fire. He returned immediately but could not enter, the house. His little daughter 5 years old, took the babe from the cradle and carried it out, and returned to carry her mother out, but had not sufficient strength.—Mrs. Gray, was subject to fitts, and it supposed, was burned under the effects of one.

A CURE.—It is said that inflammatory rheumatism can be cured by the following simple method which we extract from a medical publication:—Half an ounce of pulverized saltpeure put in half a pint of sweet oil. Bathe the parts affected, and a sound cure will immediately follow.

SICK HEADACHE.—Two teaspoonsful of finely powdered charcoal, drunk in a half tumbler of water will of give relief to the worst headache, when caused, as in most cases it is by a superabundance of acid on the stomach.

Oak Grove Academy.

The Next Term of OAK GROVE Academy, at Michigan, will commence Monday, Nov., 30th, under charge of its present teachers.

A PLEASANT AFFAIR.—One day last week, says the Eastern Argus, a merchant of Gardiner, Me., offered to give a barrel of flour to Rev. C. Blake, a Baptist minister in that city, provided the young ladies would haul it to him. To this they consented, and having obtained a small set of trucks, the barrel of flour was placed thereon, and 40 young ladies took hold of the ropes and drew the barrel about a mile, up one of the steepest hills in the city, to the minister's house. The Brunswick Band, seeing what was going on, joined the procession, and played some excellent music. There was a large crowd to witness the proceedings, and a cabinet maker brought out a very handsome rocking chair, which he fastened to the barrel, and let it go as an additional present to the minister.

Jackon Branch Mich Sou. Rail Road.

This road is at last drawing near completion, and we already hear the whistle of the locomotive on the construction train within two miles of the city. On a visit we paid to the road, last Saturday, we found large bodies of men actively at work within a mile of the terminus, preparing the Road for its iron superstructure, which we are assured will be laid and the running into the city in less than two weeks from the present time. The Depot grounds are located on the flats directly at the foot of, and facing Washington Street, and buildings will be erected on the completion of the road. Great credit is due to Mr. Gardner, the contractor and builder of the road, for the able manner in which he has pushed forward the work, notwithstanding the stringency of the times and the extreme depression of all Rail Road stock.

To our citizens, this Road, when in active operation, will be of great benefit, affording at all times an easy means of transit to the southern and eastern parts of the State, and it is destined to become the great highway of travel to those North and West in going East. We hope our citizens, on the advent of this road, will celebrate it with bonfires and rejoicings—the like of which Jackson has never yet seen.—Jackson Patriot.

☞ The devil bargained for the soul of a young man. The devil was to furnish all the money Young America could spend and if he did not spend it as fast as fast as it came his soul was the forfeit.—For several years Young America kept ahead of the devil by the aid of women, wine, horses, &c., but the fiend made a large deposit with him, which it seemed impossible to get rid of. Young America as a last resort, started a newspaper. The devil growled at the end of the first quarter, was savage at six months, sad at nine and owned up 'dead broke' at the end of a year. The newspaper went down but the soul was saved.

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BRISTOL, Mass., 20th Dec. 1856.
DR. J. C. AYER: I do not hesitate to say the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the concomitant symptoms of Cold, is your CHERRY PECTORAL. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of these complaints. EDEN KNIGHT, M. D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your Pectoral myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

BRAINTREE, Mass., Feb. 7, 1856.
DOCTOR AYER: I with gratefully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases consequent upon a cold. Your medicine has become as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.
SIR: YOUR CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY B. PARES, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., ALBION, Monroe Co., Iowa, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some do human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

APPLE HILL, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856.
DOCTOR AYER: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We these blacklines, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that date. She is but yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,
ORLANDO SHELLEY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win an unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distempers, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Disorders and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be suposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S Pills, and take nothing else. No other drug can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them and they should have it.

I have tried during Nineteen Years of my life the various modes of doing business

Firstly for Cash.
Secondly on Short Credit.
Thirdly, had to take Long Credit, Orders and Accounts.

Lastly, I have been compelled to wait for payment of Goods sold on Six Months time, long enough for a man to visit California, get rich, and return, before payment could be forced or coaxed.

Now I wish to say, to my numerous friends and patrons, that I am thoroughly convinced that the mode of buying goods on time is both injurious to the buyer and seller.

I will hereafter Sell for Ready pay, at such prices that will defy all competion in this Town, State, or the United States.

No one should buy a dollars worth of Goods without calling at the

Great Western Cash Store,

and get the prices. Some are so unfortunate as to be compelled to trade at long credit stores—to those I would say, Call and See what you can save by having the Ready or something as good, to use where you please.

AGRICULTURAL.

The Farm Girls of New England.

Simon Brown, Editor of the New England Farmer, speaking of the condition of the young women in the farming districts of New England says:

I find a large proportion of the young women willing to remain upon the farm so long as brothers will stay, and society is made up of two sexes instead of one. On their part they are fitted to adorn society,—are usually well educated, read papers and current books, and are often acquainted with classical literature; they are quick to "catch the manners living as they rise," and prove that Paris is but a step from their rural homes. Honitons and talmas and ormolines, rustle on the hills or by their crystal streams with more unaffected grace than on the dusty pave of Boston and New York, while their fair occupants are buoyant with health and elastic spirits and fitted to dignify and bless existence. Such should become the mothers of our land. In all my rambles I find parents left childless upon large farms, deploring the absence of sons at California or the West, and the once productive acres and tidy buildings, neglected and going to decay. I said to the only child remaining at home, of a large and prosperous family. "The farm has its advantages as well as the city, and there are less temptations to err." "Yes," said Rebecca, "the farm has its attractions but it lacks society—it is a life of confinement, too; dairy demands constant attention, and hard work, and hired men are sometimes difficult to please, after we have labored carefully to provide for them. Society is broken and meagre, the young men flee to the city, or wander to foreign lands, leaving the young women in the charge of the farm, and to soothe and comfort the declining days of their parents." Such was the language of a highly intelligent, affectionate and noble woman, and it represents the sentiments of a large class. Who has eloquence and persuasion enough to arrest the attention of young men, and convince them that in leaving the homes of their fathers and of their own childhood, they leave priveleges and advantages already established, which it may take a life of labor to acquire in distant lands!

From the Boston Cultivator.

Manuring Orchards.

Your correspondent is right in conjecture, that the disease of the orchard of Mr. Hale arises from the circumstance of the land having been dressed so plentifully with dung. We all, no doubt, have heard of the destruction of the cherry orchard in Kent, England the land for which had been trenched 2 feet deep and the trenches nearly filled with dung and how that the trees flourished amazingly the first year after planting but not a tree produced a leaf or bud the second season; and that on examination, the roots were found to have reached the buried dung, which caused the death of every tree root and branch.

Some years since, Dr. Noble, of Philadelphia, purchased a farm, in Delaware, and in enlarging a cattle yard he enclosed a portion of an apple orchard in full bearing, many persons supposing that they would be exceedingly benefited by having the surface always covered with a quantity of dung while feeding and yarding cattle; but in a very short time, not a tree remained alive, to which fact I am witness. And if small things may be compared with great I have at this time a myrtle tree that has been for years growing in the same box, I some time since removed the surface mould and filled its place with perfectly well decomposed hen manure as a reviver but was surprised to find that in a very short time, the tree showed symptoms of sickness; the lower leaves fell off and the tops turned red and blue, ere I entertained the idea of poison from the dung, and it was just in time that by removing the dung and leaching repeatedly the earth in the box. that I succeeded in saving the tree, a mere wreck of what it had been, requiring the growth of another year to repair in any tolerable degree the evil. P. P.

CURIOSITIES.—Whiskers from the cat that was let out of the bag.—A coffin for the dead of night.—The rope with which Jacob lifted up his voice.—A few stitches taken by a tailor in a coat of paint.—A little perfume from the flower of the army.—A few soaked logs from the drift of a discourse.—A leaf from the tree of knowledge.

40,000 Subscribers to Start With

The Publishers are happy to announce that in the fusion of these periodicals the best literary and artistic talent of both publications has been secured, and the most attractive features of each will be retained in the consolidated work.

It will always be our aim to secure the choicest productions of native authors and artists, and the best efforts of American artists, both in literature and art.

It will be purely national in character, in its criticisms it will aim to be just and truthful, and will be careful to preserve and cultivate that wholesome moral and religious tone so highly cherished by the American public, and so essential to the welfare of the race.

We shall endeavor, by expending one of the extensive resources now at our command, to make a Magazine that in the richness of its literary contents, and in the beauty and profuseness of its pictorial illustrations, shall outrival any publications ever before produced in this country.

The new issue commences with the October number, which is now ready. It is filled with the choicest productions of some of the most brilliant writers of the day, and is embellished with forty-four splendid original engravings. It appears in a new dress, embracing an elegant classical design on the cover, and the entire work presents the most attractive appearance. It is pronounced by all who have seen it to be the most beautiful specimen of a magazine ever issued in this country.

Patent Medicines.

ONE DOLLAR WILL BUY

ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public, namely, DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REMEDY, that acts as a Cathartic, sweet, mildest and more effectual than any other medicine known. It is not only a Cathartic, but a Liver remedy, setting first on the Liver to eject its morbid matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off the matter; thus accomplishing two purposes at once, and with as much safety and pleasantness in the operations of most Cathartics. It strengthens and the system at the same time that it purges it, and what is of much more importance, it does it safely. Without any of the painful suffering experienced in the operations of most Cathartics. It strengthens and builds it up with unusual rapidity. It is to be used daily in moderate doses with strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects.

Though possessing rare medical powers, these Gums have been but little known to Physicians and never used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the Invigorator, which met with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known in its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure Liver Complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver, and as a proof that the Invigorator, relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses on retiring, and it assists nature in her operations. By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work as regularly as clock work.

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the Invigorator, which corrects all acidity and rearness of the stomach.

For an over-loaded stomach it has no equal, as it relieves all oppressive or uneasy feeling after eating heartily. For a family medicine generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints, and all diseases arising from a Diseased Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it, and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to Dyspeptics, for it made a complete cure before the first bottle was taken, and no we can eat anything edible without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain. Now what we want to say to all our readers is, if Liver Complaints or Dyspepsia trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.—State Pact.

We take infinite pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER, and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty, and thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of diseases as has been manifested in DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR; nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it; for it acts as a Cathartic and purifier, and, and in order to renovate the system so thoroughly that we think we are doing a service to all in advising them, when they need anything, to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where great benefit has been received in diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels, where all other remedies failed to give relief. It had become so useful in our family that we will not be without it.—Jacksonville, Ala. Republican.

AYER'S Cathartic Pills,

(SUGAR COATED,)

ARE SAID TO

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK.

Invalids, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Effects, and judge of their Virtues.

FOR THE CURE OF

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach,

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Piles, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, and Kidney Complaints.

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir: I have long experienced the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to settle from a foul stomach, and they cleanse at once. If they will cure others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. FREBLE, Clerk of Supreme Court.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, WASHINGTON, D. C., 7 Feb., 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice, ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their operating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO HALL, M.D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

POST OFFICE, HARTLAND, LIV. CO., MICH., Nov. 16, 1855.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and, pining away for months. We gave her off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. She then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her, by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our youngest child of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, which others around us paid from five to twenty Dollars doctor's bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to see in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WABASH, WYOMING CO., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1855.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved intractable for years. My mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and is now entirely relieved by a few doses of your Pills, and they have cured her hair. After one child was cured, who also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

PLANTERS HOUSE, SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, BATON ROUGE, La., 5 Dec., 1855.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SEBIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, INFLUENZA, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town, and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Any, few indeed, are families in any civilized country on this continent without some personal experience of its effects; and fewer yet are the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the CHERRY PECTORAL saves more lives by its early assumptions it prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable, nor suffer them until no human skill can master the insidious canker that, fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and all they know too the virtues of this remedy. We need not say more than to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it in the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely on it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.

Mrs. Lofty keeps a carriage,
So do I;
She has dapple greys to draw it,
None have I;
With my blue-eyed laughing baby,
Trundling by,
I hide his face, lest she should see
The cherub boy and envy me.

Her fine husband has white fingers,
Mine has not;
He could give his bride a palace,—
Mine a cot;
Hers come home beneath the starlight,— No'er cares she;
Mine comes in the purple twilight,
Kisses me,
And prays that He who turns life's sands
Will hold his loved ones in His hands.

Mrs. Lofty has her jewels,
So have I;
She wears hers upon her bosom;
Inside I;
She will leave hers at Death's portal,
Bye and bye;
I shall bear my treasure with me
When I die,
For I have love and she has gold,
She counts her wealth—mine can't be told.

She has those who love her—station,
None have I;
But I've one true heart beside me,
Glad am I;
I'd not change it for a kingdom,
No, not I;
God will weigh it in His balance,
Bye and bye,
And the difference define
Twixt Mrs. Lofty's wealth and mine.

Hard Times.

Or the Philosopher's Stone.

By Oliver Optic.

CHAPTER I.

'What makes you so dull this morning, Ella?' inquired Mr. Chester, a merchant in a small way of his wife.

They had been married about a year, and thus far not an ill-natured word had been spoken by them. At his marriage, Chester had taken a small but convenient house in the upper part of the city. He had been able to furnish it in a plain manner; but since his marriage, his business had added many articles of luxury to his small establishment.

The times had began to tighten up, however, and business was dull. The notes were due; and he had to bester himself to make his payments. Fortunately for him, however, as the stringency in the money market began to weigh most heavily, his father's administrator placed him in possession of two thousand dollars, which had been reserved to await the contingency of a law suit, and which had now been satisfactorily settled.

With this sum he had been able to pay his more pressing demands, and to lay by a surplus of five hundred dollars to meet a note which would fall due some months hence.

The receipt of this sum induced him to increase the luxuries of his house. The parlor had to be newly furnished, and the old parlor furniture placed in the sitting room. They had everything that was necessary for comfort, or creditable appearance in the world.

'You look so very dull,' continued the husband, as he rose from the breakfast table.

Ellen looked at him with a languid smile, but made no reply.

'What ails you?'

'I was thinking how lonesome I should be here all day,' replied she.

'Lonesome? Why don't you go out and take the air? Walk down Washington street, and round the common—it will revive your spirits.'

'How absurd you talk! Walk round the common in the month of December! Why I should freeze to death.

'Not so bad as that,' replied the young husband chucking his wife under the chin. 'Go to the Athenæum and see the pictures.'

'I couldn't do that every day, and you don't know how lonesome I am.'

'Can't you read?'

'I don't want to read all the time.'

'Read part of the time, then.'

'But, Fred, I have been thinking of something,' and a smile played about the pretty lips of the young wife.

'What, Ellen?'

'I miss something in our house.'

'Do you?'

'O, very much indeed.'

'Well, Ellen, what is it?'

A piano; it would be so very nice to practice these long dreary days. I should be as happy has a princess if I only had a piano.'

Mrs Chesters father was in affluent circumstances, and before she was married she had been accustomed to many luxuries which husbands limited means would not permit him to provide.

'But, Ellen, I cannot afford a piano. The times have not been so hard for ten years.'

'You have five hundred dollars in the bank.'

'But I reserved that to pay a note.'

'Don't you expect to make enough to pay it?'

'It is very doubtful; my business hardly pays expenses.'

'You will be able to pay that, I know,' continued the petitioner.

'Well, my dear, you shall have the piano.'

'You are a dear husband! You will get me one of Chickering's?'

'Any kind you please, my dear.'

And before dinner time the instrument came home, and Mrs. Chester was as happy as a piano could make her, albiet she had little idea of the significance of 'three per cent. a month,' and protested notes.

CHAPTER II.

Men said the times would be better, but the prophesy was vain. Merchants failed, brokers failed, banks and insurance companies failed. Business was duller than it had been for the last twenty years. Poor men lounged at the corners of the streets, vainly waiting for a job, while their wives and children shivered with the cold, and hungered even for a crust of bread. Ruin and disease were the order of the day, and men wondered where would be the end of it all.

Fred Chester's business did not pay his shop expenses, to say nothing of his household, and when that note fell due he'd not a dollar towards redeeming it. Ruin stared him in the face, and it was now his turn to look sad.

Five hundred dollars was a small sum, yet he could not raise it. Even three per cent. a month without 'collateral' would not procure it. Something must be done. Some friend must get him out of the scrape, or he would certainly fail. His wife's father was wealthy, but he married his daughter against his wishes, and there was no hope in that quarter — But Ellen's uncle, a blunt, honest master mason, had always looked kindly upon him, and perhaps he would open his purse-strings.

The note was due on the following day, and he decided to make the application to Uncle Luke, as he was familiarly called.

In the course of the afternoon, however, he happened to call at the store, and Fred stated his position.

'Eh!' said the blunt old mechanic, 'I thought things were going on swimmingly with you.'

'So they were, but the times are so deucedly hard that I cannot make enough to pay expenses,' replied Fred, with a dolorous expression of countenance.

'Where's the two thousand dollars you received from your father's estate?'

'I paid my debts with it.'

'But didn't you tell me that you didn't owe above three thousand dollars?'

'I paid off fifteen hundred.'

'And the rest?'

'Well that went in various ways.'

'And your stock is all mortgaged?'

'Yes, for one thousand.'

'You have done good business?'

'Yes.'

'Well, well, I am in a hurry just now, but I will go by and by and dine with you, and will talk it over,' and Uncle Luke went out of the shop.

Fred did not like his uncle's inquisitiveness, but he had strong hopes that he would help him out of his present difficulties.

Writing a hasty note, he despatched his boy to inform his wife that Uncle Luke would dine with them.

CHAPTER III.

Dinner came, and so did Uncle Luke. Ellen had a nice dinner ready, and her pretty face was covered with smiles, when she welcomed the honest old man to partake of the hospitalities of her board.

Uncle Luke seated himself at the table. His accustomed smile had disappeared, and he looked rather stern.

'Fred,' said he, suddenly, as the young merchant inserted his fork in the breast of a nicely browned turkey, 'you have not found the philosopher's stone yet.,

Fred suspended the operation of carving the turkey, and gazed with a look of astonishment and surprise full in the face of the speaker.

'What do you mean, Uncle Luke?' said he.

You don't know what the philosophers stone is, do you?'

'No.'

'I found it out when I was quite a young man and what prosperity has crowned me, I owe to that.'

'Pray explain, Uncle Luke.'

'After dinner I will!'

Somehow, in spite of the extraordinary preparation Ellen had made for the reception of her uncle, the dinner did not pass off very pleasantly. There was a reserve on his part that threw cold water on the whole affair. But it was finished at last much to the relief of all.

'Now, uncle, come into the parlor and Ellen shall play you a tune or two on her piano,' said Fred as he led the way.

'On her what?' said the old man, with a start of surprise.

'On her piano, of course.'

'Then you keep a piano?'

'Certainly, we could not possibly get along without one, could we, Ellen?'

'Oh, no, it's such a comfort.'

'Such a luxury, you mean,' answered Uncle Luke with a cold sneer, 'what did you give for it?'

'Five hundred.'

'Is it paid for?'

'Certainly it is.'

'And your note due to morrow, which you cannot meet?'

Fred glanced at Ellen, who looked as woe-begone as though she had lost every friend she had in the world.

'It was not his fault, uncle. I teased it out of him,' she replied.

'Then he is a bigger fool than I took him to be,' said Uncle Luke, contemptuously. 'And when he was not doing business to pay expenses, you dine on roast turkey and all manner of fancy stuff.'

Uncle Luke though perfectly conscious that he was meddling with that which did not concern him, could not control his indignation at the wanton extravagance of the young people. He felt kindly towards them, as he always had, and though his words were hard and cold, he intended to do them a kindness.

'Yes, Ellen, and you wear a silk gown for every day, and to crown all you have got a piano. Do you expect to pay your notes in this manner, Fred?' continued he, 'here is the secret of hard times—extravagance—silk dresses, roast turkeys ice creams and pianos.'

'Things were going on well with me when I bought the piano,' suggested Fred.

'No matter you are a big fool. Now I will tell you what the philosopher's stone is.'

'Well uncle what is it?'

'Live within your means. If you earn but one dollar spend but seventy-five cents,' and Uncle Luke put on his great coat and edged toward the door, without even alluding to the important topic in which Fred felt so much interest.

'But, Uncle Luke, you can lend me the money I want?' asked Fred, dismayed at the thought of a failure.

'No I cannot.'

'Then I must fail'

'You ought to have thought of that when you bought the piano,' replied Uncle Luke sternly. 'Do you know Waters?'

'The carpenter?'

'Yes. Apply to him and he will lend you money.'

'But he is almost a stranger to me said Fred.

'No matter, go to him,' and Uncle Luke left the house.

'O, Fred, this is all my fault,' said Ellen, bursting into tears.

Fred applied to Waters.

'What security can you give?' asked the carpenter.

'I don't know,' said Fred, doubtingly. 'My stock is mortgaged.'

'No household furniture?'

'No.'

'What have you got?'

'A piano, and—'

'That will do, give me a bill of sale of that. If not paid within thirty days, the piano is mine.'

Fred assented and received the money. The papers were executed, and Fred got out of his difficulties.

During the succeeding thirty days, he tried hard to raise the money to redeem the piano, without success. Waters took it at the appointed time and seemed perfectly satisfied with his bargain.

A few days afterwards the young couple were surpised to receive an invitation to dine with Uncle Luke, and to their astonishment, when they arrived, they found their piano in his little parlor.

'Did you buy this?'

But Uncle Luke would answer no questions, yet he promised to make them a present of it as soon as he had paid all his debts.

The dinner consisted of corn bread and baked potatoes, with an apple pie for dessert. Uncle Luke was in unusually good spirits and never once apologized for the singular fare he had placed before his guests.

But they understood the meaning of it. It was intended as a lesson for them, and they profited by it.

They brought home the philosophers stone, and began to live by a humbler system. The hired girl was discharged and Ellen had so much to do in attending to her household duties that she had no time to be lonesome, and they were much happier than when she moped all day in the parlor; and Fred's business prospered again. He paid off his mortgage, and the piano was duly returned to them.

Stanzas: The Promise.

BY I. O. GREENMAN.

Oh, yes! we fondly promise—
Perform as fondly too;
Yet still they're dwelling from us,
Those that we love so true;
The pen may promptly answer,
The inmost heart indite,
Yet absent, like some cancer,
Corrodes us while we write.

But were those objects near us
On which we long to gaze,
And could those voices cheer us
We've heard in other days,
Ah, me! how sweet, how blissful,
From eyes that love-thought fill,
From troubled brow, or peaceful,
To anticipate the will!

But promise brings the bleakness
Of parting with its sound;
When haughty hearts knew weakness
And Love the knowledge crown'd;
When sad farewells were spoken,
And tears of anguish shed;
When words were faint and broken,
We promised—and then fled.

Yet, when the wretch was sinking
He grasped a tiny plank.
In wilderment ne'er thinking
'Twould reach the flow'ry bank;
It will be useless ever,
As it had always been,
Till on that restless river
By such like him 'tis seen.

So do heart-burnings fling us
For help on useless rhymes;
But may they not back bring us
To peace-restoring climes?
How valueless each trifle—
Its depth, its skill, its care—
Till those the pages rifle
That want a true heart there!

Too Fast vs. too Slow.

Act. 1—Scene 1.

Enter Mr. Fogy, walking backwards and forwards in the parlor of his parsonage.

Oh! this crazy world! this crazy world! everything goes by steam, except what runs by lightning. Hark! there is a screech as if a hundred devils screamed at once, and then a roar, and the rattle of wheels, and a train of cars rush by like a comet, endowed with life. Every thing is on the high pressure system. I verily believe that the earth is a locomotive, with volcanos for a smoke-pipe, and the celestials have built a railroad to 'eternal smash,' and we are all aboard the train, with a crazy devil for engineer, with the brakemen all drunk, or asleep! What are we coming to? How can a respectable old gentleman live on this planet? Every thing is in a whirl. Business men, politicians, lawyers, everybody but clergymen, seem in a brain fever, and even a few of the clergy are forever talking of progress! progress! until life has become a great scramble to get ahead. What shall I do? I wish that I could get into one of those planets that only turn round once in seven years. Wouldn't that be a nice place for a conservative old gentleman? One year of calm twilight; two years and a half of night! Think of the long evenings, lasting six months—then a year and a half to sleep—six months from daylight to sunrise,—a month to eat breakfast in. Then a year and a half to sundown again, with a six months siesta on a sofa at noon, and so on to the end. Ah! that would be a life of the sort for me, But if one dies here, he cannot rest. The Spiritualists will have him knocking about in no time. He must tip tables, make speeches for Judge Edmonds, and turn Professor Hare's spirit-catcher! What on earth shall I do? There! ding-dong! goes the door-bell, as if the house was on fire. Some man of progress, I'll be bound, with another new idea in his head.

'Bridget! Bridget!' where on earth is the Irish huzzy!

(Bridget, from the top of the stairs.) 'Here, here, what do you want?'

'Go to the door, the bell rings.'

'Yes, in a minute. But I have got my hoops on, and can't get down stairs, the way is so narrow. Wait until I get on a chair, to climb out of my new dress!'

'Wait, you huzzy! There goes the bell again! I must go to the door myself, or the bell-wire will be broke!'

'Ah! my boy, what do you want?'

'BOY! I am not a boy, sir! (twirling his patent goatee,) I am a general agent for the society for improving the race, and have come to lay our plans before you, and get your patronage?'

'Ah! yes, (with a groan,) walk in, sir, walk in!'

'Well, sir, I have just ten minutes and three-quarters to spare, before the lightening train leaves for the city of 'Go it while your young,' and I can develop the grandest scheme for regenerating man, that has ever been discovered, in that time.'

'Regenerating man! Why, sir, I have been preaching Gospel regeneration this forty years. The only way I know of, is for men to repent and live pure lives.'

'Oh! that's all out of date. Why, now-a-days, a man can become a Christian in thirty seconds, by the watch. It don't change his life at all. He can cheat and gamble in politics and lotteries, buy and sell negroes, and lie himself into office, all just as well. The parson does up the piety now-a-days, and all that a fashionable sinner has to do, is to sign the paper, (creeds I believe they call them,) pay his quarterage, and he can get a free pass on one of the firs-class trains to heaven, where he can 'pre empt' the best site for a whole town of 'heavenly mansions,' and 'realize' for his lots in three days! That old idea of the Pilgrim's Progress is all down in the market, It won't pay ten cents on the dollar. But I want to show you my plan.'

(Mr. Fogy stares, too much struck up to speak.

'You see, sir, man is but a combination of electricity and the Odylic force, clothed in flesh and blood. If, therefore, you can concentrate and combine these elements in proper proportions, you can make men as fast as you please. By a recent wonderful invention, by Professor A gas he is, we have got a machine, for superceeding, entirely, the necessity of being born. I'll bring in my machine, and show you how it works. Here, you see, is a generator of electricity, and on this side it is impregnated with magnetism, and runs off into this vat, pure Odyle. Now, we fill this vat with due quantities of the kind of food which a man needs to produce the right proportion of bone, muscle, and nerve, run it off after it has become fused, into these moulds for men, women, and children, of all sizes, from six months old; to forty years; leave it to harden a few minutes, and then insert this pipe into the mouth of the subject, turn on a stream of electricity, and the body begins to move,—sneezes,—and finally shouts, hallow! let me out! and your man is made to suit your taste. I can make you a son, and heir, who shall be just twenty years old, in fifteen minutes. Or, if you prefer a two year old baby, it will only take twelve minutes. Would you like a baby? Our charge is reasonable sir, and 10 per cent. discount to clergymen. Will you order a son or daughter?'

(No answer. Mr. Fogy is on the point of swoonin;)

'You see the adaptation of this machine is wonderful. One of them will turn out one hund ed full grown men in a single day. It was by this process we manufactured the voters to carry the 'Pennsylvania election for Buchanan, last fall. We had several of our machines in full blast, night and day, between the State and Presidential elections in that State. Mr. Buchanan paid for the sour krout and cotton, to feed our machine. Our company would not take Marine's scrip, and so Fremont did not empty us, and lost his election. Atchison and Stringfellow had two of our machines at work, turning out Border Ruffian voters in Kansas for months. But we were compelled to feed the machine with so much whisky, in order to supply the Border Ruffians with the necessary spirit, that the job did not pay. We don't like such jobs. We prefer fine work. We have now in contemplation a contract with the leading denominations, to supply them with clergy. The Theological Seminaries fail to meet the demand, as you see by the papers. There is great clerical mourning in the land, and we alone can comfort these mourners. You see our scheme is magnificent. We can make a Calvanist or Armenian, a orthodox or heterodox man, as you like by varing the component, mental and moral material. To make a Calvinist, we dissolve Calvin's Institutes and Dr. Gill's Commentaries, in our machine. If he is to be a Baptist, we put in a volume or two of Andrew Fullers works. A Methodist requires a volume of Oesley's sermons and Fletcher's checks. In this way you see we can vary the article to suit the market. For a nice young city preacher like Mr. Spurgeon, we put in a few novels, a little rose water, a decoction of moonlight, and 'balm of a thousand flowers!' We can make a five hundred or five thousand dollar article to order. We tried once to make a Henry Ward Beecher, but it took so much electricity to dissolve a Bible and Sharp's rifle, that the machine blew up, and we gave it up. Now sir, what do you think of our plan?'

'What is the name of your machine?' gasped out Mr. Fogy.

'Public Sentiment! sir, Public Sentiment! Ah! there goes the bell. I have but thirty seconds to reach the depot. I shall be compelled to swallow a streak of lightening! You see I put mouth to this orifice, turn the screw, and the lightening streams down my throat. Write me by telegraph. The shock may startle you, as I turn on the lightening, but bare goes!'

(There was a flash, and the agent vanished out of the door and Mr. Fogy was left sprawling, and stunned by the explosion.)

Autumn Song.

A, as usual, I sit—the sad is keen
Now are seen,
Leaves, fresh o'er the rose tree bowers,
Lone by my grave:
And the forest bare of glory,
Early Autumn brought,
Fade and fall, while ours heavy
Tells us how decay hath wrought.

In the gardens blooming gaily
Just agone,
Mong the flowers, opening daily
To the sun,
Now our walks are dull and dreary,
Where the roses blew,
And our hearts grow very weary,
While the skies above us weep.

All the bees have ceased their humming,
Gay and glad;
Dreary Winter now is coming,
Stern and sad;
Pale and sere the grass is lying
On the lowly graves,
And the zephyrs, too, are dying,
In their stead the wild wind raves.

Well, the mighty God whose fiat
Earth obeys,
E'en the grim destroyer's riot
Yields him praise.
Now with happy hearts, and hopeful,
Wait we for the spring;
And, let skies be bright or frowning,
All alike shall gladness bring.

A State Convention.

The State Journal advises and advocates the holding of a Democratic State Convention, at an early period, for the purpose of perfecting an organization, prepartory to entering upon the political campaign of next year. Such a convention might do much good, and we heartilily second the motion. If there ever was necessity for a political revolution it is in this State The finacial affairs of the State could notbe in a worse condition. We should like to see a Democratic State Convention called, and we should like to have that Convention take decided and bold ground for—

1st. A Dissolution between the State Treasury and the rotten Banks of the country.

2d. A State Sub Treasury; a return of the State to the Coustitutional Currency; the Receipts and Expenditures of the State to be paid in Gold and Silver.

3d Such a State Policy, in regard to the disposition of our State lands, and otherwise, as will throw the tide of emigration into the State rather than through it.

4th. The extinguishment of our State Debt.

5th. An Economical Administration of State Affairs, forbidding the necessity of Heavy Direct Taxation.

The Murder Trial.

In Court this morning, was commenced the examination of witnesses in the case of Michael Beaudien, charged with the murder of Antoine Upelle, (we obtain the correct spelling of the name from the indictment,) on the 20th of July last.

The facts in the case are briefly these. On Sunday the 19th of July last the, Prisoner gave a boeing bee, at which liquor was freely drank. A woman living with the prisoner as his wife, got into a freindlly tussle with Upelle, and after throwing him kissed him.

The Prisoner was angry at these proceedings, and uttered some threats. During the following night, Upelle was shot at and killed, as he sat it his own house, by some one standing outside the window. The prisoner Beaudien, was arrested by Sheriff Springer on the following, day and after an examination before Mayor Brownlee, of this city, was committed to jail. The testimony elicted at the preliminary examintion we fully reported at the time in the Blade.

To day Mr. Watson, whom the prisoner expected to appear as his cheif counsel having arrived he selected Messrs Price, Fuller and Hill as his attorneys. Messrs Manor, the Pros. Attorney I. E hee his successor, elect, and Mr. Haynes appeared for the State. Mr Manor briefly stated the case to the Jury after which James O. White was called. He testified to the quarrel bt the 'bee,' and was with Upelle when he was shot. His testimony was to the same effect as reported at the preliminary examination.

E. D. Mason our city engineer, testified to the correctness of the maps and plans of the scene of the murder submitted to the jury.

S. Springer, who was, at the time, Sheriff, gave his testimony as to Beaudien's arrest, the situation of the buildings, the tracks, etc. to the same effect as before the Mayor. We noticed but one additional fact elicited, and that was as to the prisoner's unwillingness to go over to the deceased's house on the morning after the murder Prisoner made some slight resistance when told he must come along with witness. The woman came up as witness, and prisoner were going through the corn, and made regular fight; she told prisoner "he was a fool for going," &c.

This brings the case down to the adjournment of the Court at noon to-day. We shall endeavor to post our readers up in regard to the trial progresses, but without going into tedious particulars.—Toledo Blade.

Washington, Dec. 1.

Not only the Presidents Message, and the Reports of the heads of Departments will be supplied to the press in the principal Atlanic cities, and to newspapers elsewhere, when the reading of the Message hall have been commenced in Congress. the same will be previously sent to postmasters who will be telegraphed at the proper time, with that view. The propriety of such an arrangement is apparent from the fact that it will avoid telegraph blunders, and secure the correct publication in the newspapers distant from the apitol, at the earliest practicable time.

Stoves and Fuel.

As winter is approaching, and while in the midst of a severe financial embarrassment thousands are left without employ, there is reason we fear, to anticipate a serious deprivation and suffering in most of the large cities of our land before its close. Under these circumstances it seems to us, to be the duty of every one, to contribute what they can, not only by an appropriation of means, but also by suggestions of economy, should any occur, towards the common relief.

I recollect some years since noticing in the New York Tribune some very sensible and well-timed articles, going to show the feasibility of a very great economy, by the way of supplying a family with healthy nourishment, upon a limited amount of means

A repetition of similar suggestions, pointing out such economical supplies as are within the actual reach of the poor, might, as it seems to us, at this time accomplish much good.

Now there is no one thing we apprehend, in this country with regard to which, so much thoughtless waste and extravagance, is habitually practiced, as in the use of fuel, and the misfortune of it is, that the poorer the individual, the greater is ordinarily this waste. The poor man, with his thinly clad dependent little ones about him, buys and uses an inferior article of heating apparatus because he thinks he is not able to pay for a better one, and yet with it, such as it is and with whatever lack of economy there may be in its use he must manage to warm his apartment, or much suffering, and perhaps sickness and death is the consequence.

But even with the better class of ordinary heating apparatus we think we hazard nothing, in asserting that more than two thirds of all the heat generated, is never used at all, but needlessly thrown away—Why it is, we know not, but it is a fact that the stoves in use in this country seems generally, to have been contrived and constructed with reference to almost everything else, but not the saving of fuel.

We have been led to these reflections, from the unexpected amount of saving realized from the use of a simple apparatus just affixed to the stove in our own dwelling. Do not be alarmed, there is no patent or puff about it, it is simply an economical use of the old fashioned drum. The stove which we now have is a small air-tight box stove. Upon the top of this we placed a double sheet iron drum of the same size and shape as the stove,—each drum four inches in depth, and standing upon supports four inches in height, thus giving to each a good radiating surface all around. They are so constructed that the current of the heated air passing into one end of the lower drum is compelled to pass through the length of it, and there escaping into the upper drum to go through the length of that before escaping into the pipe.

The object of course is to compel the heated air to as large a radiating surface as possible, before it escapes and is thus finally lost or in other words, to take all the heat we can out of the smoke before we let it pass out of the chimney. The contrivance above alluded to, still leaves an abundant draught, and we have no doubt annother additional drum might be attached without any inconvenience in this respect. If so it would of course add materially to the amount of heat retained for the use of the rooms

But as it is we are saving fully two-thirds of the entire fuel, with which we have been accustomed to heat the same rooms, with a good Irving Cottage stove In another room we have an Irving Cottage, the power of which to radiate heat we have nearly doubled by simply fastening a piece of sheet-iron some twenty inches wide to the back of the stove just below the flue, and so coming up say three or four inches in front of the flue to within four inches of the top, and curving over to within four inches of the front, thus forcing the heat to pass along the radiating surface in front, in order to escape.

In both these cases the fuel burns moderately, but freely, the heat is mild and pleasant, and the saving in the amount of fuel required surprising. The double drum of good Russia Iron cost us seven dollars, but one of common sheet iron, which is just as good, if not better for all radiating purposes, need not cost more than four or five dollars.

For the purpose of so regulating the draught as to save and use the greatest amount of heat generated,—the stove should be nearly air tight, but the simple of a piece of Sheet-iron or tin, say three inches wide, to extend across the front of the stove, and so fitted as to be put up inside just in front of the aperture at the bottom of the door, whenoccasion requires, will make almost any stove sufficiently air tight for all practical purposes

Now, in a country and more especially in large cities where there is so much suffering among the poor for want of fuel, and when there is of necessity so large contributions and appropriations annually to relieve this suffering and meet this want, we would respectfully submit it to the public, and especially those gentlemen ordinarily in charge of this matter, whether a portion of their time and means appropriated to this object could not be better devoted to procuring for those families suffering in this respect, some such simple facilities by the way of improved heating apparatus, and thus make those donations, manifold more effective in accomplishing of the relief desired

Should these suggestions, founded upon our own experience, prove to be of advantage to any one, and especially to the suffering poor, our object and desire in writing them will be fully answered, but what we fear is that the whole matter will appear so simple, and so void of novelty that it will be thrown aside without consideration, notwithstanding the fact, that the actual economy of the thing is, as we know it to be for we have both tried it, and seen it tried otherwhere, both highly valuable and real.

Gems from Emerson's Lecture.

'I confess,' said Mr. Emerson, 'that life is rather a subject of wonder than of didactics. We do what we must, and call it by the best name we can. With sympathy we accompany the youth to the door of the arena, but we know, and he knows, that not by strength of ours, but by his own strength, he must stand or fall. That by which a man conquers is a profound secret to all but himself.

It is the fine souls that save us, not what is called fine society. Fine society is our protection against the vulgarity of the bar room, but it ends there. It is an affair of the clothes brush. A man is not real because he puts on so many clean shirts. Is all we have to do, to draw our breath in and blow it out again? Is the lime in our bones all that holds us together? It is not the gases of our body that constitute life, but conscience, will, motive.

In the streets we grow cynical. Most men are rubbish In the best men, even, there is sediment. Mankind is divided into two classes—Benefactors and Malefactors, The latter predominate, often unconsciously. We do not wish to be uncharitable, but a man seldom falls sick but most spectators have a faint hope that he will die. The worst of charity is, that the lives you are asked to preserve are not worth preserving. Only the beautiful, fine souls are good, and not the gin drinking masses. In Old Egypt it was said that the vote of the prophet was equal to one hundred ordinary votes.—The estimate is too low. Clay and clay are different, as we discover every day by our preferences. It is a vicious practice of politicians at Washington to pair off, in their votes, as if one was always the balance of the other. Suppose the three hundred at Thermopylæ had paired off with three hundred Persians! Nature makes fifty poor lemons for one that is good. She scatters nations of naked Indians, or nations of white Christians, over the lands, and only furnishes twenty good heads among them She only hits the white once in a million throws, and gives us one great man in the country All the great events in colonization and civilization may be traced to some man's private brain Luther said that God could not do without wise men But the most are neutors or chimpanzees. We aroused as brute atoms until we think; then we use others

To say that the majority are wicked, means no malice in the observer, but simply that they are ignorant, and borrow their opinion from their neighbors or the newspaper, and that they have not come to themselves. Among them the quadruped interest is very prone to prevail.

The first lesson of history is the good of Evil. Good is a good doctor, but Bad is sometimes better It is only a crushing despotism that make Magna Charta possible. Plutarch affirms that the Free wars of Alexander were of the greatest benefit to mankind,—being forerunners of civilization, in all the countries he conquered. So Schiller declares that the thirty years' war made Germany a nation. California adventurers of 1848 were a general jail delivery of rowdies, but nature watches in all things for eventual good. All the grand results of history are brought about by these poor and discreditable tools. It is a sentence of ancient wisdom, that God hangs the greatest weight on the smallest wires. Nature is a chiffonier that works up every shred and rag like a good chemist whom I found the other day in his laboratory, who was converting his old shirts into pure white sugar.

Of rules for the conduct of life, one of the first is economy—the principle that every man should maintian himself. It is the creed of mankind, especially of the Teutonic race. A cheerful disposion is inseperable from a rightly ordered life—Nothing can supply the want ofsunshine to peaches. The most fantastic castles in the air, are far better for us than the dungeons in the air, which are constantly being carverned out by the stormy and discontented people. We should make life and natura better for ourselves otherwise we had better not been born The secret of the conduct of life is fidelity to what we are apt for. The boio is he who is immovably centered. We must escape from all false ties, and have courage to be what we are.

* This article was sent in the form of a letter to the New York Times some three weeks since and whether it has been used in that paper or not we cannot tell for owing the irregularity of mails since then, we we have not received more than half of the current issues, but we deem this remark due to the proprietors of that paper in case it may have been used by them. We sent it there because we deemed the suggestion, if of any practical value, far more important to the city than to the country.—Ed.

General News.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.

As far as can be ascertained, the Cabinet are united in sustaining the action of the Constitutional Convention, whatever preference they may have had before for submitting the entire Constitution to the people. It is understood, that all are agreed to the mode proposed for the inhabitants to settle the question of slavery, as one of their domestic institutions, for themselves, in accordance with the letter and spirit of the Kansas Nebraska act.

Gov. Walker has had another interview with the President on the subject of Kansas affairs and they also to-day occupied a large space in the cabinet deliberations. No arrangements have as yet been made in regard to the transmission of the Presidents Message in advance of its delivery. It is probable however, that the newspaper presses will be supplied with copies by the means heretofore adopted. All the reports of the heads of departments are in a sufficient stage of forwardness.

At the Cabinet meeting to-day, the President stated Gov. Walker's position on Kansas affairs. The cabinet unanimously united with the President in favor of sustaining the action of the Constitutional Convention with reference to submitting the Constitution to the people, and so condemn Walker. The door to a reconciliation with Gov. Walker's position is now closed, and a bitter contest between the two wings of the Democracy is unavoidable. Sen. Douglass has been heard from. As the author of the Kansas Nebraska Act, he will take bold grounds in the support of Walker. This, the President has not hitherto beleived.

Douglass holds that the refusal to submit the whole Constitution to the people, when they desire it, is the clearest repudiation of the doctrine of squatter sovereignity. Senator Gwynn sustains Walker.

Private advices from New Orleans express the greatest confidence of Gen. Walker's friends in the success of his enterprise in Nicaragua.

All avoid, however, stating the precise point of his contemplated debarkation.

Walker left, still claiming his rights as President of Nicaragua, and determined, if any naval force attempt to intercept him to resist to the death

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 27.

Letters from the interior predict a short crop of sugar, in consequence of the shortness of the season. The crop was not matured when the early frosts occured.

Capt Ellis, of the steamer Opelousas, who was indicted for manslaughter, in consequence of the late collision, has been acquitted.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.

The Academy of Music was crowded to the utmost of its capacity, last night, by the friends of Mayor Wood, and thousands were unable to gain admission.

Five different meetings were organized in Irving Place and Fourteenth street, which were addressed by enthusiastic speakers.

The principal speakers within the Academy of Music were Hon. L. Cushing, Fernando Wood, Hon. John Kelly, Hon. John Cochrane and H. Ketcham. The meetings outside were addressed by various volunteers.

ALBANY, Nov. 28.

The weather here is quite mild, and it is now confidently calculated that all the boats in the canal, this side of Montezuma at least, will get to tide-water, and the best judges predict a re-opening to Rochester.

DETROIT, Nov. 28.

The weather is mild, and thawing fast. The ice at the mouth of the river is reported as giving away. Indications are that a large fleet of vessels which have been detained in the river will be enabled to get into Lake Erie to-morrow or Monday.

Seven propellers arrived from Chicago to-day, and report many vessels ashore on Lakes Huron and Michigan.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.

The Northern Light left the same day, with nearly two millions. The news of the loss of the Central America had caused a general gloom at San Francisco. The Courts adjourned. Meetings were held and the Mail Company denounced.

It was supposed that the accounts of Indian depredations in Carson Valley were exaggerated.

Further from the plains confirms the belief in the complicity of the Mormons in the late massacre. The papers say that an efficient army could be raised in California.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 30.

A Delegate Convention of the Free State Party of Kansas has been called to meet at Lawrence on the 2d day of December, to take into consideration the present political position of the Territory, and to designate some course to be pursued relative to the new Constitution.

ALBANY, Nov. 30.

Weather continues very mild and favorable. Accounts from the west inspire us with a hope that all the produce now afloat in the canal, will get through to tide-water, and that navigation may be entirely resumed.

A dispatch to the Canal Auditor, received from Newark, Wayne county, this morning, says the weather is mild and the ice broken, and boats are moving.

A boat loaded with flour, reached here to-day from Port Jackson on Friday. This is quick time.

A fleet of 20 boats arrived at Waterford yesterday, and were immediately locked into the river, and are now on their way to New York, with about 75,000 bushels of corn and wheat. The Hudson is free from ice.

LOCKPORT, N. Y. Nov. 30.

It has thawed here for the last two days and rained heavily all the morning. The ice in the canal, though six inches thick, is breaking up. T. Foster came from Medina last, with an ice breaker drawn by 14 horses, and proceeded to Sulphur Springs, where he expects to meet a steam tug from Buffalo. 140 to 150 boats followed her. Appearnces now indicate that navigation on the canal will be resumed this evening

New York, Nov. 30.

A heavy robbery was committed on board the bark Pentucket Saturday evening, which was lying in the stream, while the Captain was absent on shore. The cabin was entered and two casks of doubloons valued at $10,000 were stolen.—The Pentucket was bound for Trinidad. The mate and cook are missing.

The advices from Central America are important, under present circumstances. War had been officially declared between Nicaragua and Costa Rica, and President Martinez, of the former Republic, was preparing to place himself at the head of the army.

His proclamation announces a determination to maintain the right of the Republic to the territory claimed by, and now in possession of Costa Rica.

Col. Candi had taken possession of the river and lake steamers. No important operations have been undertaken by either party.

The news from California is interesting.

An immense meeting of the citizens of San-Francisco was held on the 1st, to give expression to the sense of the public on the loss of the Central America.

A project was on foot in California, to create a new territary in the great basin between the Goose Creek mountains on the East, and Sierra Nevada on the west, and between the Oregon and Utah line on the North, and California River on the South.

A card had been published in the San-Francisco papers, stating that the travel would be resumed on the Nicaragua route and that on the arrival of the the mail of the 26th of October, the sailing day would be announced.

The U. S. Mail steamship, Northern Lights, from Aspinwall, on the 21st inst, with California mails to Nov. 5th, and nearly one and ¼ millions of specie on freight arrived yesterday P. M.

DIED

In this village on Friday evening, Nov. 20th after a lingering illness Anna Snodgrass daughter of L. and A. G. Doyle aged 19 years.

Art thou gone in the prime of thy beauty laid low,
Shall we see thee among us no more—
Thy dear beaming eye, and thy cheeks youthful glow,
With the fond flush of hope, and thy spirits warm flow,
Shall not time to our circle restore?

Alas! thou art gone! at the sad sound we start;
And linger in the listener's breath;
For light was thy smile when we saw thee depart
And little we thought thy gladness of heart
Would be stilled by the Angel of Death.

To earth with its cares and its beatiful things,
She ties that had bound thee are riven;
As the lark at dawn from its night covert springs,
So thy spirit—warned, hath expanded its wings
At the call of thy Father in Heaven.

Thine, thine is the joy; but the sorrow is ours—
Like a rose that is nipt in its bloom;
Cut down from thy life in its merriest hours,
With the budding of leaves and expanding of flowers,
We bear thee to rest in the tomb.

We bear thee to rest!—'Tis but dust we convey,
And the clod to its kindred restore,
While our faith through the skies shall pursues the glad way,
Till we meet in the realms of unvarying day;
And our hearts shall be mingled once more.

MOFFAT'S LIFE PILLS AND PHOENIX BITTERS.

For the griping colic, inflamation of the spleen, want of appetite and dyspepsia, these popular medicines may be used with entire confidence in the result. In all liver and bowel complaints the Moffat medicines have never failed of a cure.

RHEUMATISM—NEURALGIA.—The agonies of Rheumatism and Neuralgia are among the most acute with which the human frame is ever afflicted, and have heretofore been found the most difficult to remove. Happily a remedy is now discovered by which the most obstinate cases can be immediately cured.—This sovereign remedy is BRANDRETH'S ARCTIC LINIMENT, for sale by Druggists generally. If is only necessary for the sufferer to try it, to be assured of its efficacy.

DR. J. C. AYER, the world renowned Chemist of New England, is now stopping at the Burnet house in this city. He has been making a tour of the Western States, with his scientific associates, to investigate their remedial productions, or such as he can make remedial. We notice he has been received with marked distinction by our leading citizens of the West and are rejoiced to find they have shown a proper estimate of the man who has perhaps done more for the relief of human ills than any other American.—Cincinnati Journal.

The most skeptical people can be convinced by trial that all the family medicines are not humbug, and that among the thousand of butterfly lifs there are a few of great merit, and undoubted worth. Of these, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy stands first and foremost among the remedies of the day that can be relied on as a medicine that is all that is reccomended by its proprietors.

It advertises itself on every trial, for there are none who use it but tell their friends to do so, and so it goes from mouth to mouth till all the people of the Union have learned the good of this truly valuable medicine. It is recommended with testimonials to prove its virtue for the cure of liver complaints of every kind, from the worst Dyspepsia to a common headache, and is particularly adapted to Jaundice, Deranged Stomach, Bowel Complaints and diseases of children.

One or two doses are said to cure a cold with scarce a failure. It is worth a trial for this alone. It is prticularly adapted to use of ladies, particularly those of sedentary habits. Some ladies of the highest standing in society have given their certificates of its efficacy, and we say to all who are ailing, try one bottle, and you will never be without it.

☞ The Grand River HERALD, while giving Barnhart's Valley City Band a very lengthy notice, says:

"It is the best appointed organization of the kind, West of the City of New York."

This assertion is a hard pill for the pupils of I. L. RUHL to swallow. The Valley city band contains many members, but, no better music than Mr. Ruhl has left in Southern Michigan. The Marshall Band is considered the best organization in the State.

"Unlike many others, this band is composed of first class citizens—men who stand high in the professional and mechanical ranks."

The Bands of Southern Michigan, we beleve, are composed of the same material.

FIRE:—About half past 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the dwelling house of I. H. Hampton was found to be on fire. The alarm was immediately given, and a large number of citizens were on the spot almost instantly, but without the means of obtaining water except by buckets from a neighboring well, and consequently the house was enveloped in flames, before more could be much done. We understand however that all the furniture and other valuables of the house were saved. How much longer will the citizens of our village see the property of individuals destroyed, when by the aid of an engine it could be saved.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BRIMFIELD, MASS., 20th Dec., 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER: I do not hesitate to say the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the concomitant symptoms of a Cold, is your CHERRY PECTORAL. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of these complaints. EBEN KNIGHT, M. D.

A. H. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your PECTORAL myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SPRINGFIELD, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTEREY, Ia., writes, 31 Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MANCHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., ALBION, MONROE CO., IOWA writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some so human and can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 5, 1856

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no skill or medicine gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do you skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours with gratitude and regard,

ORLANDO SHELBY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Caution—Do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us speak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win us unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made, which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while officers have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures of the following complaints:—

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Bowels arising from a Foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Uleerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other Kindred Complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for Ayer's Pills, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.

and shall be receiving from week to week, through the Season, any Goods that may be wanted, from the Eastern Manufacturers, and Jobbers of

New York, Boston,

and Other Cities in the East

I have tried during Nineteen Years of my life the various modes of doing business

Firstly for Cash.
Secondly on Short Credit.
Thirdly, And to take Long Credit, Orders and Accounts.

Lastly, I have been compelled to wait for payment of Goods sold on Six Months time, long enough for a man to visit California, get rich, and return, before payment could be forced or coaxed.

Now I wish to say, to my numerous friends and patrons, that I am thoroughly convinced that the mode of buying goods on time is both injurious to the buyer and seller.

I will hereafter Sell for Ready pay, at such prices that will defy all competion in this Town, State, or the United States.

No one should buy a dollars worth of Goods without calling at the

Great Western Cash Store,

and get the prices. Some are so unfortunate as to be compelled to trade at long credit stores—to those I would say, Call and See what you can save by having the Ready or something as good, to use where you please.

Call one and all, I wish to see the light of your countenance, and the cash from your pockets. B. J. BIDWELL.

AGRICULTURAL.

Bees, Socially and Politically.

The queen of the hive, born like the queens of earth, no better than her meanest sisterhood, like them, issues from the egg a helpless grub; but, the chamber of her birth, as compared with theirs, is of right regal dimensions vertical in position, and of cylindric, instead of octagonal, form. Ample room is thus afforded for all her members, as she progresses towards maturity; while, to hasten and improve her growth, the food supplied her by assiduous nurses and future nurses, is of the most nutritious and delicate description; not the simple bee-bread, composed of common pollen, and considered good enough for common bee infancy, but a rare and curious preparation, nicely concocted from flowery juices, and, as reserved expressly for royal nutriment, called by bee farmers "royal jelly." Thus sparingly lodged and delicately fed, the favored grub, when arrived at full growth, spins within her cell a silken shroud; therein changes to nymph or pupa; and thence, in due time, issues forth in all her dignity of majestic size, in all the resplendency of her golden-ringed body suit; the more conspicuous for the scantiness of her gauze drapery—those filmy wings in which alone her outward gifts, instead of surpassing, are inferior to those of her subjects. Come we now to the busy workers, of whom the numerous sisterhood—the million of the hive—is made up. From these the bee character has always been painted justly, as loyal and patriotic, laborious patient, and skilful, to which might be added, maternally affectionate; for, though never mothers themselves, the latter propensity possesses them so strongly as to convert their office as nurses to the queen's progeny—to all, in short of the queen's progeny—into what would seem truly a labor of love. Although their instinctive virtues (if we may use the term) are so immeasurably expanded beyond the narrow growth of those apparent in their royal mistress, compression is one of the agents employed to effect this mighty difference between them: and the worker bee is, it would seem, made a useful member of the body politic, by a process very similar to that which renders the foot of a Chinese lady a somewhat useless member of her body natural.

The baby bee, destined to become a bee laborer, finds herself, on emerging from the egg, an inhabitant of one of those common six sided cells, which—as it would appear—is so proportioned as in some measure to limit her growth, and thus prevent her from attaining her full development. To this outward restriction is superadded an inward check, in the quality of food administered by her nurses. In lieu of the royal jelly, that stimulating and nutritious extract prepared on y for the queen, her infancy is supported on the simple fare of bee-bread, which while it suffices to bring to maturity every useful endowment of activity, affords no food for the development of the sensual and vindictive passions; and with all these smothered in the cradle our worker comes forth, mature in all Apian excellence,—modest in habits, a nun among insects, and a very "sister of charity" among her fellows.

How to make Corn Bread.—Take 2 pints of corn meal, and scald in hot water; then add 1 pint of rye flour, (or middlings will do) 3 table-spoonsful of molasses, 1 pint of buttermilk, 1 teaspoonful saleratus, and as much new milk as will make a thin batter; butter a dish, and put it into it, and let it rise one half hour; then place it in a slow oven, and let bake 5 hours. Or, it is nice to cut warm if steamed, by placing the dish in a steamer over boiling water for 3½ hours. In the absence of milk, use yeast and water, adding molasses.

Woodland Cot, Talmadge, Mich.

To Harden Tallow—The season is at hand when farmers are feeding beef creatures for domestic use, and sometimes an animal gets so fat as to yield tallow too soft to make good candles. To harden it, beeswax or alum is sometimes put into the melted liquid, but with indifferent results. If you would succeed perfectly, when the tallow is placed in the kettle to try, put in also 1 pound of alum in the lump to 20 to 30 pounds of tallow, according to the fatness of the animal I will guarantee an exemption from soft greasy candles.—C.

Patent Medicines.

ONE DOLLAR WILL BUY

ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public, namely DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REMEDY, that acts as a Cathartic, easier, milder and more effectual than any other medicine known. It is not only a Cathartic but a Liver remedy acting first on the liver to eject the morbid matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter, thus accomplishing two purposes effectually, without any of the painful feeling experienced in the operations of most Cathartics. It strengthens this system at the same time that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects.

Though possessing rare medical powers, these Gums have been but little known to Physicians, and never used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the Invigorator, which met with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known in its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure Liver Complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver, and as a proof that the Invigorator relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses on retiring, and it assists nature in her operations. By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work at regularity as clock work.

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the Invigorator, which corrects all acidity and soreness of the stomach.

For an over-loaded stomach it has no equal, as it relieves all oppressive or uneasy feeling after eating heartily. For system weakness generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints, and all diseases arising from a Diseased Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it, and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to Dyspeptics, for it made a complete curebefore the first bottle was taken, and no we can eat anything edible without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain. Now what we want to say to all our readers is, if Liver Complaints or Dyspepsia trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.—State Fact.

We take infinite pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER, and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty, and thousands are giving it testimony to its wonderful virtues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of Diseases incident to children as DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR; nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it; for it acts as a Cathartic so mildly and gently, and seems to renovate the system so thoroughly of all bile, we are doing a service to all in advising them, when they need medicine, to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where the great benefit has been received in diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels where all other remedies failed to give relief. It has become so useful in our family that we will not be without it.—Jacksonville, Ala. Republican.

AYER'S Cathartic Pills,

ARE NOW IN USE

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach, Biliousness, Dysentery, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Piles, Worms, Erysipelas, Ulcers, Dropsy, Scrofula, Tumors, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Tetter, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Female Complaints, Gout, Liver Complaint, Consumption, Pain in the Side, Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels, Blood, Nerves, Whites, Debility, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Dimness of Vision, Neuralgia, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Erysipelas, Ulcers, Scurvy, Eruptions of the Skin, Fever and Ague, Dyspepsia, Dropsy, and for the cure of all disorders arising from a disordered state of the Stomach, Bowels, Blood or Nervous System.

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of severe attacks of Headache, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Nervousness, by your Pills. It seems to me no one can have a headache, or any of the above complaints, long, if they will take your Pills. They cure me when all other remedies fail. I am never without them in my house, and shall not be, while they can be had.

Yours, with great respect, ED. W. FREBLE, Clerk of Supreme Court.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints

Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., Feb. 1, 1856.

Sir: I have used your Pills in my general medical practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of the organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relux, and Worms.

Post Office, Hartland, Liv. Co., Mich., Nov. 16, 1856.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell. She had been sick and pining away for months. We sent off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. At their commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, while others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctor bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Hines, Pastor of Advent Church, &c.

Dr. Ayer: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends.

Yours, J. V. HINES.

Warsaw, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1855.

Dear Sir: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the purgative of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grieved by afflicted with blotches and pimples on her face and a fine hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawks, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Pulaski House, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 7, 1856.

Honored Sir: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report myself to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on rheumatic neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse until by the advice of my friends, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

Senate Chamber, Baton Rouge, La., 8 Dec., 1855.

Dr. Ayer: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years.

Vincent Bidell.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or Kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, as a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, though a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, INFLUENZA, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town and village in this country and American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country, in this continent, who have not some personal experience of its effects; and fewer yet are the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and fatal enemies diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unperceived. We have abundant grounds to believe the Cherry Pectoral saves more lives by the suppressions it prevents than those it cures. Step-by-step it follows the progress of disease, and while they are curable, not arrests them until no human skill can master the inexorable banker that fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and how they know too the victims of this remedy, we need not assure them that to assure them it is will make the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who try it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.

Thanksgiving Sermon.

Preached by the Rev H G Blinn in the Presbyterian Church Tecumseh, Mich. Nov. 26, 1857.

"And it shall be, when the Lord thy God shall have brought thee into the land which He ware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give thee great and goodly cities which thou buildest not, and houses full of all goodly things, which thou filledst not, and wells digged which thou diggedst not, vineyards and olive-trees, which thou plantedst not; when thou shalt have eaten and be full; then beware lest thou forget the Lord thy God which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage." DEUTERONOMY, VI 10—12.

Our observance of a day of public thanksgiving and praise to God—viewed, in its various aspects is peculiarly beautiful,—beautiful in itself—for it is the setting apart of secular time, to the services of divine worship; beautiful in its occasion, for it is at the call of the civil authorities, and it seems like a green spot amid deserts, under a government reiterating its pretensions to be an economy separate from all religions, to find the finger of executive authority pointing the people to the Temples of their God—the executive message reiterating the very words of that proclamation of Jehovah, inspired by the Holy Ghost. "Enter into His gates with thanksgiving and into His courts with praise." Beautiful in its peculiar observances, for it is a day hallowed to friendship when many a severed family re-unites for a season in the beloved circle, and the very words of the sanctuary are of love—beautiful too in its thoughtful associations, for it comes, linked with glorious visions of the past—of the "May Flower"—of Plymouth Rock—of the Pilgrims—of the simple names, they so honored, living, of the hallowed graves of their immortal dead. Beautiful above all, in the spirit of its memories, for they are all joyous, all of a Father's kindness and a Father's care. We stand to-day on a high mount, flung up in the path of History and looking back along all our journeyings we see the hand of God leading, guiding, protecting and blessing our nation at every step, as He guided and blessed His chosen people, of old in all their wanderings, and we feel that the language of the text addressed to the Jews is singularly appropriate to us.

They are summoned here to a remembrance of their past history, as it was marked by the special superintending providence of God. To a recognition of their present advantages and blessings; and also to a consideration of an earnest and affectionate warning against the sin of ingratitude to their Benefactor and Lord.

Now nothing could be more obvious than the analogy between the position, career and destiny of the Jewish nation and those of our own, consequently we may easily and naturally transfer to ourselves these words of Israel's Leader and Law Giver. They furnish appropriate thoughts for such a day as this.

Let us then, turn our attention in the first place to the fact that the hand of God, has been especially manifested, in the settlement, the preservation, the prosperity and all the incidents in the history of our land.

I believe in a Divine efficiency throughout the length and breadth of the Universe, that God is everywhere present and everywhere active, guiding, superintending and controlling the movements, alike, of men and angels, of planets in their courses, of worls in their orbits. Many admit that God was—but how few feel as they ought that God is? Many have the notion of God that He launched the earth in its orbit, and left it to move on without His care. Their vague idea is, that He created us at the first, gave us a certain supply of vital power, just as a locomotive has a certain available amount of steam and then left us to grope our way no longer subject to His interference, nor in any way amenable to his executive control. This is not true; God is in every one of us, acting, controlling, governing, helping, comforting, strengthening according to the hour and power of our need. His power is displayed in every beat of every heart. He is in everything His hand has made. His power is as much exerted in scattering the dew-drops every morning on field and flower as in upheaving the everlasting hills. His power and glory are as truly in the buds of spring, bursting from their withered stems, as they were in the blooming of Aaron's rod or in all the plagues sent upon Israel's oppressors. While this is true with regard to an active providence in every petty transaction of life; yet there are times when, and circumstances in which we are constrained to notice the Divine hand more clearly, and are accustomed to speak of it as more directly operative and efficient, not only in the history of individuals but of nations. Not unfrequently do their annals exhibit scenes transpiring whose every feature shows the impress of God's finger, in which the designs of men conceived and prosecuted with everything favorable and pursued in accordance with the common rules and principles of action, have been wholly subverted. Any one familiar with history can recall ten-thousand such occasions. Instances which betoken the presence of some myaterious influence acting in seeming contrariety to the laws of nature and the combined efforts of human wisdom, skill and power. Possibly an army of countless numbers and of disciplined strength is marshalled against a handful of untrained troops who are ignorant of the artifices of war—and anticipate only defeat and death. And yet in the conflict the trained vetrans of the field are routed and the few triumph over their mighty hosts. What gave them the victory? Is not God's hand manifest in such an event? To what other agency can you trace it? Take for illustration, the conflict of the Jews with the army of Midian On the one side there were but three hundred men, while the Midianites are described as lying along the valley like grass hoppers for multitude and their camels were without number as the sand by the sea-side." Yet the little band of three hundred, routed and totally defeated them because, in the language of scripture "The Spirit of the Lord was upon Gideon" It is claimed as a miraculous result in the inspired record, and ascribed directly to the unerring guidance and sustaining presence of the God of Israel. And do not the records of our own history—uninspired though they be, exhibit parallel cases of unexpected and astonishing success in the struggles of our Revolutionary Fathers with the trained and disciplined hosts of England? Shall we not then recognise in them, the hand of the God of battles?

But, look, a moment at the outlines of Jewish history as compared with the annals of this naton.

He of whom you have heard so much of late—on whose life, I have been lecturing so many successive sabbath evenings, Joseph, under the envy and hatred of his brethren, was driven forth from the parental roof, and exiled from every endeared object of home, sold, a slave, into a strange land where he became the victim of malice and false accusation and experienced every vicissitude of fortune till finally he became Prime Minister in the court of the mightiest Emperor, and the benefactor and saviour of the greatest Empire, on earth. Now what is his testimony? He declares afterwards, to those who were the instruments in his banishment—"It was not you that sent me hither but God." Precisely analogous to this was the position of the little band of Pilgrims, who under the tyrany and persecution of James first, of England were banished from their beloved homes and driven forth from the land of their birth to an uncertain destiny. As they "moored their little barque on the wild New England Shore," and bent the knee on Old Plymouth Rock in their lonely and untempled worship; while the memories of their childhood's home and of the beautiful sanctuaries in which they had learned to worship the God of their fathers—now far away in their blessedness—and of the loved ones left behind, came thronging before them with overwhelming power—while the trackless ocean rolled between them and all that had been dear to them on earth and while before them there stretched out the mighty depths of an untroden and awful wilderness; and beneath their feet there lay the bleakest soil of the rock-bound coast; and above their head lowered the cold and cheerless blue of the stranger sky; even then and there one united utterance rose from their lips in grateful recognition of that hand that had brought them hither. It was not the persecution and tyranny of a Bigot and a Despot, it was not the intolerable exactions of a dominant ecclesiastical power, that drove them to these shores. God directed them to this land. Not more truly and directly were the bitter and heavy grievances which the Israelites were called to bear through the years of their bondage, ordered by Him, who had declared that He would send all these things upon them, than were the sad experiences which befell our ancestors, during the period of their Colonial history, and while under subjection to British misrule, prepared and proportioned by the same Almighty hand.

And if Moses could claim divine credentials as the Deliverer of the nation, and could say "The God of Abraham of Isaac and of Jacob, hath sent me unto you" why may we not recognize in Washington a Deliver of this nation divinely commissioned, bearing his credentials on his manly brow and in his great heart? Why may we not regard him as exalted by Providence to that proud position which he occupied as the Deliverer and Father of his country?

And then as through all the Forty years of wanderings and deprivations, when the Jews were in the wilderness, houseless and homeless, through their days of gloom and sadness, their perils of hungerings and thirstings, there was ever a guiding, a preserving and a protecting hand over them, so during the long years of struggle with England in which our fathers were contending for their liberties, their homes their all;—there were times when the interposition's and leadings of God's providence were as apparent as they were in the column of cloud and the pillar of fire that hung over the camp of Israel. There were times of suffering and want when relief was afforded like the dropping of manna from Heaven, or the opening of the Rock at Rephidim.

Indeed at every period of our country's history, from its discovery to the present moment, the hand of God has been visible in directing its affairs The time, the place, and peculiar circumstances of its early settlement all betoken the presence of the Almighty's arm for good.

Had the settlement been made at any other time, we should have had an established religion, an ecclesiastical Hierarchy, an adulterous and unhallowed connection of Church and State, such as has so long and so bitterly cursed the governments of the old world. And had it been made at any other place, than on the bleak shores of New England we should not have been taught that fortitude in suffering, that patient endurance of trial, that lofty contempt of danger, that resolution to struggle with difficulties so essential to give stability, energy, and high moral character to a nation. Thus from the earliest dawn of our nation's rising up to the present zenith of grandeur and magnificence; from its foundation laid in tears and blood even to the lofty dome gilded with highest splendours, the name of the Lord our God, may well be inscribed in ineffacable characters for He was the grand Designer, Architect and Builder. Among all the nations of antiquity the Jews were preeminently dear to God; his own chosen people; why? Because from them should come forth the Messiah, a light to illumine the world. Now I am disposed to set up no invidious claim for America. I utterly detest that vaunting boasting spirit that claims every excellence for "our nation" and is blind to its follies, its weaknesses and its defects But where, I ask in modern times, can be found a people enjoying so richly and and freely all the blessings of providence and grace as this? God seems to have chosen us; not as the kinsmen of Messiah, but as His light-bearers to the world.

But secondly—Let us consider a moment our privileges and advantages: Let us look at this glorious heritage our our fathers have left us. The Jews were summoned in the text to such a consideration and their inheritance is here graphically described. If theirs was 'great and goodly" what an heritage is ours!

Look at the vastness of our territory. Presenting an eastern and southern coast to the Atlantic and the gulf of Mexico of more than two thousand miles, indented with numerous bays and harbors and affording outlets to more than an hundred navigable rivers, some of which are the noblest that pour their waters into the mighty Ocean; stretching thence across the great American Continent from the Rock where two hundred years ago the Pilgrims greeted the morning Sun, to the Pacific where it sets in glory and throws back its last beams through "Golden Gates." Through thirty degrees of latitude, from the burning to the frigid zones, containing more than two millions of square miles, affording soil, surpassed by no other, for the variety, and abundance of its productions. Its gold mines pour forth their treasures with a prodigality which may one day depreciate its worth throughout the world. Its copper regions are unequalled on the globe for extent and value, while of iron and coal, there is an exhaustless supply for ages to come.

Think too of the spirit of enterprize and discovery which seem to be almost usherin the millenial day of earth's glory, among us. Every desert has been explored, every mountain scaled, every river laid under contribution to commerce or manufactures, while stately and unbroken forests have been made to bud and blossom as the rose. Already has the plough share pressed the Rocky mountains and turned its furrows in the land of the setting Sun, already have "great and goodly cities" sprung up as by enchantment where but a few years since the Red man lit his counsil fires, or the wild beast made his lair. Already have Canals and Rail-ways intersected and united the extremes of this vast continent, exchanging and distributing over the land the products of prairie and forest and mine. We have in operation nearly Forty-thousand miles of Rail way, more than enough to belt the entire globe. Already have those wires, tremulous with thought, audible with voices condensed space into a point and obliterated time to a moment transforming the body politic into a body-physical, whose nerves of sensation report simultaneously from the heart to the extremities tidings of joy or sorrow, pleasure or pain, peace or war.

If ever there was on earth a land furnished with all the elements of wealth, of prosperity and of influence, that land is ours. With a territory sufficient to sustain a population of Five Hundred Millions, a soil whose fertility has rendered it already the granary of the Old World's starving millions, with natural scenery so beautiful, bold and grand that God seems to have cast our continent in Nature's rarest, noblest mould with manufactures and commerce, unequalled in variety and extent, and mineral wealth sufficient for the wants of the world, with institutions (civil, literary and religious) indeed immature in the necessary imperfection of experiment and infancy, yet even now, boldly challanging the oldest nations under heaven to show us their superiors.—What other nation possesses within itself such resources for constituting a perfect independence? Like a planet in its completeness, America might move on with an isolated grandeur among the separate kingdoms of the Earth, diffusing with a liberal hand, but asking no return. Such is our inheritance! Such the greatness and glory of this land! Truly it is a goodly heritage.

I do not forget that, at this moment, there is a crisis in the commercial and monetary circles of the country—a panic, which causes the stoughtest heart to fear; which has shaken terribly the public confidence, and deranged seriously, all kinds of business. I do not, I can not forget to-day, the thousands of working-men, and working-women, who stand in shivering sadness among the "stopped machinery of the factories" and the silence and desolution of suspended labor, looking up to "the shadows of an awful winter overcasting them," whose hearts must yet be rung by the famishing cry of their little ones for bread. Nor would I have you forget these sufferers, or neglect to do all you can to minister to their wants. One of the most acceptable acknowledgements you can make to Heaven, for its bounties to you, will be active efforts to relieve, as far as possible the sufferings of the poor. I do not forget that hundreds who were yesterday among the merchant princes of this land, to-day, are beggars. I do not forget the disappointed hopes, the blighted prospects, the ruined fortunes, the desolated homes, which the present panic has produced. But with all this, we have abundant reason for gratitude and praise to the Giver of all good, and we have no cause to despair. Men cannot, perhaps, get rich as rapidly now as they did before and it will be far better for them that they should not. The unexampeled prosperity which we have enjoyed, had led to a foolish, a wicked, a most ruinous extravagance in our habits and style of living, while it had given birth to a wild, reckless spirit of speculation, which had begun to undermine the very foundations of Integrity and Honor, and had projected its cold shadow along the aisles, and over the very altars of the Temple of our God, eclipsing the glory of the sanctuary, and chilling the fountains of love and devotion in the hearts of its worshippers. A speculating mania had seized upon the whole nation, and if this signal rebuke, which God is administering to our worldliness and pride and extravagance, shall be the means of lessening these vices, of calling back our alienated affections to Him, and of leading us to seek, instead of "gold that perisheth," "the true riches," we shall, in the end, be infinite gainers.

But there is another aspect to this subject The sufferings, caused by this panic though severe in localities, must after all be only temporary and limited. There is more actual wealth in our country to-day, even in the midst of these pecuniary reverses, than ever before. The channels in which it flows are for a moment deranged, but there never was more money in the country than now, and there never has been a more productive season than the present. The great West has raised grain enough this year to supply all America and half of Europe. The earth has almost groaned beneath its superabundant crops. So that while the embarrassments of business are universal, actual suffering except in isolated cases, and in our large cities, need not be feared. Our fields are broad and every year expanding; our soil is rich, and climate genial. Millions of acres of virgin lands are waiting for the husbandman to extract their yielding wealth. Practically speaking, we may say that our internal resources are inexhaustible. There is room and work and bread for all.

No artificial, impassible boundaries, confine our people within narrow limits, and compell them to tread upon eachother until life is exhausted in the terrible struggle, and whole hecatombs of victims are trampled to death. If the somewhat crowded marts of the East begin to pinch their inhabitants; lo! is not the whole boundless continent theirs, to go whither they please, and when they please! There are Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, Arkansas, Texas, New Mexico, and Origon, each large enough for a kingdom in itself, stretching forth their arms to the people of populous states and cities, and shouting at the top of their lungs, "Come, we want you:" we want the strength of your sinews, your energy and your intelligence, to clear away our forests, turn up our prairies and exume the exhaustless wealth of our mines.

How different from all this is 'distress' in Europe! There it means, short crops hunger or starvation of the millions. It means the hoarse mutterings of these same millions, in the crowded streets, startling their rulers in their splendid palaces, like the quick and terrible rumbling which precedes an earthquake. Let us therefore, while looking, during a temporary pressure in the moneyed circles of the country, and the consequent interruption which it superinduces upon the dark side of the picture, recollect, the real substantial condition of abundant resources, and comparative comfort in which we find ourselves, and not add through mere hypocondraism and imaginary wretchedness, to the inconveniences and general evils of the hour. The great crisis is only a flitting shadow, an April cloud, that will in a moment, be gone, when the sun will again shine with increased splendor upon one of the freest happiest and most prosperous nations under heaven.

But Thirdly—Let us attend to the warning in the text. In the midst of prosperity, greatness and glory, such as ours there is danger. And God is saying to us to day, as he said to the Jews when they had "eaten and were full" "Beware lest thou forget the Lord, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage." This implies something more than a mere recollection of God. It means that we are to cultivate and exhibit feelings of gratitude and love and reverence and homage to Him, that we are to yield obedience to all His commands, and consecrate our lives to His service and to "bring forth the fruits of righteousness"

Now I need not say, to such an audience as this, that our permanent existence and prosperity as a nation, depend upon our reverence for and practice of the religion of the Bible? Nor need I attempt to prove to you, that, distinguished as we have been by divine blessings, and rich mercies, we owe an inconceivable debt of gratitude and love to the Author and Giver of all good. To that God, who watcheth so constantly over our nation's infancy, and rocked so lovingly its cradle amid the fierce storms that beat upon it in the solitudes of its forest sanctuary, who girded its loins with strength, and nourished it till it grew up to man's estate and rioted in the midst of plenty, strength and prosperity unequalled and unexampled. The mere statement that a special obligation is laid upon us to be a "holy people" whose "God is the Lord," commends itself at once to reason and to conscience. Gratitude demands this from us not only, but our very existence and future prosperity depend upon a deep veneration and love of the Bible, and an earnest cultivation and preservation of the virtues it teaches.

It is natural for man to regard wealth, and learning, and power, as the elements of national stability and greatness, but these however good and important in themselves, and in their place, are not enough. There may be some degree of stability arising from a wide extended commerce, the independent and intelligent mind of the present and coming generation, may encourage a hopeful feeling while great importance is ever to be attached to wise, humane and prudent legislation, yet in none, or all of these sources can be found the guarantee of future greatness and influence. It is only in the careful nursing of that tender plant which was set in our midst by the hand of the Pilgrims, for this alone is the true Cedar of Lebanon which can grow us and spread its broad and protecting branches over the Continent. The religion of the Bible alone, of all the wonderful agencies that have contributed to our glory, in the past is the one potent influence, that can ensure its continuance in the years to come. It is not simple morality, but spiritual, vital piety, christian principle, not an exterior vigor and expansion, but an inward life, not mere commercial integrity, honor and justice between man and man, in the transactions of daily business, but "righeousness towards God," not the intellectual refinement and cultivation of the people, not impregnable fortresses nor any political or national policy, not the elevation of any one man to the presidency of the nation, but the enthronement of the Great Jehovah over all our country's interests, the acceptance and practice of christianity in all its purity, as taught by its Founder, that can alone perpetuate to succeeding generations this glorious heritage which our sainted Fathers have transmitted to us. Do you doubt it? Go consult the records of the world's history. In mournful tones they tell us that the nation's who forget God, with all their boasted wisdom and power and wealth and greatness, rush to a sure and speedy destruction. This impressive lesson we read amid the ruins of every kingdom as we travel back over the centuries of the past, till history is lost in the twilight of fable. Amid the solitude and ruins of the first of Empires, are echoed the proud words of its founder. "Is not this great Babylon which I have built by might of my power and the honor of the my Majesty? On the crumbling walls of Egypt we read these impious words of its once powerful monarch. "Who is the Lord that I should obey His voice? And so from the ruins of every empire and kingdom that has passed away, there come to us in blended strains of sorrow and warning, the expostulation which is the unison with all God's teachings, "Beware, O! beware lest thou forget the Lord thy God."

Brethren, if to us, that day shall ever come, when the hymn of praise shall go no more up from our homes and our sanctuaries, when our children shall no more be taught to lisp the alphabet of piety and sing the anthem of redemption when youth and manhood shall no longer bow to the supremacy of Gods word—and the principles of the Bible no more rule in the hearts and the homes, and the Legislative Halls of this land then will our doom be sealed forever—and these broad thoroughfares now animate with life will be silent as the grave—these "great and goodly cities" depopulated and extinct, their glory gone, their palaces and domes and Temples and spires fallen and crumbled to dust. The waters of these Lakes and Rivers will again roll idly on while a solitary wilderness, like that which a few years ago echoed only to the cry of the wild beast in his lair, or the red hunter on his path of blood,—stretches once more along their shores.

But preserve and perpetuate through a careful religious education of our youth the principles of our holy religion, clinging with unyielding grasp to the truths, the doctrines and the precepts of the Bible, let its principles permeat and mould all our institutions, let them regulate national and individual life, and no imagination can paint the scenes of grandeur, which may yet be witnessed!

Onward and upward shall be our progress! 'Like the great Sun in the heavens, our light shall shine forth through the length and breath of the earth illuminating the nations who sit in darkness and reproducing itself in ever widening circles, till "like a sea of glory" its spirit of freedom, of intelligence, of enterprise, of philanthrophy, and of piety—" shall spread from pole to pole."

THE EFFECT OF RUM.—One of our citizens was in a liquor shop the other day, and noticed a woman and child come in together. They were poorly clad, but the child had a pretty good cap on his head. The woman took a little bottle from a basket, and asked to have it filled. The hard ware-man inquired for her money. She said he must charge it. He shook his head, and the woman turned to go out, but was suddenly seized with a new thought. She took the cap from the child's head, and a silver thimble from her finger, and laid them down on the counter. The dealer then went and filled the bottle, and the woman and her child departed, the latter crying for his cap, and the former without her thimble.—Toledo Blade

Mobile, Dec. 8.

The ship National, of Bath, Capt. Boyd from New Orleans for Havre, was totally lost, no date, near Havana. Crew saved. She had a cargo of tallow and cotton—3,300 bales of the latter was insured in New York and France. She was nearly a new ship of 1,066 tons burthen, and belonged to Capt. Berry and others of Bath.

POETRY & LITERATURE.

ORIGINAL.

For the Tecumseh Herald

Dec 2d. Evening

1st.

Dark! faint notes softly calling
Far away—and unperceived,
Save as on the pure sighing
Mists from weight of care relieved;
And a better moment's Stealing,
When the soul with love is rife;
And the eye of Faith is glistening—
Voices call to Purer Life.

2nd.

Loud the voices—there are many,
Sent—but are they all unknown—
Without catchest sound of any,
That when most turns thine to moan,
Is a voice from one departed,
Parent, husband, child or wife,
Heaven-sent—that oh broken hearted!
Seraphs call to Higher Life!

3rd.

Hush! the accents soft and saintly
As a pure soul's passing sigh;
Clarion high, nay—then but faintly
Through the world's din still they cry—
Oh! my sisters, oh! my brothers
Cease awhile the lucre-strife,—
Toil-tired fathers, care-worn mothers,
List the call to Nobler Life!

4th.

Yet again—and now more plainly—
Loud across the other sea
Shall they woo us, and all vainly
In a truer sense to be!"
Souls, unsatisfied and yearning
With earth's wrangling, jarring, strife,
For the Good beyond your earning

Scalping a Woman on the Plains.

Some weeks ago, news from Carson's Valley was published, which told of the almost total destruction of an Immigrant train by the Indians. A woman who was one of the train was scalped and left for dead. It turns out however, that she has since recovered to tell the extraordinary story of her sufferings and her resolute endurance, which deceived the savages. The Red Bluffs Lescon of the 10th of September, thus tells the tale:

"An instance of the most remarkable fortitude and heart rending cruelty we ever heard of, is related to us by a man who informs us the Indians attacked a train of six men and one woman and child—The men were all killed but one who made his escape. The child was killed, and its mother shot in several places with arrows, scalped and left for dead.

All the while they were scalping her and stripping her, she was perfectly conscious but feigned death, and let them tear the skin from her head without even giving signs of life, knowing that if she did they would either dispatch her at once or take her into hopeless captivity. At one time, when they had left her for a moment, she ventured to change her position, in order, if possible, to relieve herself from the uncomfortable position in which she was lying, but on their return they very soon discovered that she had moved, and for fear that life was not extinct, they took hold of the arrows that still sticking in her body, and worked them about in the wounds, and pushed deeper into the flesh, and stamped upon her with their heels.

All this she endured without uttering a groan or drawing a breath that could be perceived by the savages, and in that condition was left as food for the wolves. Fortunately, however, a train came along before she had lain long in that condition, and dressed her wounds, and brought her along with them; and not the least remarkable fact attending the whole matter, is that she is fast recovering from her wounds; her head, we are told, is nearly well, and the arrow wounds doing better than any one expected.—Miners Rural American.

Lenawee Co. Teachers Association

The annual meeting of the Lenawee County Teachers' Association will be held at Adrian on Friday and Saturday the 25th and 26th inst. As it comes during the holiday vacation a full attendance of nearly all the Teachers in the county may be confidently expected. We would also recommend the friends of education generally to make their arrangements to attend upon its sittings, and while they would themselves be much interested and benefitte in doing so the influence also upon the Teachers would be both salutary and cheering.

We are justly proud of the teachers of Lenawee county, and should spare no pains to encourage every reasonable effort to correct and elevate the standard of educational effort and enterprize throughout the county. This association has already, in this respect, made a marked impression upon the public mind, and has also we believe exerted a like beneficial influence upon the teachers themselves.

The meetings of the association are uniformly pleasant and interesting, a portion of each day being so appropriated as to constitute among the teachers and others in attendance a sort of educational social, in which the teachers, bound together by a mutual sympathy, from being all engaged in a like pursuit, and many of them, long accustomed to meet together from time to time in these associations, mingle with a marked and lively interest.

Its sessions and exercises are open to all and the public generally and all teachers, in particular are respectfully invited to attend.

A Democratic State Convention.

We notice that in our last issue, we are made, by a mistake of course, for we were absent at the time, to call for a Democratic State Convention, and that too, for reasons that are certainly important, if true.

Now, if our democratic friends think that the exigencies of the case, or even of the party, require a State Convention to set it right, we have certainly no possible objection to their holding one just when and where they please, but we had much rather they should call it, than to take upon ourselves the responsibility of doing so.

As we had been made, by this simple mistake of not giving credit to another paper for that taken from it, to say; precisely what we did not think, we were a little inclined to say, just what we did think, with reference to the matters alluded to in that call, but we have abundant other opportunities to express our political predilections and sentiments, and upon the whole, we do not choose to occupy the columns of the Herald with anything of the kind.

LENAWEE COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT—Is now in session. Besides the ordinary civil business, there is also an unusual heavy criminal celandar. The Grand Jury also is in session. The manner in which Judge Wilson, who presides, performs the duties devolving upon him, is a matter of commendatory remark with every one, except the criminals, who seem to feel that there is little favor or hope of escape for them.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.—We have kept our columns open to the last moment for the purpose of giving to our readers in this issue, at least a synopsis of the Presidents Message, but it has not, owing to some difficulty with the telegraph wires on the main lines yet arrived. All that we have been able to get hold of is a brief extract in the Toledo Blade in which the President goes on to endorse the action, of the Kansas Convention, thinks the submission it proposes to the people sufficient, and that the Slaves now there are already property under the Constitution of the United States and the Dred Scott decision, and could not properly have been declared to be illegally held, or in any way confiscated.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 8.

The letter to the Republican from the Utah expedition, the main points of which, were telegraphed yesterday, states that Col Cook's command was 150 miles west of Fort Larimie on the 3d of Nov. Thus far, the traveling had been pleasant and easy; but now, the weather was growing colder; provisions getting scarce, and provender giving out; and it was apparent that great hardships were before them. Still, notwithstanding the threat from Salt Lake city, the entire army would proceed as rapidly as the elements and supply of food would permit, to winter quarters, marked out by Col. Johnston, on Honey Fork of Green River.

It is rumored to be the intention of Brigham Young to fight the troops this winter as the best chance for an equal conflict, and then, before re inforcements can be sent in the spring, to destroy all the Mormon possessions in Utah, and proceed to some other country. The Democrat has received letters from Kansas, containing two proclamations from Calhoun, specifying the manner of Election on the 21st inst.

General News.

New York, Dec. 6

The trouble among the Erie R. R. laborers at Piermont, was owing to the reduction of wages from one dollar to seventy five cents per, day. The men refused to work and 200 others were sent up from this city, but were prevented from working, by the old force who assailed them with clubs, stones, and other missles. A force of policemen went up with them yesterday afternoon, and at a late hour, last night information was received that the steamboat arrived at Piermont shortly after dark and found the place garrisoned by about six hundred men under arms and a brass cannon planted, to prevent their landing. A parley was held, but the old force resolutely refused to abdicate. They offered to go to work at the old rates, but would resist to the death, the attempt of any body of men sent to supercede them. The steamer was hauled off out of cannon shot and anchored until morning.

New York, Dec. 5.

A man giving his name as Charles E. Warren, of St. Louis, has been arrested in Jersey City on suspicion of being concerned in a heavy robbery in Cincinnati. Three thousand dollars worth of watches and jewelry was found in his possession.

Two or three inches of snow fell last night but has entirely disappeared. Weather thick and rainy.

The steamship Atlantic left for Liverpool to day at noon with 58 passengers and $1,761,500 in specie.

Judge Ingraham delivered this morning in the General Term of the Court of Common Pleas an opinion adverse to so much of the Port Warden act, passed by the Legislature last spring, as attempted to confer on the board of Wardens, appointed by the Governor and Senate, the exclusive right to survey ships and cargoes. Judge Daley and Brady concurred.

It is now stated that no fight occurred at Piermont, that no arms had been used and that the cannon story was entirely false.

A dispatch to the railroad office in this city this morning, states that everything was quiet and the new men were going to work at reduced wages.

The funeral of Crawford, the Sculptor took place to-day in St. John's Church, Varick st. The remains were this day removed to Greenwood, where a suitable monument will be reared.

At the adjourned meeting of the New York Stockholders of the New York Central Rail Road to-day, the following ticket was nominated for Directors:

The Draft of a letter to the Directors as regard the details of the management, recommends: 1st.—That no debt be created in any one year exceeding $250,000, without first obtaining the consent of the stockholders.—Secondly—That the company should not be implicated as endorser, or in any way with another Road, or allow its guarantee to be used for the benefit of any officers or Directors. Thirdly.—That all free passes, except to directors, be discontinued. Fourthly.—That a Committee of directors or agents, appointed by them, shall make all purchases for the road, and that a board of auditors should be formed without whose signature, no bills shall be presented to the Treasurer. Fifthly.—That a Committee of five stock holders, (not directors,) shall be appointed, who shall annually, 30 days before the election, make an examination of the affairs of the road, aided by accountants at the expense of the company, and that 20 days before the annual election, a general meeting of the stockholders shall be held, to hear the report and nominate candidates for directors.

Washington, Dec. 7.

The weather here to day is charming—Dense crowds in the galleries and other parts of the capitol, and the greetins between members and friends are pleasant and exciting.

Senate.—Fifty Senators were when the body was called to order by the Secretary, who read a letter from the Vice President, stating that he would not be able to reach washington by the commencement of the session.

On motion of Mr. Benjamin, a resolution was adopted, that the oath prescribed by the Constitution be administered to the new Senators by Mr. Bright the oldest member present. Andrew Johnston of Tenn. and Daniel Clark of New Hampshire, new members, took their seats and then proceeded to ballot pro tem for President. Hon. Benj. Fitzpatrick, of Alabama, was chosen and returned thanks for the favor returned on him.

The usual resolutions to inform the President that the Senate was organized and in readiness, were then adopted, and the Senate went into an executive session, confirmed Geo. W. Bowman Editor of the Bedford (Penn.) Gazette, as Superintendent of Public Printing.

The Senate adjourned without transacting any other business.

House.—On call of the roll at 12 o'clock, 222 members answered to their names, and a quorum having thus been ascertained to be present, the House proceeded to election of a Speaker James L. Orr, of South Carolina, was nominated by Mr. Jones of Tennessee, and Hon. Galusha A. Grow, of Pennsylvania, by Mr. Banks, with the following result: Orr 128, Grow 84—scattering 13. Mr. Orr was declared elected.

On assuming it, Mr Orr expressed thanks for the honor conferred upon him. He said the delicate and responsible duties of the chair would be comparitively light if he should be so fortunate as to cordial co operation of the members, in dispatching business and upholding the dignity of the House.—He promised to administer rules which may be adopted with firmness and impartiality.—The great business confided to them, admonished them to cultivate patriotism as expansive as the confederacy itself. He cherished the hope that business would be transacted to promote the interests and happiness of the entire people. That the Constitution would be maintained in its integrity, and that their legislation would quicken the greatness of and glory of our common country. The members were then sworn, advancing by delegations for that purpose.

The announciation of the result was greeted with applause. The Clerk appointed Messrs. Stephens of Ga. and Banks of Mass., a Committee to conduct Mr. Orr to the Chair. The oath was administered by Mr. Giddings.

The Crisis.

SCENE.—A sumptuously furnished chamber in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Percy discovered preparing to retire for the (remainder of the) night.

TIME.—2 in the morning.

Mrs. P.—Why were you so dull at the party to-night? I declare, Charles you were quite stupid! (Steps out of a splendid ball dress which had cost two hundred dollars—and pushes it carelessly aside with her foot.) What was the matter with you?

Mr. P.—My dear, surely I had enough to sober me.

Mrs. P.—(Removing her diamond ear rings valued by Tiffany at $2,000.) Sober, in spite of all the wine you drank? I know now that you are going to preach to me until day-light about my extravagance; but I am tired and sleepy and do not want to hear a word about it. For all you pretend to be so poor, you don't deny yourself anything, Mr. Percy; and I tell you I will have a party, and it shall as much surpass Mrs. Globule's as her's surpassed Mrs. Astor's.

Mr. P.—My dear wife, prepare your mind for the terrible truth. The great firm of Ralph, Galen & Co. yesterday allowed their paper to go to protest. Percy & Co were upon it as endorsers, to the amount of $80,000. That we shall be called upon to-day to pay, besides not less than $75,000 of our own paper. We cannot meet it; before another sun shall set, the name of Percy and Co. will be bruited all over the city as bankrupt.

Mrs. P.—(With a little shriek.) Gracious heavens! Is it possible! What shall we do? What will people say of us? (Sinks into a chair, quite pale under her rouge.) Reach me the smelling bottle my dear.

Mr. P.—(Hands her the salts.) Calm your emotions, my dear wife. We shall need all our fortitude.

Mrs. P.—Surely papa will help you in this crisis; and brother Samuel—

Mr. P.—Both are involved in the failure of our firm and will lose every penny they have in the world.

Mrs. P.—(Abasfied.) Oh! Charles, Charles! How could you have the heart so ruin them too? My poor, poor father. (Weeps.)

Mr. P.—Now you see why I was so stupid to-night, in spite of all the wine I drank.

Mrs. P.—For gracious sake, what is to become of us?

Mr. P.—We must abandon this expensive mansion. A hundred thousand dollar house is not proper for the bankrupt.

Mrs. P.—What? Quit the fifth avenue! I cannot live anywhere else, unless, indeed it be abroad.

Mr. P.—I must, do without my fast horse, the children must dispose of their ponies, and you must do without your carriage.

Mrs. P.—Do without my morgans and the carriage? You are crazy Charles?

Mr. P.—No; on the contrary, I have just come to my senses. The stable expenses are not less than $3,000 a year, and our horses and vehicles cost me $5,000. We must do without them.

Mrs. P.—Then you will send away the coachman and John, and the two hostlers. (Sarcastically.) Hadn't you better send away all the servants.

Mr. P.—Not all; We will retain one—possibly two. A cook and a chamber-maid, with a house at a thousand dollars a year rent, must serve us to live in.

Mrs. P.—Oh! heavens! Are we to be reduced to such a Muggin's life as that? I shall die! (Sobs hysterically.) The next thing you will want me to do, I suppose will be to part with my diamonds.

Mr. P.—Not your diamonds only, but the most of your other jewelry also. So that the pile of trinkets of which you have disencumbered yourself, and here (goes to the bureau and opens a magnificent case containing several costly watches, and a numerous variety of costly bracelets brooches, rings, chains and pins,) are emerald, topas, amethyst, pearls and rubies, in wasteful profusion, they must all go to Tiffany's to be sold. I will add two watches of my own, and my Kochinoor diamond to the lot. Even in these hard times they will bring not less than $10,000.

Mrs. P.—You are stark, staring mad to think of such a thing! Mine alone cost twice that. I will never consent to it; I'm sure I wont! If you have a mind to be a fool, Mr. P., you may. However, it may be your tastes to sacrifice your wife and family, but it is not mine. I will keep my jewelry and the plate, and repair with the children to the continent. And if you are not a fool, Mr. Percy, you will put out of the way of your creditors all the property you can, and follow me in the next steamer. I like Paris, and don't mind living there for a year or two, out of the way of these humiliating trials.

Mr. P.—And you would have me cover my spotless reputation, and my mercantile honor with infamy.

Mrs. P.—You are a fool, Percy, to talk so. Isn't it done every day? Isn't self-preservation the first law of nature? Does not Dr. Swivel say that no man who does not first provide for his own household is worse than an infidel? At any rate, I shall do my duty. Certainly we owe something to ourselves and children. (Places all the jewels, etc., in the case locks it, puts the key under her pillow, and retires to bed.)

Mr. P.—My dear, your counsel is not good, and the course you propose would hurt me more than poverty. That is not crime, the other is. Stripped of all the adventitious adjuncts of wealth, our costly residence, servants in livery, carriages, jewels and other insignia of what is called "high social position," and what are we after all? Simply a man and his wife, and two children. The man, one that can work with his head, and if need be, with his hands; the lady, one who can be a good housekeeper.

Mrs. P.—(From the pillow.) How vulgar you are, sir!

Mr. P.—And the children, two boys, who can be taught to earn their own living as their father did before them.

Mrs. P.—Shameful! You talk shamefully!

Mr. P.—There are hundreds of families in New York, intrinsically as good as we are, in every respect, living comfortably on incomes of less than 1,000 dollars per annum.

Mrs. P.—(Angrily.) So can we sir, in Florence or Rome, and I shall go there, or to Paris at any rate! I won't stay here to share your self-imposed privations, I tell you!

Mr. P.—Then, madam, be it so, I prefer my honor, even to—(Hesitates.)

Mrs. P.—(Tartly.) Even to your wife!

Mr. P.—(Firmly.) Yes, madam, even to my wife.

Mrs. P.—(Sobbing.) Oh! what a brute!

Mr. P. turns down the gas, gets into bed, and scene closes.

RHEUMATISM—NEURALGIA.—The agonies of Rheumatism and Neuralgia are among the most acute with which the human frame is ever afflicted, and have heretofore been found the most difficult to remove. Happily a remedy is now discovered by which the most obstinate cases can be immediately cured.—This sovereign Remedy is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT, for sale by Druggi ts generally. It is only necessary for the sufferer to try it, to be assured of its efficacy.

The most skeptical people can be convinced by trial that all the family medicines are not humbug, and that among the thousand of butterfly life there are a few of great merit, and undoubted worth. Of these, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy stands first and foremost among the remedies of the day that can be relied on as a medicine that is all that is recommended by its proprietors.

It advertises itself on every trial, for there are none who use it but tell their friends to do so, and so it goes from mouth to mouth till all the people of the Union have learned the good of this truly valuable medicine. It is recommended with testimonials to prove its virtue for the cure of liver complaints of every kind, from the worst Dyspepsia to a common headache, and is particularly adapted to Jaundice, Deranged Stomach, Bowel Complaints and diseases of children.

One or two doses are said to cure a cold with scarce a failure. It is worth a trial for this alone. It is particularly adapted to use of ladies, particularly those of sedentary habits. Some ladies of the highest standing in society have given their certificates of its efficacy, and we say to all who are ailing, try one bottle, and you will never be without it.

What He Might Have Been.

J. G. Holland, editor of the Spring field Republican, has been rusticating in Vermont looking around among the farmers, and writes to that sheet as follows:

"Imagine your correspondent imagining the life he might have led, (and came very near leading for that matter,) among the hills as a farmer. He could have grown up stalwart, and strong, with horny hands, and a face as black as the ace of spades. He could have taught school winters, (as he did,) worked on the farm summers and gone out haying for 15 days in July at a dollar a day and taken for it the iron work and running gear of a wagon. At 22, or thereabouts, he would have begun to pay attentions to a girl with a father worth $2,000, with a spit curl on her forehead— a girl who always went to singing school and 'sat in the seats,' and sung with her mouth open—a damnation pretty girl anyway. It would have been a strife between him and Tom Butts to see which would have her.—Well, after seeing her home from singing school one or two seasons, Tom Butts being triumphantly 'cut out,') and taking her to the fourth of July and getting about $100 together, he would have married her, and settled down. Years would have passed away, and that girl with the spit curl would have had eleven children, just as sure as you live—7 boys and 4 girls.—We should have had a hard time bringing them up, but they would soon be able enough to do the milking and help their mother on washing days and I getting independent at last and ceasing a little stiff in the joints, should be elected a member of the legislature or being assessor and school committee for years. In the evening of my days with my pipe in my mouth, 13 barrels of cider in the cellar, and the Spring field Republican in my hands, weekly I would sit and look over the Brighton Market, through a pair of gold mounted spectacles, and wonder what you put such a strange, silly letter in the paper for. Ah, well! There are worse lives than that led by those who despise them.

FUNERAL.—An exchange paper, announcing a person's decease, says, "His remains were committed to that bourne whence no traveler returns, attended by his friends. He was buried under Masonic honors."

To the Press.

On the 4th of November 1857, a little boy named Frank Barnard was missed from his father's, in Oshtemo, in this county. Thorough search has been made in the immediate neighborhood, but thus far unsuccessfully. It is now believed that the little fellow has been abducted, and your aid is needed to restore him to his bereaved relatives. He was two years old the 23d of September last; his hair is almost white, eyes light blue; talks a very little, calls his name 'Fay Barn,' when asked. Has a scar caused by a burn on the top of his right foot, and a small red mark on his right breast about the size of a sixpence. Frank wore, when last seen, skirt striped red, yellow and blue, blue and white linen gingham dress, straw hat, and cotton drawers.

Will you publish the substance of this article, and confer a lasting benefit upon the afflicted parents? If any information is obtained, will you please address, 'Benj. F. Orcutt, Sheriff, Kalamazoo, Mich.'

FORETELLING THE WEATHER.—By the changes of the moon, that is, from the position the moon is in when it changes. If the moon is south of the equator, the weather will be warm, if north, it will be cold. For instance, if the moon rises at 6 o'clock in the evening, and 'quarter to 7 o'clock, its position being in the east, denotes cool and falling weather. If, instead of changing at 7, it should change at 11, it being in the south, would denote warm weather, or if it should change at 11 o'clock P. M., it would be in the north, and would denote cold weather.

This is the sailor's rule for prognosticating the weather, and after 15 years observation, I am satisfied it is more reliable than any other mode known, always saving Prof Ryan's immaculate, and transcendanly sublime and overpoweringly obfusticated system, not yet revealed, to the wondering crowd who inhabit this mundane sphere. I would recommend the curious in such matters to test the sailors method of foretelling the weather, and can assure them that it is not all moonshine.—Leon

INDUCEMENTS TO SUBSCRIBERS.—A York State editor says:

We shall probably commence the publication of the "Acts of the Apostles" in a few weeks—as soon as we can procure a copy. Now is the time to send in the subscribers. Extra copies can be furnished those who desire to secure this excellent story. City papers desiring to secure this rare publication, will receive an exchange by inserting this notice six times, and sending us marked copies of their papers containing it.

Two darkies in the west went out to hunt possums, and by accident found a large cave, with a small entrance. Peeping in they discovered three young bear whelps in the interior.

"Look heah, Sam, while I go in dar,' said one, 'and gets de young bars, you just watch heah for de ole bar.

Sam got asleep in the sun, and when opening his eyes he saw the old bear seeming her way into the cave.—Quick as a wink he caught her by the tail and held on like blazes.

'Hallo, dar, Sam, what dark de hole dar?'

'Lor' bless you, Jambo, save yourself, honey; if dis tail come out, you'll find what dark de hole!'

A Washington dispatch states that Fillibuster Walker's rendevous at Powder Horn, Texas, has been broken up and his recruits disbanded, but gives no particulars.

A man who married a Miss Take after having courted a Miss Lloyd, was told by a friend that it was reported that he was married to Miss Lloyd. 'It was a Miss Take, I assure you,' he replied.

YANKEE POETRY.—A down east poet thus immortalizes the beautiful river Connecticut:

'Roll on loved Connecticut, long hast thou ran, giving shad to old Hartford and freedom to man!'

James Sage was shooting at a mark on the door of an outhouse at Millpoint, Michigan, and his mother having entered it unknown to him, while he had gone into the dwelling house to load his rifle, he shot her through the heart.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BRIMFIELD, MASS., 20th Dec., 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER: Hind Sir—I consider it my duty to say the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the concomitant symptoms of a Cold, is your CHERRY PECTORAL. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of these complaints. EBEN KNIGHT, M. D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your PECTORAL myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SPRINGFIELD, Miss., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the other diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people. HUGAN CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTEZUMA, Ia., writes, 24 Jan., 1856: "I had a terrible Influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief. Finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one bottle took me entirely well. Your medicine are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and a welcome visit, indeed, and your remedies as the pony express through."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST HANOVER, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: YOUR CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming attacks of asthma, and is now curing others who have labored under the fangs of the fiend for the last 30 years. BENJ'N L. PARK, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M. D., Alton, Mercer Co., Iowa writes, Sep. 15, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon trial.

Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Scarce a no human skill can reach; but even these the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ASTOR HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 3, 1856.

DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no one could promise cure her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.

Yours, with gratitude and regard,

ORLANDO SHELBY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and he cures all around us because the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these Pills have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they work unprecedentedly upon the system of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. Thus purged of the foul humors which breed and grow disease, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into their natural action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations merit the immediate to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a Foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by imprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for Ayer's Pills, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them, and they should have it.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER,

Practical and Analytical Chemist, Lowell, Mass.

The Stranger on the Sill.

BY T. S. READ.

Between the broad fields of wheat and corn,
Is the lovely home where I was born;
The peach tree leans against the wall,
And the sweet-brier wander near all;
There's the shaded doorway, dark—
But a stranger's foot has crossed the sill.

There is the barn and, as of yore,
I can smell the hay from the open door,
And see the busy swallows throng,
And hear the pewee's mournful song;
But the stranger comes, O! painful proof—
His shadow is piled to the heated roof.

There is the orchard—the very trees,
That knew my childhood so well to please,
Where I watched the the shadowy moments run,
Till my life fumbled more of shade than sun;
The swing from the the bough still sweeps the air,
But the strange ste children are swinging there.

It babbles the shady spring below,
With its bulrush where the hands grow;
'Twas there I found the cutanous root,
And watched the minnows poise and shoot,
And heard the robin lave his wing—
But the stranger's bucket is at the spring.

O, ye who daily cross the sill,
Step lightly, for I love it still;
And when you crowd the old barn eaves,
Then think what countless harvest sheaves,
Have passed within that scented door,
To gladden eyes that are no more.

Deal kindly with those orchard-trees,
And when your children crowd your knees,
Their sweetest fruit they shall impart,
As if old memories stirred their heart;
To youthful sport leave the swing,
And in sweet reverence hold the spring.

AGRICULTURAL.

Management of Milk—Butter and Cheese Making, &c.

From an excellent chapter on the Dairy, furnished by "Hetty Hayfield" to the Valley Farmer, we copy the following:

Milk should be strained before the cream begins to rise, into vessels that have been scalded, and in summer rinsed in cold water. If milk is kept at proper temperature, cream will rise to the surface of any vessel, but sooner in shallow pans. Skim milk is not a presentable article on a well to do farmer's table. For table use it sho'd be strained into covered pitchers or bottles. Milk will yield up all its cream in from 24 to 30 hours. Cream should be gathered in a jar for churning, and stirred up night and morning. If you have occasion to save sweet cream, keep it in a freezer as if preparing ice cream. It will change very soon when taken out for use. Clabber for the table should be strained into a bowl, and after coagulating, set on the ice until prepared for use.

Directions for curds will be found under cheese. They should be drained broken fine, kept on ice and served with loaf sugar, nutmeg and cream.

Buttermilk is best of cream soured and moderately thick. If water has been poured into the churning it will rise to the top after a few hours, and can be poured off. Indeed an excellent milk-managing neighbor, who cannot churn often, pours a pitcher of water into her buttermilk every morning, stirs it well, and pours it off at dinner, —she says it keeps it fresh all the time. Clabber, surplus buttermilk or sour skim milk, heated until it curds makes good chicken feed.

Butter.—Numbers of reliable experiments have proved that butter made from sour cream is equal to any flavor, and is the most economical use of the milk, all in all. Sweet milk produces fine butter, but inferior buttermilk. Milk will produce butter (without waiting to separate the cream) in small quantity and poor buttermilk. Scalding the milk, according to a current theory, with us made no perceptible increase of butter, and impaired the flavor of the milk. The churn should be scalded, the milk poured in, and if as warm as when fresh from the cow, it is right. (55° by the thermometer.) Churn rapidly in cold weather, and moderately in warm. A few minutes work will bring the butter.

When the butter is carefully gathered, draw off the milk, pour in a bucket of fresh water, churn briskly, pour off the water, and repeat the operation until the butter is free from milk. (We repudiate the Holstein system of unwashed butter and hand manipulations.) Allow one ounce of fine salt to the pound of butter. Work it with a paddle thoroughly, and run a fork through it, lest a hair should have strayed through the seive. Set it away until it gets firm, then repeat the operation. When sure the water is out, set on a perforated dish to drain, after you have moulded it. The next day set it in your; butter crock, in a cool, dark place, or wrap in cloth and put in pickle, or beat it down into your firkins, if for winter use.

Butter Pickle.—One gallon water one pound fine salt, one ounce saltpetre, 2 ounces loaf sugar, boiled and skimmed clear. Pour on cold and keep two inches above the top of the butter.

Patent Medicines.

ONE DOLLAR WILL BUY

One of the best purgative and liver medicines now before the public, namely DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REGULATOR, and we are content to have the matter tried and more effectual than any other medicine now in use. It is not only a Cathartic, but a Tonic, acting first on the Liver to regulate its morbid action, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter. Thus accomplishing two purposes effecting, without any of the painful feeling experienced in the operations of usual cathartics. It strengthens the system at the same time that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build up with unusual rapidity. DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects.

Though possessing rare medical powers, these Gums have been but little known to Physicians and never used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the Invigorator, which met with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known as its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure Liver Complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver as is cured when the Liver is excited to action. CONSTIPATION is caused by an improper action of the Liver, and as a proof that the Invigorator relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses and retiring and it assists nature in her operations. By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work as regularly as clock work.

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the Invigorator, which corrects all acidity and soreness of the stomach.

For an overloaded stomach it has no equal as it relieves all oppressive or uneasy feeling after eating heartily. For a FAMILY MEDICINE generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints, and all diseases arising from a Disordered Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it, and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to Dyspeptics, for it made a complete cure before the first bottle was taken, and on we can eat anything edible without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain. Now what we want to say to all our readers is, if LIVER COMPLAINT OR DYSPEPSIA trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.—State Past.

We take infinite pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER, and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty, and thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of diseases incident to children, as DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR; nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it; for it acts as a Cathartic so mildly and gently, and seems to renovate the system so thoroughly that we think we are doing a service to all in advising them, when they need medicine, to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where every effort has been used in diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels, where all other remedies failed to give relief. It has become so useful in our family that we will not be without it.—Jacksonville Republican.

℞ AYER'S Cathartic Pills, (SUGAR COATED,)

ARE MADE TO

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK

Investitis, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Effects, and judge of their Virtues.

FOR THE CURE OF

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach, Piles.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once. If they will cure others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PEEBLE,
Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints.

Department of the Interior,
Washington, D. C., Feb. 1856.

Sir: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot conscientiously say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relaxy, and Worms.

Post Office, Maryland, Liv. Co., Mich., Nov. 15, 1856.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months. Went off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. So then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her, by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, while others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctor bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston

Dr. Ayer: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

Warsaw, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1855.

Dear Sir: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORDRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawles, of the Methodist Epis. Church

Pulaski House, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1856.

Honored Sir: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has given me if I did not report it for the public. I was confined in my limbs and brought to excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By perseverring in the use of them I am now entirely well.

Senate Chamber, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec., 1855.

Dr. Ayer: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skillful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, INFLUENZA, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country on this continent without some personal experience of its effects; and fewer yet the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the CHERRY PECTORAL saves more lives by the early consumptions it prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable, for neglect them until no human skill can master the inexorable canker that fastened on the lungs, ends your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and as they know too the virtues of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely on it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.

Help the Poor.

BY C. G. DUNN.

"Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them."

Help the poor! they need assistance!
Pass them not unheeded by—
Excercise a strong resistance
'Gainst thy useless vanity,
And by acts of moral beauty,
'Mong the lowly do your duty.

What are satins? what are tatters?
They but indicate the clan;
Fashion's raiment only flatters
Outward show, and not the man.
Rags are eloquent revealings
Of the crushed heart's bitter feelings.

What is life, that we so lightly
Should consider grief and pain?
Though for us all things shine brightly,
And there's fortune in our train,
Yet the hearts that we have slighted,
Have by sorrow's frosts been blighted.

Scoff not at the suffering lowly—
Rather love them more and more;
Let us set examples holy,
If we would their joy restore,
And our hallowing behavior
Will be treasured by the Saviour.

Help the poor, the weak and stricken,
While they struggle with their fate—
While their heavy sorrows thicken—
Help them ere it be too late;
While their hot tears upward bubble
Let us take them out of trouble.

God of mercy—oh, have pity
On the bleeding hearts around
On the hearts that in the city,
Stung with misery are found.
Look thou down upon the humble,
They who in the darkness stumble.

Help the poor! O, show them kindness;
They have hearts to feel and know
There is far too much of blindness
In the eyes of men below—
And by acts of moral beauty
Let us ever do our duty.

The Living Death.

Sheriff Gray who has just been to the State Penitentiary at Jackson, with the prisoners condemned at the last sitting of the Circuit Court, gave us a description of the cells in the prison for solitary confinement. They are roomy and comfortable, but lined with boiler plate throughout, and the only aperture for light is at the top, where a feeble twilight as it were is admitted through a massive iron casement. A small peep hole gives a person outside an opportunity to look in, but the prisoner can neither see a human face nor hear a human voice! It is virtually condemnation to starvation of the mind. In physical starvation, the vital machinery being deprived of its required supply of fuel from without commences burning up the body from within. The fatty tissue is first consumed, next the softer muscles, and next the brain, and the unfortunate victim dwindles into idiocy or insanity and dies.

In intellectual and mental starvation, the process seems to be somewhat analogous We have heard it stated that the average duration of human life in solitary confinement is two years. A friend cites to us the report of the postmortem examination of a solitary prisoner who died in the Vermont State Prison. The internal organs presented a similar appearance with those of wild beasts which die from confinement.

Are we wrong, then, in naming this the living death? We are strongly inclined to the opinion that the death penalty should be restored in our State. The punishment we have described, terrible as it is in its crushing realty, has not the terror of immediate death, after all. The number of murder convicts in our penitentiary has increased from 16 last year to 26 now. Whoever witnessed the cool indifference with which the murderers sentenced at the late sitting of our Court here, witnessed their own trial, could not but be convinced that they felt but little fear of the punishment which awaited them.—Ottawa Register.

THE POOR BOY.—Don't be ashamed my good lad, if you have a patch on your elbow. It is no mark of disgrace. It speaks well for your industrious mother. For our part, we would rather see a dozen patches on your jacket than hear one profane or vulgar word escape your lips, or smell the fumes of tobacco in your breath. No good boy will shun you because you cannot dress as well as your companions; and if a bad boy sometimes laughs at your appearance, say nothing, my good lad, but walk on. We know many a rich and good man who was as poor you. Fear God, my boy, and if you are poor, but honest, you will be respected—a great deal more than if you were the son of a rich man, and were addicted to bad habits.

A man who marries a frivolous flirt "gives to airy nothing a local habitation and a name."

A Lesson for Young Ladies.

One warm afternoon in August a traveling carriage might have been seen wending its way along the road towards a large town some twenty miles distant from its place of starting. This unusual mode of conveyance in our railroad age, was adopted from motives of pleasure by a little party inside, which consisted of a Mr. Elton, a married gentleman of thirty five accompanied by his young sister Helen, and her friend, Clara Vernon. The fourth person who made up the party was a young English gentleman, a friend and visitor of Mr Elton's. Mrs. Elton being somewhat of an invalid, had been for some weeks at a celebrated water cure establishment, and their errand was to bring her home. As they arrived at the top of a steep ascent, they saw that a very black cloud was rapidly approaching them and that if they would escape the fury of the storm they must hasten to the first shelter. In a few moments they perceived a lonely cottage on the left, and to this they hastily drove, and begged protection from the rain which had already commenced falling.

The old man who answered their summons at the door bid them enter at once, while he directed Mr. Elton where to drive the horses and carriage. This done he ushered them first into a neat kitchen where an old lady was sitting in an arm chair, with a large bible open before her.

'Here wife,' said the old man 'are some travelers overtaken by the storm. I know you will give them a welcome.'

'Certainly, with great pleasure,' said the old lady, who still retained much loveliness of face 'I am very sorry;' she continued, 'that I cannot wait upon them myself.'

The shower raged with violence for a short time, and then set in for a regular rain, and Mr. Elton decided that, if the old people would give them a supper, they would remain until sunset, when it would probably clear away.

He stepped out to make enquiries, and soon returned, saying that it was entirely out of their power to do so, as the old lady was almost helpless, and their daughter, who lived with them and took care of them, was absent with a rich sister—'She comes home,' said the old lady, 'once a week to cook for us, and leaves enough to last in her absence. To morrow is her time to return, and we are nearly out of provisions, and dare not spare what little we have.' 'The poor old lady seemed so distressed about it,' said Mr. Elton, 'that I was sorry I asked her.'

'If a cook is all that is wanted that can easily be supplied,' said Miss Vernon, springing from her seat with alacrity 'I should like to get tea, it is so long since I have had a chance. Let me go and see about it.' The little company looked amazed.

'Why, Clara, dear, 'said Miss Helen in a pleading voice, 'you are surely not going to take the place of a servant, or of the old woman's vulgar daughter, are you?'

'To be sure I am, my dear,' said Clara, laughing, 'I often get tea at home and in spite of your shocked nerves, I am not afraid to say that you will eat my buiscuit with a relish; but first I must see if my good mother will have me in the kitchen.' She soon returned with a smiling face, saying as she laid off her cape and gloves, 'The old lady was very gracious, and quite willing I should do as I like—so prepare yourselves for a capital supper! Helen, my love, you look horrified I must laugh at you,' and away she went

'Well,' said Helen, sinking back into her chair, and clasping her white jeweled hands together in a despairing attitude 'I am surprised! Mr. Clarendon, I beg you will suspend your judgment of my friend, for, notwithstanding her singular conduct, I assure you her family are very aristocratic, and she is really a lovely girl.'

Mr Clarendon bowed, and said 'he had no doubt of it,' and if he dared, he would have added that he was surprised and delighted too, for he had begun to think that American ladies were a very helpless class of beings. But he very wisely kept his own counsel—and his eyes opened.

'Helen, my dear,' said her brother, 'had you not better go and see if you cannot render some assistance to your friend? It is to hard for her to have all the labor alone!'

'Oh Edward,' lisped the young lady, 'how can you be so cruel? I never was in a kitchen I believe, in my life. I had rather starve than do such vulgar work.'

'I believe it, Helen,' said Mr. Elton, with a vexed look, for he understood the expression of Mr. Clarendon's face. 'I however, shall, see if I cannot be of service to Miss Vernon.'

'I think I will go, too,' said Clarendon; and much to Helen's disgust she was left to look pretty and refined, and useless, alone, in the little front room. Just as the gentleman approached the kitchen door, their steps were arrested by Clara's sweet voice saying:

'Will you not let me have an apron, mother? Tell me where to get one please.'

'There is one of my daughter Susan's in that drawer—no, no,' added she in an instant 'please open the one under that. There are some which belonged to my darling Jenny—sweet lamb! she placed them there herself. Take that white one—she always wore it when she made buiscuit.'

Clara tied it on and then went into the neat pantry opening out of the kitchen, in which she found every necessary convenience for cooking.

As she measured out her flour and commenced making her buiscuit, she continued the conversation, the gentlemen, we are ashamed to say standing like enchanted knights at the half open door, unobserved by those within. They saw that their services were not needed for the old man had kindled a fire, and the old lady was sitting by the stove broiling some very tempting slices of ham.

'You were saying,' said Clara, 'that this apron belonged to your daughter Jenny. Is she not with you now?'

'Ah, no,' sighed the old lady, 'she died last fall.'

'That was a sad affliction, truly,' said Clara. 'I trust you have received help and comfort from above, under it.'

'Ah, my dear young lady, that we have, and the sweetest and best, too; for her death was the means of leading us to look up to our Heavenly father as we never did before.'

'Please tell me more about her,' said Clara

Well, she was as pretty a little thing as ever you saw. She did not seem like the rest of us, though she always loved us dearly. She was small and fair and had soft blue eyes and such beautiful golden hair, and she always spoke low and sweet, as you do, lady, and she seemed to be thinking of different things from what we did. Yet she was never idle, though her sisters would never let her do hard work as they did. She used to take care of the front room, and trim it up with flowers whenever there was any to be had; and she always wore a white apron; she could not bear the common coarse blue check Elizabeth and Susan wore.'

'I noticed some books in the other room were they her's?' asked Clara after a pause.

'Oh, yes. One summer a rich lady, came here to board for her health, and she brought those books. She and Jenny were great friends, and when she went away she left all her books to her. She used to sit and read hour after hour. We always indulged her, because she was so sweet; we did not think it would hurt her.'

'What caused her death?' asked Clara, softly, as she put her biscuits in the oven and wiped the flour off her hands.

'Oh, I don't know, nothing in particular. She faded—faded away, something like the sunlight. By and by she could not set up. She was always reading in her bible, and talking about Heaven, and the Saviour, and the angels. One day she told us that she should die that night at sun down, and she begged us not to cry for her, she was so happy, going to be with God, because the Lord Jesus Christ had died to save her, and she begged us to love Him better than we did her or each other. So, just as she said, when the sun went down she closed her eyes a minute; then she opened them, and smiled, and looked almost wild with joy. 'See mother,' she said, 'see the beatiful angels! Oh, how sweet they sing!' Then her hand dropped and she was gone. I think some of the angels stopped to comfort us though, for we felt as if we must not make any noise, or cry aloud. We could not be sorry for her, because we knew that the angels were much better company for her than we were.'

The old lady wiped her eyes and sighed again, and Clara, as she raised her tearful sympathizing eyes from her face, spied the two gentlemen listening with fixed attention to the story. She smiled as they came hastily forward and apologised for their rudeness in listening to the conversation.

'Have you a likeness of your daughter?' inquired Clarendon.

'Yes but it is not half so pretty as she was but it looks like her a little way off She was so delicate and fair, that the painting looks course. A young man took it who had not learned much, but he made it look like her for all that.'

The gentleman beegged her to let him see the picture, and was much struck with the superior loveliness of the face which it roughly defiled. He took out his sketch book and transferred it to its pages before returning it to the mother.

Clara by this time had the little table neatly laid in the front room, and many were her peals of laughter, as she busied herself there, at Helen's awful face, for she was indeed really vexed, not so much at Clara as at her brother and Mr. Clarendon.

When supper was on the table it presented a very tempting aspect to the hungry travelers. There was the dish of nicely broiled ham, another of delicate looking baked potatoes, a large dish of splendid blackberries, smothered in sugar, and a pitcher of cream by its side—the fragrant tea and crown all, Clara's biscuits, white and light as snow-flakes.—We need not say that no one enjoyed the supper more than the elegant young lady who 'would rather starve than perform it.'

The rain had now cleared, and Mr. Elton proposed starting immediately, so they might reach B—— before late at night. The horses were brought round, as much refreshed by the old man's hay and oats, as their master was by his supper.

Clara stole out to the kitchen to bid the old lady good-bye, and as she stooped to kiss the aged brow, whispered, 'Thank you, good mother, for your story of Jenny I shall never forget it.'

Helen so far followed the good examples set her, as to go and take the old lady's hand and bid her 'good-day.' Mr. Elton tried to reward them liberally for their hospitality, but found it impossible.

'No, no,' said the old man, 'we are lonely—we do not often see any one, an' it is a pleasure to us to have this call—I have not seen my wife look so bright since our Jenny died' and the old man looked tenderly upon the face of his once blooming and ever faithful companion in weal and woe.

After all were in and ready to start, Clarendon sprang out, saying he had forgot something. He drew the old man into the kitchen, and said. 'I wish you would give me a lock of Jenny's hair.'

The old man looked surprised a moment, then silently went to a drawer in the old bureau, and took out a large roll of paper in which were many clustering curls, long and fair.

'There,' said he, in a trembling voice, while a big tear dropped upon the precious relic, 'I never thought to give one of them to a stranger, but you shall have it; take it, and remember that it belonged to one who is now an angel.'

The young man reverently bowed and withdrew, and the travelers were soon out of sight. A few months after this occurrence late in the fall, a single carriage with a lady and gentleman inside, might have been seen going that same road, and stopping at the same house, they alighted and knocked at the door. It was opened by a young lady, whom they felt sure was Susan, the good daughter.

'Are your father and mother well, and can we see them?' asked Clarendon.

'Ah!' exclaimed the old man, coming out at the sound of the well remembered voice. 'Is it you then, our best friend? Come in and let us all try and thank you for giving us our darling Jenny's face again.'

'But first,' said Clarendon 'let me introduce this lady to you This is not the same young lady whom you saw here last summer though I must say, the resemblance is striking This is Mrs. the Hon. Clara Clarendon, of Clarendon Place, England.'

'Ah, yes, yes,' said the old man bowing low, with roguish smile upon his lips; 'I know her very well, and I thought myself, last summer, when I saw you admiring her so much while she was making those biscuits, that something like this might happen some day; but I did not expect I should know it. God bless you both.'

We need not explain that Clarendon being an artist as well as a 'M. P.' had painted a life-like likeness of the lovely Jenny, and sent it to the old people a month after seeing them, or that the acquaintance which Clara showed with domestic affairs, combined with the rare personal and mental attractions by which he had already been impressed, determined him to seek her heart and hand. And no wonder that two who had such kindred and refined souls as to love and admire the good old people of the cottage, should learn to love each other.

We will only add, that when Helen Elton received an invitation from her friend Clara to attend her wedding, and act as bridesmaid on the occasion, she could not help acknowledging to herself that, certainly, Clara's taste for such an unlady-like occupation as bread making, had not interfered with her matrimonial interests; and she determined to add that to her other accomplishments forthwith.

The Siamese Twins.

The editor of the South Western Baptist, published in Tuskegee, Alabama, recently paid a visit to Surry Co. North Carolina, and among the pleasant reminiscences of the trip, we find the following account of his visit to the celebrated Siamese Twins:

'They live within three miles of Mount Airy, and are among the best citizens of that community. We visited, and spent about two hours in conversation with them We were kindly received, and can add to the testimony of their neighbors that they are much of gentlemen. They speak our language very fluently, and very intelligently.

We are sorry that we cannot give our readers more information concening them. They are often troubled by questions of prying curiosity, and we out of respect for their feelings did not question them, hence we may be incorrect in our statements in regard to them.

'They were born in Siam, in 1811, and came to this country in their eighteenth year. For many years they exhibited themselves in various parts of the United States, and finally married two sisters in Wikes Co., North Carolina, living there a few years in that County, then they removed and settled in Surrey Surrey County where they now reside. They are small men with an eastern complexion and are connected from the body sufficiently long for them to stand with some convenience side by side, and something like 3 inches broad. A sufficeint number of physicians have decided that death would ensue upon cutting this ligament, to prevent the attempt, hence they are doomed to an inseperable compaionship.

They own two farms, plentifully stocked with everthing that pertains to southern farmers. Their farms join, and one of the wives lives on each farm. They spent three days and a half at one farm and the same time at the other, puntual to an hour. In each family they are seven or eight handsome children, to whom the are giving a good eduction. They are very industrious and do a good portion of the labor on their farms. They are very punctual, honest men themselves, they have no use for a man that forfeits their confidence, either by evasion, or dishonesty.

When they settled in North Carolina they petitioned the Legislature that they might adopt the name of 'Bunker,' after a special friend of theirs, which was granted. They were Chang and Eng before, now they are Chang Bunker and Eng Bunker. They are pretty strong partisans, and almost invariably vote the Whig Ticket.'

MENTAL EXCITEMENT.—Bad news weakens the action of the heart, oppresses the lungs, destroys the appetite, stops digestion, and partially supends all the functions of the system. An emotion of shame flushes the face; fear bleaches it, joy illuminates it, and an instant thrill electrifies a million of nerves. Surprise spurs the pulse into a gallop. Delerium infuses great energy. Volition commands, and hundreds of muscles spring to execute—Powerful emotion often kills the body at a stroke. Chilo, Diagoras and Sophocles died of joy at the Grecian games. The news of a defeat killed Philip V. The door keeper of Congress expired upon hearing of the surrender of Cornwallis. Eminent public speakers have often died in the midst of an impassioned burst of eloquence, or when the deep emotion that produced it suddenly subsided. Lagrave the young Parisian, died when he heard that the music prize for which he had competed was adjudged to another.

When a lady sits down to the piano forte, always volunteer to turn over the leaves. To be able to read music is of no consequence, as you will know that she is at the bottom of the page when she stops short. If you turn over two leaves at once, you will probably have the sweet thanks of most of the company.

My Home and Yours.

Home of my heart! once more would I tread
The soil to my vision of bright things wed!
I would gaze yet again on the scenes that then
Were regal in my gladness as these had been;
On the loved ones and loving that then I knew,
And I feel it may be they are not unless;
That its first deep loves may yet be the last.

I feel me a lonely, and outliving thing,
From the soil of sweetest remembering:
They heed not my sorrow—that laughing throng,
Of the lightsome look and the soul of song—
Those fair bright bands of the young and free,
Now wild by the stream—side as once were we
Where they hide and whoop, in the willow bower
That I planted there in my boyhood's hour.

There's a scar-grown spot on the beechen tree
Where I dreamed thy name would forever be
But ye scarce might tell what its letterings spell—
Time hath outgrown it so keenly and well;
While names that I know not are carved there now,
On that scarred trunk of the sweeping bough
And wasted things, and the perished come
On my dreams of you now—my own first home

Friends of my first days—ye are not now
As once ye were, of the careless brow:
Ye have changed since we sported together then,
By the sunny streams of our native glen;
For the laugh is gone and the kindling eye,
At the tone of our joyous revelry;
And the look of love, and the gush of soul,
Are not as they once were—without control.

And yet—'tis well—for who might dream
That lifes young loves would changeless seem?
For this eye of light is not as when,
It looked, for the first, on the guile of men;
This brows young brightness is penciled over
With the tales of all gone things—now no more
This cheek hath been blanched with the bitter tear,
And the selves that we once were—are not here.

Daring Attempt at Assassination

We copy the following particulars of an attempt at assasination from the Toledo Blade of the 16th:

Just after noon to-day, a man named T G Miller, well known in this city called at the house of the Hon. John Fitch, at the head of Adams St, and demanded of him some money, on account, we believe, of some real or pretended land transaction; and on being refused, immediately drew a pistol and fired it close to the Judge's head. Fortunately his aim was too low, and the ball entered the Judge's mouth, knocking out a few teeth, and lodged in his neck. This took place in the house, and in the presence of Judge F's family.

Miller fled. A messenger was despatched to the city for medical assistance, and the alarm being given, Miller was hotly pursued and overtaken on Monroe street, in front of Cole's Grocery Store. Here he turned, and drawing a bowie knife, threatened to make mince-meat of the first person who laid hands on him. But he only gave his pursuers a momentary halt. He was dropped by the scientific administration of a brick upon his head; or according to other reports, by an attack in the rear,' and was taken prisoner and committed to jail

The Judge's wound is not thought to be dangerous; but he had an almost miraculous escape from a sudden and violent death.

PROCLAMATION.

By His Excellency, Kinsley S. Bingham, Governor of the State of Michigan.

Whereas, an Extraordinary Session of the Legislature is deemed necessary for the transaction of important public business:

Now therefore, by virtue of the power vested in me by the Coustitution, I hereby require the Legislature to convene at the Capitol, in the village of Lansing, on Wednesday, the twentieth day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and the members of the Senate and House of Representatives are requested to assemble in their respective Halls on that day, to consider and act upon such matters as shall be submitted to them by special Message.

In Witness whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my name, and caused to be affixed the Great Seal of the State, at Lansing, this [L. s.] tenth day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven

By the Governor,
KINSLEY S. BINGHAM.
JOHN MCKINNEY, Secretary of State.

The President's Message.

The message was received soon after the issue of our last No It is very long, occupying seven columns of fine print. As usual, we shall only attempt to give a synopsis of it in the Herald.

The President in view of the present money crisis regrets that U. S. government has not the power to control Bank issues as well as the coining of money.—Thinks the issuing of paper money was not contemplated by the framers of the constitution or it would have been placed under Federal control. Thinks the States should provide only for the issuing of large bills and then require, at least one dollar in specie to be kept in the vaults, for every three dollars issued, to insure certain redemption, besides other securities as now for the whole amount.

Our relations with foreign governments are in a satisfactory condition. Thinks the Honduras matter will be satisfactorily arranged with Great Britain All is amicable with France. Not quite so satisfactory with Spain—New Granada is coming around right. Is sorry Walker got away into Central America. Recommends the whole matter to the consideration of Congress. Is a little inclined to quarel with Paraguay.

His views of the Kansas question are about as stated last week—Thinks there is no domestic institution except slavery, and that that was what the Kansas-Nebraska act meant when it provides that the people shall be left perfectly free to regulate their own domestic institutions in their own way. Thinks the question of slavery or no slavery can never be more clearly or more distinctly presented to the people of Kansas than it is, in voting for the constitution as presented to them, with the slavery clause. Thinks this question has too long and too much occupied the public mind, and that it is time its attention was directed to more important objects.

Says it was right to protect the slaves already there from confiscation, for that they came there under the constitution of the United States, and the judicial decisions of the Supreme Court.

Affairs in Utah are far from satisfactory. He considers the territory, unless Brigham Young at once retraces his steps, to be in open rebellion. Has nothing to do with the religious sentiments of the Mormons, however revolting they may be to all christendom, so long as they do not by their acts violate the constitution of the United States. Thinks Young has for a long time been tampering with the Indian tribes. Thinks four additional regiments should be raised for the Mormon war.

Recommend the establishment of the Territory of Arizona. Recommends the Pacific Rail Road to the friendly consideration of Congress, without committing himself to any particular route.

The whole amount received into the Treasury during the fiscal year is $68,-631,613, bal. at that time in the Treasury $19,901,325, in all $88,532,839.—Expenditures $70,822,724, leaving in the Treasury at the end of the present fiscal year $17,710,114.

Thinks there will be required for the current fiscal year ending June 30, 1858 $74,963,058, which will leave at that time but $426,875, remaining in the Treasury.

Recommends the building of ten small war steamers. Thinks speculation in public lands should not be encouraged, but on the contrary, repressed as much as possible, and alternate sections at least retained for actual settlers.

Says he shall not sign any bill that he has not examined, even if it has to lie over till the next session.

Reduction on Freights Eastward

We are exceedingly gratified in being able to lay the following announcement before our readers.

The Michigan Southern and Michigan Central railroads, and their Eastern connections, will take flour per bbl. from this date to Dec, 20th at night—

To Albany, $1,45 per bbl
To New York, $1,60 per bbl.
To Boston or Portland, $1,78.
To Montreal, $1,50.

And Beef, Pork and Lard, or Tallow, in barrels, casks or boxes, at 90 cents per 100 bls rating barrels of Beef and Pork containing 200 lbs. of meat, 230 lbs each.

J. NOTTINGHAM,
General Agent M. S. & N. I. R. R.
GEORGE WILLIAMS,
General Agent M. C. Railrod.

Our shippers, merchants and millers cannot give too much credit to the gentlemen whose names are appended to the above communication. We opine that to their untiring industry in presenting the matter in its proper light to the management of their respective roads and their connections, is due to the success of all those interests so earnestly demanded.—Chi. Dem.

MISTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.—The wife of a man named STEPHEN D. JOHNS, called on us this afternoon, to procure the aid of the press in finding her husband—He was taken sick on Thursday last, and Dr. Braun, who attended on him, says that he was rendered deranged from a pressure of blood upon the brain. On Thursday night last, about 11 o'clock, while in this deranged state, he got up, put on his pants (a dark pair,) and a straw hat—and went out. He said, in answer to his wife's remonstrance, that "there were some persons in danger of drowning, down at the swing bridge, and he must go to their assistance." He has not been heard from since. Diligent search was instituted, commencing in about an hour after he left the house, and continued up to the present time, but without finding the least trace of him.—The missing man's home is on or near Whittlesey street, and any information furnished his wife, or Dr. Braun, in regard to his whereabouts will be thankfully received.—Toledo Blade.

FROZEN TO DEATH.—The Detroit Free Press says that 'the schr. John S. Miner got aground in a fog near the Gibralter light, Detroit River, on Wednesday last A small boat, with three men in it was sent out with a chain that the vessel might be hauled off, but the boat filled with water, and there being no other boat near, the men were not rescued until one of them died with the cold, and the others were completely exhausted. The boat containing the body of the young lad was abandoned, and drifted out into the lake, it being impossible to secure them without another small boat. One of the survivors was unable to stand when he reached the deck of the vessel. She finally got off and reached the city, and was immediately attatched for a bebt contracted in Cleveland.'

FINANCIAL.—The following despatches that passed over the telegraph wire the other day, are decidely cool for these times:

"Mr.——. One year ago to-night, I lent you $4,87. If you have not had it long enough please keep it one year more. Do you wish to? Answer, Yours &c.

"Mr.——. Forgot the fact some time ago; hoped you had. Let her run another year then.
Yours, etc.

INHUMAN TREATMENT.—A sweet little babe, 9 or 10 months old, step child of A Wittemyer, who lives between Mifflin and Perrysville, was frozen to death one night during the spell of exceedingly cold weather in Nov. The inhuman parents tried to break it of crying by putting it in its cradle and pushing it back under the bed. They did so one night and the child cried, until it was exhausthd; the inhuman parents fell asleep and in the morning when they awoke it was dying, or dead—both legs frozen to the knees and its arms stiff to the elbows. Its tiny fingers would break like sticks. The brutal mother is rather young, and, we have no doubt, has learned a lesson that will never be forgotten; its step-father is said not to be overburdened with brains. "God cares for the poor babe now."—Mansfield Her.

☞ A jolly Hibernian living in Portland carried home a bottle of whiskey to aid him in suitably enjoying the Sabbath. His wife gained possession of the bottle and wishing to maintain soberness in the head of family, hid it in the oven of her cook stove. When the fire was kindled the 'crathur' began to cook, and soon burst the bottle, blew up the stove, set the house on fire, alarmed the neighbors, called out the fire department, and seriously disturbed the devout and church going portion of Portland citizens.

A special despatch from Lecompton, Dec. 1st, to the N. Y. Tribune says that it is the new Territorial Legislature which has been convened by Sec. Stanton. He had been informed that the Convention would otherwise take steps that might result in civil war.

A paper signed by a majority of both branches of the Legislature and five or six prominent free state men, was presented to Stanton, telling him that this step was all that could avert a civil war, and that the special session would confine its legislation to what might be required to defeat the Lecompton constitution.—He was informed that the Legislature would meet in any case.

Dr. W. P. Wagner. Dear Sir. It is now but one month since you adjusted on my enfeebled body, one of Dr. Banning's Braces, for the relief, and final cure of Bleeding Lungs; yet my experience in use of this truly wonderful Body and shoulder Brace, is so gratifying to me, that I deem it important to inform you of the fact, and through you, if you think proper, those like afflicted with myself. Particulars I will not stop to give but, simply state that I have observed your instructions given with the Brace, that my lungs have not bled since, nor do I feel such apprehensions of bleeding as constantly annoyed me for years before. My general health is much improved; dyspeptic symptoms are gone; I have greater muscular energy, and weigh more than I have in six years past. Wishing you every success in thus relieving the ills of suffering humanity, I remain very truly, &c.

DEAFNESS CURED.—The best remedy for deafness ever offered to the public, is DRAKE'S ARCTIC LINIMENT. Many cases of several years standing have been quickly and entirely cured by it, and thousands of recent cases caused by colds or obstructions of the ear-chambers, have yielded to one or two applications. Full directions for use accompany each bottle. One of the most remarkable cures was at the Hartford Deaf and Dumb Asylum. A boy, 15 years of age, named Benjamin Crawford, who had been born deaf, and was consequently dumb, was sent there for education; and, as an experiment, the Liniment was tried on him, and with the most complete success. He now hears as well as any one, and is rapidly learning to talk The Liniment is for sale at all Drug stores.

RHEUMATISM—NEURALGIA.—The agonies of Rheumatism and Neuralgia are among the most acute with which the human frame is ever afflicted, and have heretofore been found the most difficult to remove. Happily a remedy is now discovered by which the most obstinate cases can be immediately cured.—This sovereign remedy is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT, for sale by Druggists generally. It is only necessary for the sufferer to try it, to be assured of its efficacy.

The most skeptical people can be convinced by trial that all the family medicines are not humbug, and that among the thousand of butterfly life there are a few of great merit, and undoubted worth. Of these, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy stands first and foremost among the remedies of the day that can be relied on as a medicine that is all that is reccomended by its proprietors.

It advertises itself on every trial, for there are none who use it but tell their friends to do so, and so it goes from mouth to mouth till all the people of the Union have learned the good of this truly valuable medicine It is recommended with testimonials to prove its virtue for the cure of liver complaints of every kind, from the worst Dyspepsia to a common headache, and is sparticularly adapted to Jaundice, Deranged Stomach, Bowel Complaints and diseases of children.

One or two doses are said to cure a cold with scarce a failure It is worth a trial for this alone. It is particularly adapted to use of ladies, particularly those of sedentary habits. Some ladies of the highest standing in society have given their certificates of its efficacy, and we say to all who are ailing, try one bottle, and you will never be without it

Extra Session.

The Governor has called an extra Session of the Legislature, the 20th day of January 1858.

☞ A bag of Buckwheat flour was sent us this week, marked "Globe Mills." Lyman Baylis, a friend of ours, has rented the Globe, and if the flour he sent us is a sample, we think the reputation of the Globe will not depreciate while under his administration.

Also—a fine Turkey from our friend R. C. Wright, for which he will please accept our thanks.

☞ Our friend David Henderson, has just completed his building, on Main St. and will be happy to see all his old friends, who wish Fashionable Cloths cut and made.

☞ D. Wagner will stay with us but a short time longer, and if there is any of our friends suffering by disease, we recommend the Dr. to them. We have sufficient proof before us to satisfy, any doubting friend that these Braces are a blessing. See letter from the editor of the Lagrange Herald, among Special Notices.

Alf Howards Cuocert, came off as advertised and we believe gave general Satisfaction. We understand he is to give another on Friday Dec. 18th, at Bidwells Hall. Mr. Howard's Guitar accompniment is original, and unapproachable. We hope he will have a full house on Friday night.

☞ The Michigan House has been purchased by Mr. Smalledge, who is renovating it throughout, and Mr. S. informs us that he will do all in pow power, to make the Mich. House one of the best houses in Southern Michigan. The Ball which was advetised to come off on New Years night, will take place under the management of Mr. S. who will do all in his power to make it worthy of the support of its friends.

DONATION.—The friends of Rev A. M. Sowel, will give him a donation visit at his residence, in the town of Ridgeway, on Wednesday, Dec. 23d, afternoon and evening. A general invitation is extended.

We are enjoying a second edition of Indian Summer.

"New Hardware," is the most beautiful sign on main street, and corresponds with the building upon which it was designed. The name of "Strong & Drew, is below it.

ARRIVAL OF GIRLS.—A Mr. Tracy travels occasionally in this State and west with girls and boys picked up in eastern cities and finds them homes. He was up in the vicinity of Hillsdale last week with a load of girls. Why did he pass Monroe, without calling when so many of our young men are wanting girls, and are willing to provide them with homes? We have to be sure many girls here; but they carry too many hoops to be useful as wives.—Monroe Press.

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BRIMFIELD, MASS. 20th Dec, 1856.
DR. J. C. AYER: I do not hesitate to say the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the concomitant symptoms of a Cold, is your CHERRY PECTORAL. Its constant use in my practice and my family for the last ten years has shown it to possess superior virtues for the treatment of these complaints. EBEN KNIGHT, M. D.

A. B. MORTLEY, Esq., of UTICA, N. Y., writes: "I have used your PECTORAL myself and in my family ever since you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than do without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.
SPRINGFIELD, MASS., Feb. 7, 1856.
BROTHER AYER: I will cheerfully certify your PECTORAL is the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.
HIRAM CONKLIN, M. D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTEREY, IA., writes, 3d Jan., 1856: "I had a tedious influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one half the bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your remedies, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.
WEST MANCHESTER, PA., Feb. 4, 1856.
SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvelous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the best part of twenty years. HENRY L. PARKS, Merchant.

A. A. RAMSEY, M.D., ALDEN, MONROE CO., IOWA, writes, Sept. 6, 1855: "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for giving ease and relief to consumptive patients, or curing such as are curable."

We might add volumes of evidence, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in its effects upon the Consumption.

Probably no one remedy has ever been known which cured so many and such dangerous cases as this. Some no human aid can reach; but even to those the CHERRY PECTORAL affords relief and comfort.

ACTON HOUSE, NEW YORK CITY, March 8, 1858.
DOCTOR AYER, LOWELL: I feel it a duty and a pleasure to inform you what your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for my wife. She had been five months laboring under the dangerous symptoms of Consumption, from which no aid we could procure gave her much relief. She was steadily failing, until Dr. Strong, of this city, where we have come for advice, recommended a trial of your medicine. We bless his kindness, as we do your skill, for she has recovered from that day. She is not yet as strong as she used to be, but is free from her cough, and calls herself well.
Yours with gratitude and fervency,
ORLANDO SILSBY, of SHELBYVILLE.

Consumptives, do not despair till you have tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is made by one of the best medical chemists in the world, and its cures all around us bespeak the high merits of its virtues.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

THE sciences of Chemistry and Medicine have been taxed their utmost to produce this best, most perfect purgative which is known to man. Innumerable proofs are shown that these PILLS have virtues which surpass in excellence the ordinary medicines, and that they win unprecedentedly upon the esteem of all men. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. Their penetrating properties stimulate the vital activities of the body, remove the obstructions of its organs, purify the blood, and expel disease. They purge out the foul humors which breed and grow distemper, stimulate sluggish or disordered organs into healthy action, and impart healthy tone with strength to the whole system. Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also formidable and dangerous diseases that have baffled the best of human skill. While they produce powerful effects, they are at the same time, in diminished doses, the safest and best physic that can be employed for children. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take; and being purely vegetable, are free from any risk of harm. Cures have been made which surpass belief were they not substantiated by men of such exalted position and character as to forbid the suspicion of untruth. Many eminent clergymen and physicians have lent their names to certify to the public the reliability of my remedies, while others have sent me the assurance of their conviction that my Preparations contribute immensely to the relief of my afflicted, suffering fellow-men.

The Agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing directions for their use and certificates of their cures, of the following complaints:—

Costiveness, Bilious Complaints, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Heartburn, Headache arising from a foul Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Morbid Inaction of the Bowels and Pain arising therefrom, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, all Ulcerous and Cutaneous Diseases which require an evacuant Medicine, Scrofula or King's Evil. They also, by purifying the blood and stimulating the system, cure many complaints which it would not be supposed they could reach, such as Deafness, Partial Blindness, Neuralgia and Nervous Irritability, Derangements of the Liver and Kidneys, Gout, and other kindred complaints arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else. No other they can give you compares with this in its intrinsic value or curative powers. The sick want the best and there is for them and they should have it.

AGRICULTURAL.

Failure to plant an Orchard.

There is scarcely an individual who has not at some unlucky moment thoughtlessly dropped a word or performed an act which has given him painful reflections for after years. In vain has he wished it recalled. Fruitless have been his endeavors to heal the breach. The act was performed, and its effect is doing its painful work. The individual could only sigh and regret that his discretion could never be amended.

The writer of this article has committed an error which has given him bitter regret. Unlike the adage which says 'misery likes company,' he would commit his imprudence to the world, that others may shun his miscalculation, and avoid his remorse.

Like many young farmers. I commenced with limited means, in debt for my land—buildings to be erected, and so many ways for my small funds that I deferred to plant an orchard.—In my strife for gain, years passed quickly, and often was I advised to make preparations for fruit, which I ever determined to do; but there is always more to be done on a new farm than beginners usually have means to immediately accomplish. And when I should have bearing trees, I came to the conclusion to plant an orchard. Selecting therefore, a piece of ground, which I esteemed fit for nothing else, in my haste I dug small holes, bending the root to conform to their scant place.

The work was speedily done, and I flattered myself that I should soon reap a rich harvest; for I began now to be in a harry to enjoy the pleasure of fruit. But how great was my mortification—and dissappointment when I found that some of my trees perished the first season, and some lingered alone for several years, and apparently died very hard. A few, however, after some years, began to make a feeble growth. It is well known that farmers have a great pride in raising good crops and when a failure occurs through miscalculation, they are very sensitive of shame. As a person would shun the room where his follies are vividly pictured on the wall, so I avoided the parcel of ground containing my trees.

Thus has the best part of my life been deprived of the wholesome enjoyment of fruit. In the season when the evenings are long, and when fatigued by reading, I have perfectly longed for apples, but they were not. Still the denying so great a privilege cannot be campared to the sensitive feelings (known only to parents) when my children would look so wishfully at their mates while they enjoyed the luxury of which my children were denied. Then would I reproach myself for the stupid neglect, which I not only deprived myself but my children the pleasure which our Creator, designed we might have, although wisely appointed to be obtained by toil and care. Dollars and dollars have I paid for a scanty supply, while some of my neighbors are realizing from a single tree $10 per season; and as one acre would contain 50 trees, this would give at the above rate $500a year.

I would advise every farmer, by the considerations of both comfort and wealth, take care for fruit.—Country Getleman.

Preparing Poultry

PREPARING—Make the fat. A grain fed, plump, fat fowl will sell for double the price per pound of lean one. A liberal feeding, for a few weeks before killing, will nearly double the weight and double the price, making a quadruple return for the finishing off food.

KILLING.—Keep them from bruising themselves. Secure the wings when they are caught, and tie them behind the back. Tie the legs together, hang them upon a pole, and then cut off the head with a sharp knife, leaving as long a neck as possible. Let them hang until they bleed clean. Keep them from food for two or three hours before killing. Any grain left in the crop sours and materially injures the flesh kept if long before cooking.

DRESSING.—Pick them dry, taking particular care not to tear or bruise the flesh. If scalded at all let it be done quickly and in water not quite boiling hot. Be careful not to rub off the outer skin from the legs. If not to be packed in boxes, after picking dry or scalding, wash them in clean warm soap suds and, 'plump' them, that is, hold them in boiling water about five seconds. If to be packed for carrying a long distance, do not wet them at all exept to wash the neck Strip the skin on the neck cut off the neck bone, draw the loose skin over, tie tightly cut off the bloody poration a little way beyond the string and wash off any blood, wipe dry.

Patent Medicines.

ONE DOLLAR WILL BUY

ONE OF THE BEST PURIATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public, namely, DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REMEDY, that acts as a Cathartic saving milder and more effectual action than any other medicine known to the stomach and bowels in every of that class of the stomach and bowels in every of that class of diseases, thus accomplishing two purposes at once, namely without any of the painful suffering usually attendant upon cathartics, the strength is the operations of most cathartics, is at once restored as the system at the same time that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely, Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects.

Though possessing rare medical powers, these Gums have been but little known to physicians and never used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the INVIGORATOR, which meets with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known in its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure LIVER Complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver, and as a proof that the INVIGORATOR relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice, take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses on retiring and it assists nature in her operations. By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work as regularly as clock work.

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the INVIGORATOR, which corrects all acidity and soutness of the stomach.

For an over-loaded stomach it has no equal as it relieves all oppressive or uneasy feeling after eating heartily. For a FAMILY MEDICINE generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints, and all diseases arising from a Disord Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it, and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to Dyspeptics for it made a complete cure before the first bottle was taken, and now we can eat anything edible without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain. Now what we want to say to all our readers, Invalids or Dyspeptics or Dyspepsia trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.—State Pact.

We take pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER, and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty and thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of diseases incident to children as DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR; nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it, for it acts as a Cathartic so mildly and gently, and so effectually to excite the system to throw off the disease that we think we are doing a service to all in advising them when they need medicine, to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where first bottle has been of the most benefit to the Liver, Stomach and Bowels where all other remedies failed to give relief. It has become so useful in our family that we still not be without it.—Jacksonville, (Ill.) Republican.

AYER'S Cathartic Pills,

ARE MADE TO

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK.

Invalids, Farmers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Effects, and Judge of Their Virtues.

FOR THE CURE OF

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach,

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 1, 1854.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache by your Pills, and find by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once. If they will cure others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. FREBLE, Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints,

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, WASHINGTON, D. C., 1 Feb. 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot conscientiously say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

ALONZO BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Friendly yours,

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms,

POST OFFICE, HARTLAND, LIV. CO., MICH., Nov. 16, 1854.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months. Was off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. She then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her, by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, while others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctor bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, WYOMING CO., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1854.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1855.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has long been grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout,

From the Rev. Dr. Hawles, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, BATON ROUGE, LA., 5 Dec., 1855.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and as a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, though a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, INFLUENZA, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country on the continent which some personal experience of its effects; and fewer yet the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy assailing upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the CHERRY PECTORAL saves more lives by the consumptions it prevents than those it cures. Every household, and cure your colds while they are curable, nor neglect them until no human skill can master the inexorable canker that, fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of long disorders, and all they know too the virtues of this remedy, we need not say more than to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it in the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely on it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.

Do not Censure Without Knowing.

Do not censure without knowing,
Oft is hid a noble mind,
Worthy of our love bestowing,
Where we least expect to find;
Many a heart in kindness beating,
Making solitude its own,
With no kindred spirit meeting;
Lives unloved, because unknown.

Should you feel inclined to censure
Faults you may in others view,
Ask your own heart, ere you venture,
If that has not failings too,
Let no friendly vows be broken,
Rather strive a friend to gain;
Finds its passage home again.

Do not, then, in idle pleasure,
Trifle with a brother's fame;
Guard it as a guilded treasure—
Sacred as your own good name,
Do not form opinions blindly,
Hastiness to trouble tends;
Those of whom we've thought unkindly,
Oft become our warmest friends.

From Godeys Lady's Book.

How Effie Hamilton Spent Christmas.

BY VIRGINIA DE FORREST.

Come, reader, follow me; and we will steal a peep at the heroine of my story. We are in a wide street, in a large city, facing a very spacious and handsome house. Come in. We pass through a wide hall, up a broad staircase, into a large parlor, furnished with magnificence. Never mind; we don't stop here. Pass on into a boudoir on the same floor as the parlor; and now we stop, for here are the objects of our search. It is a cold evening in December; and a large fire burns in the open grate; the shaded lamps throw a subdued light upon the beautiful furniture, glowing carpet, large mirror, and exquisite paintings which are in this pretty place.

By the fireplace, his arm resting upon the mantelpiece, is the master of the house, and the owner of one of the largest fortunes in this goodly city of——. He is a young man in his twenty fifth year, a bachelor, and much courted by the maidens on account of his gentle birth, handsome face, gentlemanly manners, and large fortune. He is t[illegible], and finely proportioned, has a frank, manly face, large dark eyes, dark-brown curling hair, regular features, a beautiful smile, and an erect, graceful carriage; altogether, Clarence Hamilton is a very 'nice young man' generous, intellectual, high principled, and gentle as a woman to his sister, his nearest, dearest relative, for he is an orphan. Seated in a deep, crimson-covered arm chair, and looking up into Clarence's face, is that same sister. She is dressed in full evening costume; a pale blue silk, cut low, shows a snowy neck and arm; the lace flounces are gathered up in one little hand, revealing a dainty little foot, with a nicely fitting satin slipper; the broad sash uncircles a most charming little waist; the pearl ornaments might be envious of the whiteness of the complexion they rival; and the gold bracelets on her round arms are scarcely brighter than the long curls falling in such rich profusion on her shoulders. Her features are regular, her eyes large and dark like her brother's; and she has also his beautiful smile; but her tiny, perfect figure looks quite fairy-like when contrasted with his six feet of stature.—'Claire,' she said, looking up at him with a sweet, winning smile, 'I executed all your commissions this morning.'

'Yes Have you bought my presents to all my cousins?'

'All. And I have bought all the jewelry and finery I intend to present to my dear friends and relations, next week What is the use of this present-giving at Christmas?'

'It promotes good feeling.'

'Does it make anybody love us? Oh, Claire, I have felt so lonely this evening! Everybody was clustering round me, making pretty speeches, and flattering me; and I knew all the time it was only my money they courted. Money: money! Do you suppose Aunt Miriam would be so very urgent, and press me so earnestly to spend the day with her and my cousins on Wednesday, if I were poor? Why doesn't she invite her husband's cousins, the Morrises? They are prettier than I am. Anna is perfectly superb, in spite of her plain dress; and Robert is very fine-looking. Now, they want a good dinner; but she doesn't ask them. No; she wants me; and I won't go.'

'Won't go?'

'No; I mean to eat my dinner here; and I invite you to be my guest.'

'And I accept the invitation. We will eat all our fine relations, and eat dinner alone. Oh, there is one person I should like to invite, Gerald Hastings! Have you any objection, petite sœur?'

'None.'

The girl's brow, neck, and face were crimson for a moment; then the blush faded again.

'As you say about the Morrises, my clerk wants a good dinner. 'He's a fine fellow. 'Pity he's so poor' But he'll make his way in the world. There's energy in his voice, resolution in his eye, firmness in his gait, manliness in every action. He's a fine fellow. Little sister'—and Clarence bent on her a searching glance—'don't you think so?'

'Yes.'

The answer came low and sweet.

'I intend putting a hundred dollar bill in an envelop, and sending it anonymously to him at Christmas. Do you approve, Effie?'

'Yes. Oh, Claire, how much good you do with your money at Christmas! and I have been wasting so much in buying presents for people who do not really need anything I give them. It is such bitter wether, and so many people need comforts; and buying jewelry for folks that would not speak to me, if I were poor, seems so foolish.'

'Don't you subscribe to Dorcas societies, and coal and blanket committees, and all that sort of thing?'

'Yes; but I want to do something myself. It is very easy to put one's name down for a sum of money on a paper, and pay it when it is called for; but I never know of any good it does. The committee take care of that part of it. I want to do something myself. I want to give something to make Christmas merry to all the poor folks in the city.'

'You can't very well do that.'

'No! Oh, Claire! Claire! I have an idea!' And the fairy sprang up from her chair, and began dancing round her brother.

'What is it, fairy?' he asked, smiling at her excitement.

'Shan't tell; only I want a whole lot of my money, Claire.'

'My money! How independent we are all at once. How much of your money do you want?'

'Oh, five or six hundred dollars! I don't know exactly how much.'

'Five hundred dollars? Suppose I won't let you have it?'

'But you will!' said Effie, coaxingly; 'you will; won't you?'

The little clock on the mantel chimed One! two! three!

'Time you were in bed, petite sœur,' said Clarence. 'Come, kiss me good-night; and we'll talk over this expensive scheme of yours to-morrow.'

Effie sprang into her brother's arms, received his good-night kiss, then tripped into her own room. Clarence, in a few moments followed her example.

—In a small room in a house situated in the suburbs of the city, there sat a young man at his desk writing. The room is poorly furnished; and one candle throws light upon his paper. He is handsome, in Italian style, dark complexion, large black eyes, rich jetty hair; his figure is fine; but there is a gloom over all that does not improve his beauty.—The brow is clouded, the eyes heavy, the hair pushed off the forehead as if its weight was oppressive. Look over his shoulder, and read the letter as he writes.

'You ask me,' he says, 'to come to your western country, and aid you in your scemes for gaining wealth. A month ago, I should have refused your offer. I have a clerk's place in the establishment of one of our wealthiest men, a good salary, and good prospects. Were it not for the debts I am striving to pay—debts incurred by my poor father which I will pay.—I should be, on my present salary, above want; and, if I stay here, my income will increase, I know; and I shall do well. You ask why I do not stay. I will tell you. I, poor and in debt, have been mad enough to fall in love; and, not only that, but the object of my love is rich, very rich, the only sister of my employer. Beautiful, piquant, generous, good, my idol is all a man's heart could desire to fill it. By the kind hospitality of her brother, I am often thrown in her way; and each time strengthens my love. Oh, Effie! Effie!—there, I won't bore you with rhapsodes! Suffice it that I love without a shadow of hope. She is always kind, gentle to me; but, of course, in her station, with her beauty and wealth, she can command any match, and would despise me as a fortune hunter were I to breathe my love. Am I not poor? Oh, that we could change places! Then I could seek her love, and prove how true is my own. I cannot stay here; the restraint upon my heart, feeling, and action is too great. I must leave the place where, constantly seeing, I may never speak my love to her. If I come near her again, my heart may speak, in spite of myself; and, for my presumption, I may lose my greatest treasure now, her friendship. In a few days, I will write to you again, and tell you of my plans more definitely. Perhaps I shall come to to you; most likely I shall. My year at my present place expires at Christmas.—Then I shall conclude finally upon some plan. Now, good night.

Truly yours, GERALD HASTINGS.'

Christmas was drawing near; and Effie Hamilton was very busy with many mysterious preparations. There were, in Clarence's house, two large vacant third story rooms, unfurnished. For several days, Effie had shut herself up in these rooms, excepting when out; and the result of her missions was a great number of large packages, baskets, and bundles, which were all carried by direction to the third story chambers.

At length, the day before Christmas arrived. Clarence came home to dinner about two o'clock; and Effie won from him a promise to stay at home, and aid her the rest of the day. 'Now, Claire,' she said, seating herself on his knee after dinner, 'I want to tell you what I have been doing all this week. In the first place, I took Caroline, the pretty seamstress, that worked here so long, into my confidence; and we made out a list of all the poor people she knew, where they live, how many children there were, names and ages; and all the particulars; then—there's a ring at the bell. It's Caroline, I know. She promised to come, this afternoon, and help me.'

The door opened, and a very pretty brunette entered Her plain street dress only heightened her charms; and the rich color brought into her cheeks by exercise added to her beauty. Effie took off her things; Clarence set a chair for her; and then the three sat down for a sociable chat.

'How do your preparations progress, Miss Hamilton?' inquired Caroline.

'Famously, Carrie. Drop that Miss. I am Effie to my frends. But come, as soon as you are rested from your walk, we will go up stairs, and I will show you all my preparations.'

'I am rested,' said Caroline, leaving her chair.

'Come, then. I will lead the way.—Claire, take care of Carrie.' And Effie went swiftly up stairs, unlocked and threw open the door of the mysterious room.

Clarence looked into it with amazement. The entire centre of the floor, through both rooms, was occupied by two long lines, one of a large covered baskets, the other of small Christmas-trees. Each tree was hung with toys, bonbons, flowers, and fruit.

Clarence looked at his sister, who, taking his hand, led him up to the head of the line, and uncovered the basket.—'This is for Mrs. Thomas, a poor washerwoman with three children,' she said.—'The basket contains a turkey, you see, two pies, a peck of potatoes, some currant-jelly in that jar, and, in this tightly covered kettle, some oysters. That is for the Christmas dinner.' At the bottom of the basket there is a box containing a five dollar gold piece; that'—and she covered the basket—'is the widow's own share. This tree, you see, has a horse, and drum, and other toys for the little girl, and candies, cakes, and bonbons for all All the baskets are alike, excepting that some cotain wine and invalids' food, extra, for the places where there are sick. The trees vary according to the ages of the children. Have I done right, Claire?'

'Yes, little sunbeam.'

'Now, Claire, as soon as it is dark, there will be a furniture-car at the door to carry all these things to their respective destinatins. Carrie and I are going with it to take a sly peep at some of the children. Will you come?'

'Indeed I will! You two stay here while I order a carriage. We can get out at the corners of the streets.'

Just about dusk, there stopped, at the corner of a little court near——Street, a large furniture-car and a carriage. Two men got down from the first, a gentleman and two plainly clad ladies from the second.

'James,' said Effie, 'you are to take this basket.' And she indicated one in the car. 'And, Claire, you will take the tree? It is not heavy.'

'Mother,' said a little boy, leaning his head against his mother's knee, 'to-morrow is Christmas Day; and we won't have any presents. Don't you wish we were rich, and had a big room—this one is so little—and had some money to buy a Christmas dinner?'

Rap! rap! rap! at the door. A scream of delight followed its opening.

'Oh, mother! mother! come and look! here's a real tree, a Christmas-tree, and a big basket! See her, Ben!' as another little boy came to the door. 'Bring them in. See, it is really for us! Here's mother's name on the cover of the basket! Oh, see what a big turkey, and pies, and—oh, here's oysters! Oh! oh! oh! and here's lots of things on the tree, a doll! that must be for Jenny. Oh, I wish she'd come in! Oh, mother, here's a gold-piece in this little box!'

'May God bless the kind heart that thinks of the poor in this happy season!' said the widow, fervently; and the door was closed, none of the happy party seeing three figures standing back in the dark entry, looking at the joy they had given.

'Here comes James again with Miss Mason's basket,' said Effie. 'That's on the next floor. Come, James!'

Here again, reader, we will peep in before our generous party.

On a low mattress, laid upon the floor, lies a young girl wasting with consumption. Her sister sits beside her, plying her needle; and on the floor beside the candle is a little girl, also sowing.

'Mary,' said the invalid, 'do put by work for a little time. It is Christmas Eve; surely you may rest a few minutes.'

Rap! rap! rap!

Mary opened the door, and then gave a cry of delight.

'Oh, Lizzie, come here, and help me carry in these things! They are marked with our name. This little tree must be for you; and here is a large basket.'

Lizzie assisted in bringing them in; and, while she danced with true childish delight around the tree, the elder sisters opened the basket.

'A turkey, pies, and oysters, for you, dear Jessie, our Christmas dinner; and here's a bottle of wine, and oranges, and white grapes, and this little box—ten dollars! Oh, Jessie! who can have sent them?'

'God's blessing go with the giver!' said the invalid, softly. 'Now you may rest on Christmas Day. How long the basket will last us! Mary, dear, you forgot to close the door.' And again three watchers were shut out.

We have not room to follow in Effie's footsteps that happy evening. Here there was an ailing baby relieved by a generous gift of money to pay a doctor; here a whole party of children made joyful; in another place, a studious boy was made happy for months by judiciously selected books; and in one place a poor childless widow had an order for groceries enough to last a whole year, beside her Christmas dinner.

At about ten o'clock, Effie, Claire, and Carrie came home again as tired and happy a trio as were in that city on Christmas Eve, 1854.

The next morning, Clarence came into his sister's room. 'Effie,' he said, 'Gerald talks of leaving me.'

'Leaving you.'

The pretty little sunbeam was very pale.

'Yes! he's going out west'

Effie bent her head and lowered her eyes.

'Effie! little sister! how pale you are! You tired yourself last night.'

'No, no! I mean yes.' Why is he going west?'

'I will tell you. Effie, can you fancy me doing a dishonorable act?'

'No.'

'Well, I did one last night. I went, after I left you, to see Gerald. I found him writing a letter. I peeped over his shoulder, and read it, and then crept away again, leaving the envelop I told you about a week ago; and he does not know I was near him; but I know his secret?'

'Secret?'

'Yes. He's in love.'

'Gerald?'

'Yes, Gerald. In love with an heiress! Did you ever hear of such presumption? He a poor clerk!'

'Well,' said Effie, firing up, 'he's better than one-half the gentlemen that come here, if he is a clerk. Any woman might be proud of Gerald Hasting's love.' Then, colyring and confused at the having committed herself, she stopped.

'He is in love with an heiress, and afraid to offer himself,' said Clarence, not heeding her confusion, 'for fear she will think him a fortune hunter. Effie, can you guess who it is he loves?'

Silence.

'Effie, may I give my little sister to Gerald Hastings for a Christmas gift.

Still silence.

'Effie, do you love him? Would you leave me, Effie, to marry him?'

'We need not leave you. We can all live here. We—

'Pretty well!' said Clarence, opening his arms, and receiving his little sister in a close embrace. 'Pretty well! There, don't blush so! he is worthy of you. I say, with my whole heart, that I shall give my sincere good wishes to you both, and be willing to give up my sunbeam to lighten the path of a man I esteem so highly as Gerald.' And, kissing Effie again and again, he left her with parting directions to look as pretty as possible, for Gerald was coming to dinner; and he depended upon her to keep him from going west.

Gerald Hastings was walking slowly up and down the large parlor when his employer came in. 'Gerald,' he said sternly, walking up to him, 'you have repaid my hospitality with ungrateful conduct. Did I, when I allowed, courted your visits, give you any permission?' Clarence could not support his sternness. A sunny smile was in the corners of his mouth, which made Gerald's heart bound with hope. 'Did I give you, I repeat, any permission to fall in love with my sister?'

Gerald folded his hands like a timid school-boy, and faltered: 'Please, sir, I couldn't help it.'

Effie stood in the entry. She looked very lovely, her golden curls and bright complexion being heightened by her rich lazurine blue silk dress.

Clarence came out to her. 'Go in,' he said; 'somebody wants to see you.'

About an hour afterwards, Clarence, coming in again, found Effie's curls falling over the breast of a black coat, the sleeve of the same garment encircling the blue dress. 'Well,' he said, stopping short 'if there was ever seen such presumption! Effie, come here.'

'I had rather stay where I am,' said a sweet silvery voice.

'You had? Well, if the mountain won't come to Mohammed, Mohammed must go to the mountain. There, Gerald, I think you have received about as valuable a Christmas present as any one in town. Be careful of it; cherish it.'

Need we say any more, reader? Effie, Clarence, and Gerald were as happy a trio as dined on that Chrismas day; and Gerald did not go out west.

The Stream of Life.

Life bears us on like the stream of a mighty river. Our boat at first glides swiftly down the narrow channels, thro' the playful murmurings of the little brook and along its grassy borders; trees shed their blossoms over our young heads, and the brink seem to offer themselves to our young hands; we are in hope, and grasp eagerly at the beauties around us, but the stream hurries on, and still our hands are empty. Our course in youth and manhood is along a wider and deeper flood and amid objects more striking and magnificent. We are animated by the moving picture of enjoyment and industry passing before us; we are excited by short-lived success, depressed and rendered miserable by short-lived disappointment; but our energy and our dependendence are both in vain. The stream bears us on—our joys and griefs are left behind us; we may be shipwrecked but can not anchor; voyage may be hastened, but cannot be delayed; whether rough or smooth, the river hastens towards its haven, the roaring of the waves is beneath our keel, the land lessens from our eyes, the floods are lifted up around us, we take our last leave of earth and its inhabitants—and of our future voyage ther is no witness but the Infinite and Eternal.

'I hab always in my life,' says Cesar Hannibal, 'found de gals to be fust in lub, fust in a quarrel, fust in de dance, fust in de ice cream saloon, and de fust best and de last in de sick room? What would we poor fellers do widout dem? Let us be born as young, as ugly and helpless as we please, and a woman's arms am open to receibe us; she it am who put cloze pon our helpless naked limbs, and cubbers up our footses and toses in long flannel petticoats, and it am she who, as we grow up, fills our dinner basket wid doenuts and apples as we start to school and licks us when we tear our trowsers.'

How many common figurative expressions in our language are borrowed from the art of carpentry, may be seen from the following sentence:—'The lawyer who filed a note, cut an acquaintance, split a hair, made an entry, got up a case, framed an indictment, impanelled a jury, put them into a box, nailed a witness, hammered a judge, and bored a whole court, all in one day, has since laid down law and turned carpenter.'

Earth and Heaven.

Earth, thou hast much to win our love,
So bounteous and so fair,
With flowery mead and shady grove,
And balmy breathing air;
But, though the stamp of beauty lies
On meadow, wood, and hill,
Though green the valley, and bright the skies,
Yet Heaven is fairer still.

How peacefully thy rivers glide,
Or dash down rocky steep,
How proudly rave old ocean's tide,
How calm thy lakelets sleep;
But that best, purest stream, whose flood
Knows never storm nor strife,
"Makes glad the city of our God"
The chrystal stream of life.'

To thee, oh! Earth, the sun's glad rays
And holy moon are given!
The one with glory crowns thy days,
The other gilds thy even.
But in that land, so bright, so fair,
There creeps no shade of night;
There needs no ray of sunbeam there;
The Lamb—he is the light.

We love thee Earth, for on thy breast,
Beneath the springing sod,
We've laid those cherished forms to rest,
With us thy walks who've trod.
But better far we love that Heaven
Where now they walk in light,
Whose glories—when thy ties are riven—
Shall burst on our glad sight.

This session has been a long one, and a large amount of business dispatched—Our Prosecuting Attorney, E. R. Beecher, Esq., has attended to a large list of criminal cases, in the treatment of which he has won golden opinions. With Bennett and Beecher on their track, the 'coons' may as well 'come down' without a trial, as most of them do. Judge Wilson is only winning new laurels the better he is known. We cannot but esteem his prompt and impartial bearing and sound decisions.—Expositor.

Murder in Rochester

Rochester, Dec. 21.—Our city was thrown into a state of great excitement yesterday morning, by the murdered, mangled body of Charles W. Littles, a lawyer of this city, in the Genesee river, a few rods below the falls.—From the pools of blood, and other evidences of a struggle, the murederers were easily traced from the place of the fatal conflict to the river, where they attempted to conceal the evidence of their crime by sinking the body of their victim The water being shallow, the body did not float away from the shore, and was found at 7 o'clock, yesterdy morning. The body was immediately taken to the police office, and arrests made of his wife and her brother, and several other of his relatives.

From the evidence, it appears that Littles and his wife did not live happily together and that a seperation took place about a year ago, but for the past month or two they had lived together again. On the ground was discovered blood and other evidences of a conflict were found; a piece of a victorine corresponding with one worn by Mrs. Littles, a rosette matching one found in her possession, and a comb, a pair of spectacles, said to belong to her brother, Ira Stout, a young man, aged about 23, and the arm of a chair, said to have been taken from the office where Littles was employed. Mrs. Little's left wrist and her brother's left arm were found broken, showing that they had been engaged in some extraordinary conflict.

The British War in India.

It is not a little amusing to see the amount of indignation against the Indian rebels, and of sympathy with the British sufferers; in the late and still existing native rebellion in India, which pervades all the English journals, and has been also largely copied and re-echoed in this country.

Now we are not surprised that, by British subjects, it should be thought a great crime to resist British sway anywhere, but it would not be so naturally anticipated that that sentiment would be so readily re-echoed, and so cordially adopted in freedom loving America. It was once said and thought that "resistance to Tyrants is obedience to God," and whatever sentiment others may choose to adopt upon this subject, we say and think so still, and we could never understand why, or how it should make so very much difference, whether the oppression came from Budhist, Pagan, or Christian sway.

It is not left to sects or persuasions to determine what shall be man's alienable, or inalienable rights, but the last of those God has given to every man, and it is his will, that whenever, and wherever trampled upon, he should defend them to the last. When England imposed the opium trade upon China, she imposed a base and impious wrong upon an ignorant and defenceless people, and to have professed to have done it in the name, and for the sake of christianity, was only adding bold hypocrisy, to unprovoked oppression

When she professes horror at the cruelties and degrading superstititions of the Juggernaut, it would seem far more sincere and christian-like, were her attentions thereupon directed more exclusively to the improvement of the moral condition, and the promotion of the happiness of the poor deluded natives, instead of seeing how utterly she could enslave them to only the execution of her arrogant will, and how completely she could tax them, to the very verge of actual starvation, for the more sure and permanent support of her luxurious esse and pride

It is not perhaps generally understood, that to the poor East Indian everything is taxed, even to the fruit of the forest-trees, that grow upon his patrimonial hills, so that in the end about eighty cents in value, or in kind, of every dollar's worth of food which he gathers or raises, and of clothes which he needs as a covering from the cold, goes to supply the extravagance of his self imposed masters, while upon the other twenty cents, he and his helpless family must live or starve, as best they can. Yet this is strictly and literally the case. Besides that, the religion of every man whatever it may, or may not be, is as dear to him, as is the protestant religion, to those who adopt it as the one true creed, and no one with the least spark of real manhood still unsmothered in his breast, will allow himself to be imposed upon, or dictated to, in this respect. It is all well enough to persuade men to the better way, but he who would attempt to drive men to it; is himself but a human tyrant and oppressor, unblest of God, and fit only for stripes and chains And yet this religious sentiment of the native lords of the Ganges, unenlightened as it may seem to us, is still dear to them, as are the images and saints to the catholic, or his creed and conventicle to the protestant.

And it is when they rise in rebellion against insult and oppression such as this, that all of England, and half of America cry out in holy horror, and still holier amazement, against such base ingratitude, and heathenish barbarity. Is it nothing that cruel taskmasters have eaten out their substance, that self imposed rulers, in impious hypocrisy have outraged their religious rites and sentiments, that in the midst of a God-given fertility and plenty, their wives and children are starving for bread? Is all this nothing, and is it true that to them there is left but the one great duty, and that is to submit? Out upon such philanthropy and civilization as this. Others may believe it if they will. To us it is only a base and impious lie.

Were we a native of Hindoostan, we would call upon our brethern in insult and bondage, in the name of God and humanity, as well as India's injured rights, to rise and drive the tyrants from the land. Others might call it barbarous rebellion, what they would—but to us it would be a heaven inspired, and God-directed crusade for freedom, against oppresion, and in the name of humanity and freedom's God would we wage war to the knife, and the knife too to the hilt, till not a foreign governor or tax gatherer should be found between the Indian seas.

Dispatches from Boonville, this morning say that Major Russell, Capt Van Vleit and Geo. W. Sanders passed down the river, last evening, en route for Washington. They left Leavenworth on the 19th. Stanton was still acting as Governor, apparently with the approbation of General Denver. Gen. Harney had dispatched 2 companies of cavalry, upon Stanton's requisition, to suppress a rebellion at Fort Scott, where several lives had been sacrificed. Harney had also posted troops at Doniphan, Lecompton, Atchison, Kickapoo, Leavenworth and Lawrence. The legitimate vote will be very small, but there are many Missourians going into the Territory to vote, which, taken in connection with Stanton's removal, may cause bloodshed at the polls.

Benefits and Returns.

A Sermon delivered to the Baptist Church by John Fletcher, on Thursday October 29 1857.—Being the day appointed by his Excellency, Kingsley S. Bingham, for Public and general thanksgiving and praise.

"What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits toward me? Psalm 116 and 12.

The author of the book Psalms has attained such an eminent place among the prophets and inspired writers, that his productions have generally been selected to lead the devotions of the godly in all ages. His exalted verse, excels in sublimity, purity of sentiment, and tenderness of expression, the sacred poetry of all ages, authors, and nations.

And among all the traits, of character exhibited in these writings, which we have so often admired, and tried to imitate, there is none that shines forth with more beauty, and perspicuity, than that of gratitude. The book of Psalms abounds with the spontaneous effusions, and out-gushings, of a grateful heart.

I have selected this enquiry of the Psalmist for our contemplation on the present occasion, because I deem it appropriate. Such an enquiry, expressive of a proper acknowledgement of mercies received, and a disposition to make suitable returns to Him who gave them, is always proper, and seasonable; but more especially on this day, set apart as it is, for the more specific purpose of offering thanksgiving to God. And I think every christian will to-day readily adopt the language of the text, and from the deep fountains of his soul say; "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me?" We will consider.

First, the benefits received. And indoing this as, I design to occupy but a limited portion of time, I shall confine myself to the enumeration of only a few of the innumerable blessings which have been bestowed upon us, since we were last exhorted as a State to render special thanksgiving to God.

The discordant clamor of a political agitation, peculiarly fierce and antagonistic, was just growing faint in the distance, and men, whether joyful or account of victory obtained, or with melancholy and sadness brooding over defeat, had, just returned, quietly to pursue again their respective vocations in life, when they were exhorted, by those in authority, to offer special thanksgiving to God. Communities had been in confusion; harsh words had been spoken, and the ties of friendship severed. The family of the living God was divided against itself. The sacred precints of the family circle, were in some instances entered, and hearts had become alienated and hostile. Men's consciences were troubled, in consequence of severe words spoken, and unkind and malignant acts performed, under the influence of intense excitement And but a few, comparatively, were qualified to enter upon the duty of thanksgiving, in a suitable frame of mind; and with such religious feeling, as renders thanksgiving acceptable to God. Another year has rolled round, and this day comes to us under different circumstances, and I trust we are better prepared to-day to offer the grateful tribute of our hearts to our gracious Benefactor, than we were a year ago.

It is true, the Nation has again been agitated and shaken, but not with the clamor of party opposition, and contention for victory in the political world, it is the hand of the Almighty that has shaken us: caused men's hearts to fail for fear; thousands to drink the bitterdraught of disappointment, and filled up the long catalogue of plans thwarted, prospects blighted, hopes crushed.—Stern winter has approached, with unwonted severity, and fearful forebodings cast a gloom over many households, as they look forward to its long, dreary, months, when, deprived of he proceeds of honest industry, scarcity of fuel, and shortness of bread, will be the inevitable results. Hunger and cold are already being felt by multitudes. We cannot conceive the amount of suffering, which the approaching winter will bring, unless the hand of omnipotence shall avert the impending calamities. In all our more populous cities, and in every grade of society, it will be felt. But let us ever remember that "Behind a frowning providence,

God hides a smiling face."

Hence, strange as it may appear to some, I place first on the list of the benefits of the past year, the troubles of the financial world. The sun of prosperity has ceased to shine, and the night of adversity has approached. Men are mourning over their losses, and "refuse to be comforted," because their wealth is gone.

A minister of the Gospel was once hastily summoned to the dwelling of a highly respectable and wealthy member of his Church; a man who had been greatly prospered in temporal things, and becoming absorbed in business, had neglected the claims of God, and the performance of christian duties.—He had an only child; beloved, almost idolized, by its devoted parents, and that child was seized with a dire and painful disease.

He saw the color depart from its cheek; the brilliancy from its eye; and the agonies of death were approaching. Under these painful circumstances, the pastor was sent for, who, on entering the room, saw the child struggling under the hand of death. He looked upward; and the troubled father, who was waiting to receive some word of consolation, because almost indignant, when he discovered an expression of joy on the countenance of the pastor, and demanded the reason of his pleasure. Whereupon he replied, "I am glad, my brother, that the Lord has not forsake you. That he is about to take away your idols, and to bring you back to Himself, to His people, to repentence, to the discharge of duties long neglected, to humility and dependence.

This illustrates my postion. Men have enjoyed uninterupted prosperity, and proved rebellious. They have neglected the Lord, and prostrated themselves upon the altar of mammon: Bundles of promissory notes, have been their cherished, idolized, objects. But the life of their Gods has been taken away; and in the paroxysms of their distress, they hug to their bosoms a worthless loathsome carcass. The strange Gods to which men seem to have given supreme affection, are sick and dying The magnificent place is vacated. The imposing grandeur of equipage, and the glittering paraphernalia of high places, has eluded the grasp of their once dooting possessors. A shock has been experienced, whose vibrations will yet be felt, till men, trembling and penitent, shall flee to the "Rock of Ages," and seek refuge beneath the powerful arm of Jehovah. God has been showing them the true nature of earthly things, that they are transient, and unsatisfying, and unworthy of their supreme affection. This will be felt. Affliction, and distress and temporal calamity, will drive them into the peaceful enclosures of Zion; there to find rest to their distracted minds, peace to their troubled souls. We have reason to praise God that he has not forsaken us; and allowed us to go on in neglect of Him, till the lightning's flash, the thunder's angry roar, darkened and torrents of hail falling from heaven, should make us stand aghast, trembling, before Him who "shakes terrible the earth" and escape would be impossible.

Second among our benefits, I notice the fact, that in various parts of our State, God has worked mightily through His people, His saving power has been felt, souls have been born again. While this part of God's heritage has not received the refreshing showers of divine Grace, let us praise God that other places have been visited, and souls converted. For it is always joyful intelligence to christians, to hear that in any place, souls have been brought out of darkness into his marvellous light.

Thirdly, Spiritual blessings have been continued to us. As individuals, we have been kept from the power of the enemy. The "wall of fire" has been round about us, protecting us from danger, and the "munition of rocks" has been our defence. As churches, we may hope that there is some vitality still remaining, that the elements of spiritual life are still in our midst and the promises of God are still on our side. We still enjoy the privilege of worshiping God in his sanctuary. We have the Bible in our hands, the Gospel preached to us, and the comforting ordinances of God's house administered. The inroads of death have been few. We still have an opportunity of redeeming the time, making amends for past shortcomings, by increased devotion and activity in the future. And there are a few faithful disciples here, who count it an honor to labor for God, and are still willing to bear the "heat and burden of the day."

Fourth, We are here to-day in the enjoyment of physical strength, in the possession of our reasoning faculties, and all our wants amply provided for. And while we are rendering thanks to God for benefits received, let us not forget the unfortunate ones who are in circumstances of distress. Thousands of hearts are bleeding to-day, because kindred ties have been severed by the hand of death. Thousands are to-day struggling under the ruthless hand of fell disease; their bodies racked with pain, with parched lips, and sunken eyes, in the midst of physical contortion, they earnestly desire relief, even though it be but momentary. In the morning wishing for the stillness of night; and at midnight, desiring to see the returning sun. And why are we not to-day prostrate upon the bed of suffering? "Who hath made us to differ? Surely it is not least among our benefits, that temporal circumstances are as well with us to-day as they are.

And especially, if there are those present, who have not evidence of their adoption into the family of God, who have put off his chains and defered repentance, surely, the fact that such, after all their neglect of God, are to-day in His house, where he has promised to meet and bless His people, and the streams of salvation flow to the perishing, ranks high among the benefits bestowed by a compassionate, though insulted God.

Fifth, God hath not left himself without a witness, but hath given us "a fruitful season, filling our hearts with food and gladness" He hath made the Sun to shine upon "the evil and upon the good, "and sent rain upon the just and the unjust." The past harvest may not have been so abundant as the harvests of former years, and in particular localities, God has sent hail from heaven, to remind men of their dependence on Him Still, we have "bread enough and to spare," while some "perish with hunger."

Sixth. We have been preserved from war and civil commotion. "Wars and rumors of wars," have been the scenes of other climes We are free from them, and all their dreadful concomitants. Fields have not been laid waste by the diabolical hand of the willful destroyer. Cities and towns have not been reduced to ashes, by the fire of a wanton foe The blood of innocent victims has not been taken in our streets. Violence and oppression have not entered our homes. "The arrow which flieth by day," has not been aimed at our hearts These are only known to us, as the dark deeds of less favored portions of the earth

VII. We have been kept from the ravages of contaminating disease. 'The pestilence that walketh in darkness,' has not entered our chambers. 'The destruction that wasteth at noon-day,' has not been let loose upon us. God has been 'our refuge and our fortress.' He has delivered us from the 'snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence.

But I find that I have entered upon a subject that is unlimited; and for which the bounds of a brief discourse are very inadequate. As the grains of sand, upon the seashore are innumerable, so is the multitude of our blessings. Like the host of glittering stars which decks heavens canopy, and which cannot be counted, so are our benefits They have been 'new every morning and fresh every evening.'

The enquiry naturally follows, 'What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits?' Mercies bestowed in such abundance upon the unworthy and undeserving demand.

1 Grateful acknowledgement. Among men the person who manifests no gratitude for favors conferred, but treats his benefactor with indifference and neglect, is branded with ignominy. And they cease to bestow favors upon such, and select as the objects of their beneficence, those who appreciate their kindness, and appear thankful. Confer a favor upon a person; rescue a drowning man; or deliver an individual from a burning house and the sincere expressions emanating from a grateful heart, will amply repay you for your effort. But let him return insult and abuse for your kindness, and you can scarcely forbear treating him with contempt for his base ingratitude And yet, this sin which is so much despised among men, is very common in their conduct toward God How many thousands there are who never in the spirit of humble dependence, offer the petition 'Give us this day our daily bread;' yet God bestows it upon them. Who never say, 'Deliver us from evil; yet God delivereth them and 'daily loadeth them with benefits' And so unmindful of God are they, and so ungrateful, that at the close of the day, as they lay their heads upon their pillows, they never even think of the kind protecting hand that has sustained and preserved them through the day. And in the morning, as they arise to pursue the duties of the returning day, their hearts never arise with emotions of gratitude to God their protector; and thus they live, day after day, and year after year.

The sin of ingratitude was very prevalent when our Saviour dwelt among men On one occasion he met ten men who were afflicted with that loathsome disease, leprosy. Driven from the city as pests to society, and compelled to wander in the solitary wilderness Christ had compassion upon them, and cleansed them. And when they had presented themselves to the Priest, and were pronounced clean, fit to return to their homes, their families, and friends, one of their number returned, and 'With a loud voice glorified God' The Savior enquired, 'Were there not ten cleansed, but where are the nine?' Manifesting the basest ingratitude, they had gone on, without returning to thank the Saviour for the precious boon they had received. And thus it is with depraved man. While ten receive alike the blessings of God, only one gratefully acknowledges his goodness. Nine live on in sin and hard-hearted rebellion.

From this heinous sin the christian stands exempt. His eyes have been opened, his heart changed; and he perceives many and constant reasons for gratitude The common blessings of God's providence, and alive in his heart, a feeling of thankfulness much more, those spiritual blessings, which he is made a child of God, and an heir of Heaven.

Let us then to-day, as we contemplate the benefits which God has bestowed upon us, render grateful acknowledgement to Him. If we are truly thankful, it will be shown by a constant and willing obedience, and an implicit confidence in Him, which are some of its legitimate fruits, will be seen in our lives

And I have not time to particularize, I will mark secondly and finally. We should make an entire consecration of ourselves to the service of God. I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service," is the exhortation of Paul in the Romans. This is the only return we can make to God for his great and innumerable benefits. This is all he requires of us, and this he will always accept.

I do not mean that in doing this we make compensation to God for his mercies, or that our actions, in themselves considered, will be meritorious, this is far from being the case. But the act of consecrating ourselves to God, manifests a willingness on our part, to submit to Him; and impresses the conviction of our hearts, that He is worthy to be loved, and served, by all his intelligent creatures, and this in the sight of God, is of "great price." And by this act our best interests will be promoted. We give ourselves away to God; He receives us into his family, makes us the subjects of renewing grace, and heirs of everlasting life.

"Who, then, will this day consecrate himself to the Lord? Impenitent sinner, why should you longer remain ungrateful? If the temporal mercies of the past year, are not sufficient to lead you to God, look I beseech you at the "man of sorrows" who dies on the cross, that you might live; and let this lead you to penitence, faith, gratitude, and love, and point you to an "inheritance, incorruptible, and undefiled, and which fadeth not away," reserved in Heaven for those who believe unto salvation

A complete assortment of recently purchased Chemicals and Medicines, selected with particular reference to purity, are being received at DeWolf's Drug Store, one door above the Post office. He expects to supply all illings in this department in a way to meet the claims of Physicians, and the expectations of their prescriptions, so far as it regards the GENUINENESS of the articles.

There will be in constant attendence, at the store, night and day, one who can be relied upon for correctness in his services.

Deafness Cured.—The best remedy for deafness ever offered to the public, is Brandreth's Arctic Liniment Many cases of many years standing have been quickly and entirely cured by it; and thousands of cases caused by colds or obstructions of the ear-chambers, have yielded to one or two applications. Full directions for use accompany each bottle. One of the most remarkable cures was at the Hartford Deaf and Dumb Asylum. A boy, 15 years of age, named Benjamin Crawford, who had been born deaf and was consequently dumb, was sent home for reduction; and, as an experiment, the liniment was tried on him, and with the most complete success. He now hears as well as any one, and is rapidly learning to talk The Liniment is for sale at all Drug stores.

MOFFAT'S LIFE PILLS AND PHOENIX BITTERS

For all diseases of the digestive organs, pains in the back or the heart, these medicines have proved to be superior to all other known remedies.

Rheumatism—Neuralgia.—The agony of Rheumatism and Neuralgia are among the most acute with which the human frame is ever afflicted, and have heretofore been the most difficult to remove. Happily a remedy is now discovered by which the most obstinate cases can be immediately cured. This sovereign remedy is Brandreth's Arctic Liniment, for sale by Druggists generally. It is only necessary for the sufferer to try it, to be assured of its efficacy.

The most skeptical people can be convinced by trial that all the family medicines are humbug, and that among the thousand of the tecthy life there are a few of great merit, of undoubted worth. Of these, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy stands first, and foremost among the remedies of the age that can be relied on as a medicine that all that is recommended by its proprietors. It advertises itself on every trial, for there are none who use it but tell their friends to do so, and so it goes from mouth to mouth, all the people of the Union have learned the good of this truly valuable medicine. It is recommended with testimonials to prove its virtue for the cure of liver complaints of every kind, from the worst Dyspepsia to a common headache, and is particularly adapted to Jaundice, Deranged Stomach, Bowel complaints and diseases of children.

One or two doses are said to cure the with scarce a failure It is worth a trial this alone. It is particularly adapted to the use of ladies, particularly those of sedentary habits. Some ladies of the highest standing in society have given their certificates of its efficacy, and we say to all who are sick, one bottle, and you will never be without it.

MERITED TESTIMONIAL.—Our readers are well aware that the dwelling of Mr Hampton, of this place, was consumed by fire on the 6th day of December. The above building was insured in the ÆTNA, by their worthy Agent JOHN CUMMINS, Esq., who immediately after the fire, communicated the necessary facts to headquarters, and was in receipt of the amount of insurance, ($1263,25,) on the 17th day of December, eleven days after the fire. This is quick work, and shows that the Ætna pays promptly, even during these hard times, as soon as damages were assessed, without waiting for the expiration of the time allowed the company to adjust the same.

Will Potatoes Mix in the Hill?

This question has been going the rounds of the agricultural press, but we did not design to notice it, as we consider the matter too absurd to be worthy of serious attention. But since nearly every agricultural paper in the United States has laid the question before its readers, we will follow suit.

Rev. E. E. Goodrich, of Utica, set the question at rest, in a communication to the Country Gentlemen, as follows:

1. I have been raising seedling potatoes by the thousand during the last eight years. Many of them in favorable years, as in 1852 and 1855, produced balls the year of their organization. Many of these sorts have been cultivated side by side, and sometimes in the same hill, for four or five years i. e., until I could judge of their value.

Yet I have never found a sort that varied in its practical characteristics, such as shape of leaf and vine, color of leaf and flavor, and color both external and internal, of tuber after the first year. It is only in shape of tuber that I have found them to vary.

2. I have numerous sorts that have been crossimpregnated. Thus, in 1851 I had a cross between a seedling of 1849, called the Empire State, and the New Jersey Black Yam. The result was that variety since given out under the name of Black Diamond. So also in 1852, I had a cross between the Early Mountain June and a blue variety, which resulted in the sort named the Mountain June Pink eye. But in neither case did the varieties bearing the balls, i. e., the Empire State and Early Mountain June, show any change in their tubers.

3 Variety in soil, culture and season, one or all, may make slight changes in the flesh and degree of color, both external and internal, and in the smoothness of skin, but these changes are not essential or permanent. Thus the summer and winter Pink eye will often show hills that differ from each other in the amount of purple stripes on the tubers, nay, the tubers of the same hill will differ from each other So the Western Red varies in depth of color with soil and season.

4 Some varietes are never fixed in color. I imported a variety from South America in 1851, which was almost uniformly white, though the same hill would occasionally show a tuber with a bright purple stripe, or even a small speck. I frequently find this same feature of varying color in all my seedlings, both externally and internally.

From all these considerations, both of philosophy and fact, I am constrained to conclude that the color or other sensible qualities of the tuber are incapable of change by being planted together, and hence the facts that seem to favor such a conclusion have not been accurately examined.

Extensive Farmer.

A correspondent of the Silver Creek Mirror says that Col. Jacob Carroll, of Texas, is the largest farmer in the United States. He owns 250,000 acres of land (nearly 400 square miles,) in this and adjoing counties. His home plantation contains about 8,000 acres nearly all valuable bottom lands, along the Gaudaloupe river. On this farm he has over 6,000 acres in cultivation on which he raises annually about 300 bales of cotton worth at the plantation from $75 to $100 per bale, and 20,000 barrels of corn, worth about $1,50 per barrel. He has a force of about fifty field hands, and he works about sixty mules and horses, & fifteen yoke of oxen. Col. Carroll has on his immense ranges of pasture lands. about one thousand horses and mules worth $50,000; one thousand head of cattle, worth $7,000; six hundred hogs worth $2,000; three hundred Spanish mares, worth $15,000; fifty Jennies, worth $3,000; fifteen jacks, worth $9,000; and five stallions worth $2,500. Col. Carroll's property, in stock &c., is worth at least $150,000; and the value of his landed estate will swell the amount to over half a million of dollars His annual income from the sale of stock amounts to from $5,000 to $10,000; and from the sale of cotton, from $15,000 to $20,000.

Sugar from Sorghum.

As the public are much excited at the present time upon the Chinese Sugar Cane question, I propose to contribute my mite of experience.—Last spring I obtained three dollars' worth of seed, and planted in rows fours feet apart, one kernel or seed every twelve to twenty inches, on one acre of dry loam soil, a part of which I highly manured from my stable.—I planted the seed May 19th, and in about week it came up. On the manured ground it grew fast; the other very slow. The first named ripened its seed well; the other scarcely got into good dough. I purchased a sugar (crushing) mill of two iron rollers, 5½ inches in diameter, and 14 inches long had new gear wheels cast, both of a size, to give equal motion to the rollers; then commenced grinding and boiling, and soon found that six gallons of juice would make one gallon of superior syrup. I built a mill with wooden rollers 18 inches in diameter, and went at it in good earnest, and found that it now took eight gallons of juice for one of syrup, Upon investigating the cause, I found there were two juices distinct from each other in the cane, viz; a crystalizable and an uncrystalizable saccharine juice. The iron rollers expressed both; the wooden rollers only one. The juice run from the iron rollers granulated easily while the juice from the wooden rollers could scarcely be said to grain.

I made from one acre of cane 200 galls of syrup, for which our merchants pay me, by the barrel 90 cents per gallon.

The result may be summed as follows.

Rent of land	$3'50
Cost of seed	3,00
Plowing of ground and planting	2,00
One day's plowing cane	2,00
Paid for labor in working	18,00
Paid for wood for boiling	2,00
One iron mill	28,00
One wooden mill	20,00
Two kettles 40 and 60 gallons	17,00
Total cost	$96,50

200 gallons of syrup at 90 cts. per gallon. $180,00—83,50

Leaving a net profit over every expense of 80,50, from one acre of Chinese Sugar Cane. This is the experience of

C. B. Ostrander, M. D.

N. B. I forgot to state above that my cane was twice frozen solid before it was worked or cut.

Hickory Point Ill. Oct. 29, 1857.

INTERESTING TO FARMERS.—The following result of feeding a milch cow partially upon Chinese sugar cane, (from the Providence Journal,) will be read with interest by farmers:—

Lady Tempest, half Durham Cow was in pasture on the 22nd of September, and yeilded 4 lbs of milk. On the evening of that day, gave her ten short stalks of suckers of Sorgho, which if cut up, would fill half a bushel. After this until the 28th, gave her the same amount of Sorgho, night and morning, and kept her in the same pasture. Yeild of milk:

On 23d, 42½ lbs; 24th, 47 do; 25th, 47¾ do; 26th, 49 do; 27th 51½ do; 28th 50¾.

The pasture affected by no circumstance that would tend to increase the feed from it during this time. The weather uniformly pleasant, excepting the 23d which was rainy and without frost affecting the feed.

Owen K. Metcalf.

FENCING TIMBER.—If you have a knoll or ridge of land on your farm, sow it with yellow locust seed. Fence timber is getting scare, and must yearly become so. We have for 20 years been arguing this course with farmers—about the time we had three locust trees at our back door, which we had to cut down; for many years after, there were yearly sprouts raising from the roots, which we gave to farmers to plant and now we have the satisfaction to know that some of these are large trees; and others have groves which they value highly.—*R. Patent Medicines.

ONE DOLLAR WILL BUY

ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public, namely, DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REMEDY: that acts as a Cathartic, easier, milder and more effectual than any other medicine known. It is not only a Cathartic, but a great remedy, acting best on the Liver, to correct its morbid action, and thereby the stomach and bowels to carry off that disorder, in a comfortable, expeditious, effectual manner, like no other medicine. It purges effectually, without any of the painful feelings experienced in the operations of most Cathartics, it strength ens the system at the same time that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely, Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects.

Though possessing rare medical powers, these Gums have been but little known to Physicians, and never used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the Invigorator, which met us with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known in its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure LIVER Complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver, is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver, and as a proof that the INVIGORATOR relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses on rising and it assists nature in her operations. By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work as regularly as clock work.

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the INVIGORATOR, which corrects all acidity and sourness of the stomach.

For an over-loaded stomach it has no equal. It relieves all oppressive or uneasy feeling after eating heartily. For a FAMILY MEDICINE generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints, and all diseases arising from a Diseased Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it, and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to Dyspeptics, for it made a complete cure before the first bottle was taken, and we can say that anything edible without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain. Now what we want to say to all our readers is LIVER COMPLAINTS OR DYSPEPSIA trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.—State Fact.

We take infinite pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER, and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty, and thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of diseases incident to children as DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR; nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it; for it acts as a Cathartic so mildly and gently, and seems to renovate the system so thoroughly that we think we are doing a service to all in advising them, when they need medicine, to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where great benefit has been received in diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels, where all other remedies failed to give relief. It has been so useful in our family that we will not be without it.—Jacksonville, Ala. Republican.

It contains no Quinine, Arsenic, or other injurious ingredients. It strengthens the system gives tone to the Stomach, and is invaluable to DYSPEPTICS and those affected with Weakness in any part of the System. It is especially recommended to females troubled with Falling of the Womb. ONE BOTTLE is sufficient in most cases where the Directions are followed, Certinctes can be furnished from all parts of Union.

AYER'S Cathartic Pills, (SUGAR COATED,) AND NOW IN USE.

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK. Invalids, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Effects, and judge of their Virtues.

FOR THE CURE OF

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach,

PITTSBURGH, PA., May 1, 1856.

DR. J. C. AYER. SIR: I have been troubled for years with the worst headache any body can have by way of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, and they cleanse at once. If they will thus cure as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PEIRCE, Clerk of Steamer Clara.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 1, 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them; and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

POST OFFICE, HARTLAND, LIV. CO., MICH., Nov. 18, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months. Was off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. Has then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her, by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had tried us my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, while others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctor bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit. In distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, WYOMING CO., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1856.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After one bottle was used, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawles, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, SAVANNAH, GA., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the good my health has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of my excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, BATON ROUGE, LA., 5 Dec., 1856.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are a excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, as a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the shameful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town, and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, by our own families in any civilized country on this continent without some personal experience of its effects; and fewer persons are there in communities any where who have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the maladies to which they are upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the CHERRY PECTORAL saves more lives by the prevention of consumption, if prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable, and prevent them until a human skill can master the lurking

The Wind and Stream.

A brook came stealing from the ground;
You scarcely saw its silvery gleam
Among the herbs that hung around
The borders of that winding stream,—
A pretty stream, a placid stream,
A softly gliding, bashful stream.

A breeze came wandering from the sky,
Light as the whispers of a dream;
He put the o'erhanging grasses by,
And gaily stooped to kiss the stream,—
The pretty stream, the flattered stream,
The shy, yet unreluctant stream.

The water, as the wind passed o'er,
Shot upward many a glancing beam,
Dimpled and quivered more and more,
And tripped along a livelier stream,—
The flattered stream, the simpering stream,
The fond, delighted, silly stream.

Away the airy wanderer flew
To where the fields with blossoms teem,
To sparkling springs and rivers blue,
And left alone that little stream,
The flattered stream, the cheated stream,
The sad, forsaken, lonely stream

That careless wind no more came back;
He wanders yet the fields, I deem;
But on its melancholy track
Complaining went that little stream,—
The cheated stream, the hopeless stream,
The ever murmuring, moaning stream.

Blessed Children.

BY T. S. ARTUUR.

As Mr Andrew Freeman came up to the door of his elegant home a little before sundown, one pleasant autumn day, he saw a coarsely-dressed child, some seven or eight years old, sitting upon the door-step with a basket by her side containing some chips gathered at a carpenter's shop. Wearied with her heavy load, she had stopped to rest herself.

Something had gone wrong with Mr. Freeman, and he did not feel in a pleasant humor. The sight of the child and her basket, both occupying the white marble steps that led up to his handsome dwelling, annoyed him. They looked out of place—were incongruous, and blurred the fair entrance to his home.

'Get away from here!' he said roughly, as he came up to the doorway.

The child started, looked frightened, and taking up her basket, went hurriedly down the street.

'The little vagrants!' ejaculated Mr. Freeman, as he swung open the door of his luxurious home. 'They shouldn't be permitted to prowl the streets in this way; watching around gates and doorways for a good chance to steal. If I had my will of them, every one should be taken and put in the work-house.

If elegance and comfort at home could make a man happy, then was Mr. Freeman one of earth's favored ones. But the heart makes its own paradise. The mere externals of a man's life have far less to do with his happiness than most of us try to believe. On every side, beauty, elegance, taste, and comfort met the eyes of Mr. Freeman, but they had no power to dispel the shadows that a troubled contact with men and business had drawn around his spirit

'Who were you speaking to at the door?' asked his wife, as she met him in the passage.

'A dirty little vagrant!' he replied, 'who was hanging about our doorstep, with her greasy basket.'

Mrs Freeman did not reply She had looked from one of the parlor windows a short time before, and noticed a very little girl with a basket of chips too large and heavy for one of her strength, almost dragging instead of carrying it along—And she had also seen her stop and sit down to rest on their door-step. Pity was in her heart for the child who was poorly clad—yet clean In her plain face was a gentle expression, which she knew was only born of a loving heart.—Mrs. Freeman sighed as she thought that this was the child just driven off with angry words by her unreflecting husband.

'Where is Grace?' asked Mr. Freeman, on going from the parlors into the sitting room

'Fanny took her out walking,' replied Mrs. Freeman 'But she will be home soon. I am looking for their return every moment.'

Mr. Freeman was disappointed at not seeing his little pet, and this only increased the ill-nature from which he was suffering as from a disease. He sat down, in a moody state of mind, and replied only in monosyllables to the various remarks of his wife. He did not speak unkindly to her, for that was something of which he had never been guilty. But he took no interest in what she said; and she failed entirely in her efforts to throw a sunbeam into his mind.

Presently the bell was heard to ring—Mr. Freeman raised his head and listened. A few moments elapsed—then the door was opened, and a voice musical as a wind harp to the ears of Mr. Freeman, came running along the passages. It was Grace, his darling child—the sunbeam in his dwelling.

"Has papa come home?" he heard her ask.

"Yes, love," he called to her, "papa is home. Come up here, you little runnaway!"

How changed, suddenly, were both tone and manner. Up the stairs bounded the fairy-footed child, and was soon in her father's arms, clasping his neck and covering his face with kisses Away went the evil spirit from the heart of Mr. Freeman—away went the shadows from his brow, banished by the presence of his blessed child.

Not very far from the rich man's dwelling stood a humble frame tenement, where a poor day laborer lived with his wife and child He had been very hard at work from the rising to the going down of the sun, and now released from toil, was slowly wending his way homeward, bearing the spirit of discontent in his heart. Though scarcely numbering as many years as Mr. Freemen, he looked older than the wealthy merchant His skin was coarse and brown from long exposure to the summer's sun and winter's cold—his body stooping from the weight of many burdens—his large hands rough and horny from labor Occasionally, as his eyes glanced up from the pavement, and rested upon the elegant homes that stood proudly along the street, a touch of envy chafed him, and the old thought of a partial distribution of God's blessings came like a spirit of evil into his mind

In this unhappy mood was John Grant, when he laid his hand upon the latch, and pushed open the door of his poor abode. How different was this tenement in all its surroundings and interior appearances, to the princely dwelling of Andrew Freeman, the wealthy merchant.—The low, weather stained door, from which all paint had been obliterated for years, opened into the one room which was used as a kitchen, workroom, eating and sitting-room. The badly constructed chimney only partially carried off the smoke, and as John Grant stepped into the room, he encountered an atmosphere loaded with a stifling and blinding vapor.

He neither scolded nor complained; but the sense of oppression was increased. He looked at his weary wife, and the weary wife looked at her weary husband. Both sighed, but neither of them spoke a word; yet both felt that their lot in life was a hard one. John Grant sat down, heavily, and his wife went on with her preparations for supper.

"Where is Mary?" was asked after a little while.

"She's gone to the store for salt," replied the wife.

The poor laboring man had looked up with a gleam of interest on his countenance His head bent slowly down again until his chin rested upon his bosom.

"Isn't she staying a great while?" said the father, looking towards his wife, after a few minutes had passed.

"It's time she was here," replied the mother "She'll be back in a moment, I'm sure."

"She's a great deal of help to you now, Jane," said Grant, with an awakening interest in his voice.

"Oh, yes; a great deal," answered his wife. "You don't know how many steps she saves me. I hardly ever have to run out to the store now She buys things there just like a little woman. And she is learning to sew quite neatly. Just look at that!" And the mother brought a dingy old piece of unbleached muslin, on which were several rows of stitches.—'Mary did the whole of this. Now, isn't it wonderful? She'll make a smart woman, I can tell you"

"And she's so good," said Grant, as a broad smile went over his rough face, lighting it up with a human expression that gave it a higher type of manhood.

"Look there," added the wife, pointing to a basket of carpenter's chips. "She brought that from the shop all herself.—Why, it's a load for a stout boy! Isn't she strong?"

"Too heavy a load for her arm, Jane," replied Grant. "You mustn't let her bring such a large one again."

"Oh, she didn't mind it," said the mother. "I asked her how she got along, and she told me she carried the basket a short distance at a time, resting on the door-steps, and so making her way homeward. I didn't just like one thing," added Mrs. Grant, in a voice betraying some indignation. "She says that a gentleman who lives in one of the great houses in the next block, drove her off his steps where she was resting, and frightened her with his angry looks."

"Curse him!" exclaimed John Grant, a fiery indignation burning instantly in his face,

"Don't—don't, John, curse anybody!" said his wife in a soothing voice. "He didn't know our little Mary, as we know her, or he never would have driven her away. There are idle, bad, thieving children about, John, and the gentleman no doubt took her for one of them"

"I don't care for that," replied Grant, still in an angry tone. "But if I had been there, I would have knocked him down as I would knock down a dog!"

John Grant was still brooding over this treatment of his child, when the music of her happy voice, as she came singing to the door, fell pleasantly upon his ears, scattering all clouds and shadows, and filling his heart with sunshine.

"Has father come home?"

These were her words, as she threw open the door, and bounded into the room.

"Yes, pet, father is home," said John Grant, reaching out his arm towards the child, who was as precious to his heart, as the child of any father in the land—that of Andrew Freeman not excepted.

Mary sprang into those great, strong arms, clasping her own, that were fairy-like in comparison, about her father's neck, and pressing her soft young lips, loveingly, to lips whose kisses were sweet to her. Then she laid herself down in his arms, and looked up, with a happy smile, into his face. Mary was not a handsome child Her features were plain and rather coarse, but, in the sight of her father, she was very beautiful To him, all the sweetness of her child-life, which was full of love to her parents, was expressed in her outward form. The blue of her eyes; the ruby of her lips; the chestnut brown of her hair; the softness of her skin, all had a refinement, a delicacy and a beauty to him as real as any of the higher types of beauty to others. In all her movements, too, he saw a surpassing grace.

Is not love the great beautifier? It is not the heart's sunshine that makes light in all the chambers of the soul.

Blessed children! To the rich repiner, and the poor murmurer, alike blessings. Heaven-sent messengers of love!—links that bind us to the upper world! Celestial visitants? To the Andrew Freeman's and John Grant's of this unhappy world alike the good angels, who, by a single wave of the hand, sweep aside the dark curtains of blooding discontent, and let in the heavenly sunshine Blessings on them—blessings forever!

SOUND LAW.—Chief Justice Shaw, of Massachusetts, in dismissing the case of the Slave Betty, recently before him, and surrendering her to her master, according to her own expressed wish, directed that an entry should be made on the records of Court to show that she came into the State with the consent of her master, and was therefore free she could not be reduced to slavery again, but could at any time appeal to the records of the Court in Massachusetts to assert her freedom This is sound law although not the Dred Scott law.

AN IMPORTANT OMISSION.—It appears that in the schedule of the Kansas Constitution, as recently published, three sections were omitted, one of which contained a provision requiring the voters, if challenged, to swear to support the Constitution, if adopted, on penalty of prosecution for perjury' As the question of the adoption of the Constitution itself is not to be submitted to the voters at all, it follows that every man who wishes to vote upon the Slavery clause, must swear to support a Constitution which is made for him, however odious its provisions

Children should be inured as early as possible to acts of charity and mercy—Constanstine, as soon as his son could write, employed his hand in signing pardons, and delighted in conveying through his mouth all the favors he granted—a noble introduction to sovereignty, which is instituted for the happiness of mankind.

☞ It is not the outward profession of the truth, but the inward power of it, that is useful unto the world, or to the souls of men.

Correspondence of the Herald.

Sauk Rapids, Min. Dec. 5th '57.

Until this morning, excepting a few days in the fore part of November, the weather here has been extremely mild and pleasant. I have never known more uniformly agreeable fall weather. Yesterday, the fourth of Dec., there was not any snow upon the ground, and the sun was warm and bright, and the air still and balmy. It commenced snowing this morning, and has continued to snow all day pretty steadily. Those who have resided in this latitude longest, prophesy from the character of the weather a few weeks past, an open and mild winter, with little snow and few changes. No such winter as our last, has been known before for eleven years It was an entirely unusual winter for Minnesota.

It is to be hoped that the present one may be more mild, with less of inconvenience and severity from deep snows, than the last; for, owing to the ravages of the Grasshopper last season, more or less, on the frontier who came in last spring and could raise nothing, will have a sufficiently hard time of it, with even genial winds and weather Still though the grasshoppers have destroyed almost everything the farmer has raised for now two successive seasons, and most of the people have but recently come here, very many of them having expended their all in coming, yet there will be very few, if any, cases of actual want during the coming winter.—These, if they occur will occur among the Germans, and a sufficient provision has been made by wealthy individuals for all such cases. Even with the drawbacks to crops of the two last years, strange to say, there seems to be a sufficiency, as a general thing, in the territory for the wants of all in the way of grain and provisions. If any one has not these, they either have money to buy with or some other kind of property to exchange for them. Never was any country more severely visited by everything to hinder and discourage, than Minnesota has been for the past two years, and never did any country come out from under the trial, more bright, hopeful, and prosperous. Every farmer admires the healthiness of the climate and the beauty and fertility of the land. If he has bought and paid for his land, he feels independent. With such uniform health as he enjoys here and such heavy crops raised with so little labor, he knows it will take but a few years to make him a very rich man If he is on a claim, he is hurrying up Government with the survey, so that he can know where his lines are and to be able to go to the Land Office and enter it at a dollar and a quarter an acre Such is the satisfactory and hopeful feeling prevailing among the settlers of Northern Minnesota; despite Grasshoppers, Bank suspensions, and commercial revulsions. Does not this speak volumes for the resources and attractions of the country? Is it not a most remarkable evidence, not only of the productiveness of the country, if not in one way yet in another, whereby men find it to their advantage to continue, but of the attachment, those who have settled here and know the country, cherish for it? It most certainly is There will be a larger immigration into the Territory next season, than has ever been known since its organization.

Almost every family is expecting some relative or friend out in the spring—Thousands thrown out of employ in eastern manufactories that have gone down in the present financial crisis, will on the opening of navigation, take the few dollars they may have laid up from years of unrequited toil, and direct their steps here, where they can find rich, beautiful land, at $1.25 per acre, and in one year or two, be the independent owner of 160 acres of it with 40 or 50 fenced and plowed.

This every industrious man can do—Some there are who come here under the false idea that they can get along without work. Now, I take it that however desirable the country may be, however rich the soil, and however high the prices of its products, such will never be the better or wiser for it. It will put no money into their pockets, and when they have idled away a year, they will be just as empty as when they came. I have observed many such persons. They stay a year or two, rove about in no fixed employment; if they earn a little money, forthwith spend it in some useless way, instead of going on a claim and building a shanty there and improving it, and then leave the territory, declaring that it is the worst country a man ever went to. Many such people go to every new country. What takes them from their old home in the first place, carries them back again; a want of industry and energy.

They will do nothing to any purpose anywhere—but they had better stay just where they find themselves now; at any rate, Minnesota, with its thousand treasures in land and river, can do them no good.

I have only room to say that all kinds of game are plenty—deer, prairie chicken, wild geese, and good sized birds.

Slavery Must Go into the North.

The primary object of all government in its original institution, is the protection of person and property. It is for this alone that men surrender a portion of their natural rights.

It is to be hoped that the present one may be more mild, with less of inconvenience and severity from deep snows, than the last; for, owing to the ravages of the Grasshopper last season, more or less, on the frontier who came in last spring and could raise nothing, will have a sufficiently hard time of it, with even genial winds and weather Still though the grasshoppers have destroyed almost everything the farmer has raised for now two successive seasons, and most of the people have but recently come here, very many of them having expended their all in coming, yet there will be very few, if any, cases of actual want during the coming winter.—These, if they occur will occur among the Germans, and a sufficient provision has been made by wealthy individuals for all such cases. Even with the drawbacks to crops of the two last years, strange to say, there seems to be a sufficiency, as a general thing, in the territory for the wants of all in the way of grain and provisions. If any one has not these, they either have money to buy with or some other kind of property to exchange for them. IMPORTANT DECISION OF THE SUPREME COURT.—In the case of the Commonwealth vs. Mr Allistor and Hess, recently carried to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania on a writ of error to the Court of Common Pleas of Lancaster county, it was decided that. "When an administrator or trustee deposits trust funds in his own name in a bank or savings institution which fails, the loss shall fall upon him, and not upon the cestui que trust."

The court held that "the liability of an administrator or trustee for funds lost by the failure of the bank or institution in which they have been deposited does not depend upon the good faith, prudence or judgment with which he may have acted nor upon the fact that he has deposited his own funds in the same place. He is personally responsible for the loss of his money deposited in his name because he did not make the deposit as administrator or trustee.

Does not the echo in the sea-shell tell of the worm which once inhabited it? and shall not man's good deeds live after him and sing his praise?

EMIGRATION FROM THE UNITED KINGDOM.—From an official return of emigration from ports in the United Kingdom at which there are government emigration offices for the quarter ending the 30th of September, we gather the following particulars:—The total emigration for the quarter was 51,994, against 50,126 during the corresponding quarter of last year.—The departures from the principal ports were 38,590 from Liverpool, 5,930 from London 2,996 from Plymouth, and 1,507 from Southampton; from Glasgow, 1823; and 1148 from the various Irish ports.—Of these numbers, we find that 32,044 embarked for the U. S., 14,208, for the Australian colonies, 4,679 for British North America, and 1,063 for other places.

Dead and Buried.

December 1857.

Make no moaning soul within me,
Shed no tear dim eyes of mine,
Hush! my heart,—thy pulse pain me,
Cease thy throbbing—make no sign.

Calm thee now brain and listen
Wild winds shrieking through the years;
See the rain-drops, falling, glisten
Like a human weeper's tears.

See the clouds—they hang so darkly,
Like a funeral pall, 't would seem'
While between, the moon looks starkly
As a corpse-face in a dream.

And a few faint stars still glimmer
Like the torches round a bier:
Cold drops fall between their shimmer
While the winds wail requiem drear.

Dirge of hopes that have departed
As the angels took their flight,"
When the risen Lord had parted
From his followers long sight.

Go then to thy labor—keeping
Watch as did those few of old.
And at last when thou art sleeping,
Back shall come with crowns of gold.

In immortal vesture shining
Risen Hopes and Glorified.
Then my soul thou'lt joy past pining
That on earth they lived and died.

Arrest of Counterfeiters.

On Monday night, Constable Sprague, accompanied by Silas Stow and S. Phelps, of this village, started in pursuit of a gang of counterfeiters who have infested the vicinity of Burr Oak for some time past. One of the gang, Granger by name, a few days previous, scraped an acquaintance with Mr. Stow, and arrangements were made between them that they should meet at Burr Oak, on Monday evening, when Stow could have as much or as little of the money as he wished to purchase. Mr Stow did meet Granger at Burr Oak, but accompanied by the proper officers for his arrest. After securing him, they proceeded north east of Burr Oak, to the house of one Misner, on whom suspicion had rested for some time. The officers on entering the house told him their business, and rushing up stairs, they found a pile of $5 bills on the Market Bank of New York, laying on the table, all signed, filled out, and ready for circulation. On the table they found a sheet of paper which had been used to practice on by the person who filled out the bills. In the same room they found a young man in bed, who gave his name as Albright, and who is suspected of having signed and filled out the bills. Granger informed Mr Stow that he expected $8,000 of this money in a short time, and that a nice thing could be made out of it. They were all brought to this place and had an examination before Esq. Leavitt, who required Misner to find bail in $4,000, and the other two in $3,000 each, to appear for trial at the next term of the Circuit Court, or in default be committed to the county jail. As some of this money may have been put in circulation, we give the following description of it:

'The Market Bank will pay $5 on demand to C. B Roosa or bearer. New York, Oct. 8th, 1856 R. H. Haylock. Cashier. R. S. Willams, President

Vignette—Female figure in a reclining posture in the centre, rising sun at her side,—stambost, cars and railroad bridge on the left of the bill. In one corner of the bill stands a female figure holding out a wreath in one hand, and in the other a staff, with the cap of liberty on the top. The engraving is good, but the ink on the bill has a brown, dirty appearance which may be easily detected.—Sturgis Republican.

Cattle from Texas.

The Toledo (O.) Blade says:

"Yesterday a drove of cattle passed through our city on their way to the Eastern markets which were a curiosity — They numbered 280 head, and came all the way from Texas. They were gathered in the northern of Texas last Fall, and driven forward through Kansas and Missouri to Jacksonville, Illinois, where they were kept through the winter and summer to be fattened and prepared for market. From that point they came forward on the Wabash Valley Road, and will soon be on the tables of the gentleman in New York, and after an adventurous journey of over ten months. They are all nearly of a size, in good order, but not heavy, and are remarkable for the length of their horns. In this respect they differ materially from our cattle. Their horns are, in fact, enormous, and have a particularly dangerous and pokish appearance. We cannot help noticing in this connection how our railroads are changing the course of trade, and drawing supplies from the most remote regions. Without the Wabash road, this destination of the cattle of the far west could not be. But this road has made it possible for New York to draw supplies of beef from Texas, and we shall doubtless have many examples of what is now a novelty.

The citizens of Niles have notified the liquor sellers in their midst to stop the sale. Their committee found 34 tippling shops in the village.

Two Women Froze to Death.

The correspondent of St. Louis Republican, writing from St. Joseph, relates the following incident connected with the extreme cold in that vicinity during the last week.

Two women were found frozen to death, and the writer records the following in regard to one of them. He says:

'The white woman was an eccentric stranger who had wondered into the neighborhood of Platte, asking alms which in that rich country, were given her freely. No one knew her history, nor did she seem to have a friend on earth, except a little boy, some nine years old whom she called her son, and who was the faithful companion of her erratic peregrinations. When this cold spell came on a gentleman advised her to come to town, when he would see that she was comfortably provided for; but she refused and said it was her destiny to wander.—The second morning after the little boy came to his house and told him that his mother was dead, that she had frozen to death, and that he was almost frozen too. The gentleman took the poor little fellow and had him warmed and wrapped in thick clothing—for his garments were thin and torn—and then went with him to the place where his dead mother lay. The spectacle was harrowing.

'In the corner of a deserted cabin, which had neither doors nor windows to shut out the cold, among some miserable remnants of clothing which but half concealed her snowy limbs, drawn up as if still in agony of freezing she lay a rigid corps. Her countenance, however, was as serene as though she slept, and a faint smile was seen to linger timidly about the corners of her mouth as if it had been long a stranger there, but had came back at this last moment, to let the stranger as he gazed upon it, know that face where misery and woe had left so many imprints, had once known happiness. Her features were delicately molded, her hair was silken and of chestnut hue, and her hands and feet were small and indicated gentle blood. Her stature was of medium height, her form well turned and her age, in death, appeared to be between twenty eight and thirty: in life it had seemed forty.

'The little boy is wholly oblivious to the place of nativity, nor does he know any other name than George. She called him George, and he had wadered with her from his earliest memory. He does not know a relation in the world. He does not know that he ever had a father. He has sometimes in his sleep heard his mother cry, Oh, George! do not, do not leave me. I will die with grief;" and then weep until she became calm again. He waked her once or twice and told her that he would not leave her, when she clasped him in her arms and said, No, my son, I know you will not leave me.' And then he thought 'twas some one else of whom she dreamed—perhaps his father, but he did not know, nor even asked her. She was always sad and wept almost incessantly. She talked but little. She appeared in search of some one, and made the asking of alms a pretext for looking into every house along the way of her long, weary pilgrimage.

"In contemplating the unhappy and mysterious life, and shocking death of this poor, desolate unknown, what terrible reflections are awakend. Her early days may all have been of rescate hues, with every sound a melody, and every thought a gladness; her home in lofty halls, abounding in rare luxuries; affection's sweet solicitude surrounding her with every charm, and watchful lest an incident of pain might shadow her fair brow; the present all a joy, the future all aglow with images of fervid bliss; she may have braved paternal wih and given herself away unworthily; she may have been seduced from virtue's path, and then, betrayed, deserted, spurned have been condemned to wander out her miserable life.

"The negress, who was frozen on the same awful night, belonged to Dr. France and was lost in a thicket near Platte river. She was fould next day, stooped under a cluster of tangled bushes pefectly stiff and lifeless.

The regular term of the Agricultural College commences on Wednesday of next week. We need not call on the farmers ton send on their sons, for it is understood that there have been more applications than the buildings can well accommodate. We believe President Williams, and the faculty generally, are winning a good renown for the Institution.—Lansing Rep.

A sale of city lots for taxes took place at Quincy, Ill., last week. There was not a solitary bidder on the ground, and the whole list was struck off to the city. This is pretty good evidence that money's 'tight' in that quarter.

There are seven and a half million of of dollars in the treasury of Cuba, and the Governor General promises to send the home government twenty millions next year. Does anybody believe Spain will sell so profitable an estate.

The startling events of the New Year are too grave and involve too high interests for merely the passing compliments of the occasion. We do indeed wish all our readers a Happy New Year, but it were more to the purpose perhaps, and more in accordance with the spirit of the times, to wish them a year of vigorous independent thought, and active usefulness. It is no longer a time for compliment or repose. The crisis of the ages seems to be rapidly approaching. The Gog and Magog of prophetic vision, already begin to appear upon the field, and men must soon decide, each one for himself, whether he will take part with truth or error, with right or wrong, and abide the issues of that decision.

Our last telegraph tells us that the issues of a great wrong are now culminating in Kansas. The Federal forces, have it seems charged upon Gen Lane, with the Kansas militia, and been repulsed, and an appeal for the consumation of that fraud is now made to arms. What the horrors of that conflict may be, none can tell; but one thing we do know, whether it result in the violent abolition of slavery throughout the United States or not, it will never result in the subjugation of the freemen of Kansas. With the present state of public sentiment upon that subject, there are not federal forces enough in the United States to do that.

President Buchanan may be right in thinking and saying, that this subject has too much occupied the attention of the American public, but whether it has or not, it is likely to occupy it still more before it will be disposed of, at least in that way.

The Nicaragua Question, together with the arrest of W. Walker, the great American bandit,—and which we for our part rejoice at, and believe to be right, is becoming every day more complicated, and is dividing the counsels of the dominant party in this nation.

A great financial brisis with its embarrassments is resting like an incubus upon the enterprise and commerce of the nation. Perplexity and doubt, and care, every where stare men in the face, and whether they turn to the right hand or to left, like Noah's dove, they find no place of rest,—nor over all the angry surface, does the olive branch of peace anywhere appear.

The war in India is far from disposed of, nor is it certain how much longer a crushed and oppressed nation of ignorant men, will be able to contend against injury and wrong, for their despoiled rights.

The Chinese war is but just begun.—The angel of Death still flaps his gory wing over the dense cities and plains of that devoted land.

The Mexican Republic is no more. A despotism as sudden, and as sure it may be as that of Louis Napoleon, has seized the reigns of government, and declaring Comonfort perpetual dictator, has crushed out the last hope and vestige of contributional liberty, from that unhappy republic.

Among the dead of 1857, all will remember Dr. E. K. Kane, of the Arctic Expedition. Hugh Miller the Geologist, and Dr. Ure, dear to science, Lieut. Strain, Admiral Beechy, Douglas Jerrold, Beranger, the poet, Eugene Sue, the novelist, Crawford the sculptor, Marcy Brooks and Rusk, Dobblin, Birney, Stevenson and McLane, among the politicians and statesmen. Neither should Bloomfield and Father Mathew, among the clergy be forgotten. With all these the duties and conflicts of life passed with the passing year. To us they yet remain 'for how long, there's none can tell.'

General News.

Washington, Jan. 1.

The Herald correspondent says: It seems settled that the Administration will defend Commodore Paulding.

Should Gen Walker attempt to leave he will be re-arrested. The Government designs prosecuting him, and a member of the Cabinet has ventured the opinion that he will be sent to the State prison.

On Tuesday or Wednesday next Mr. Pugh, of Ohio, will introduce into the Senate, a bill for the immediate admission of Kansas as a State, under the Lecompton Constitution. The bill will provide that the first Legislature of the State shall submit to the people whether the slavery clause shall be added to the constitution. Also, that the first, or any subsequent Legislature, may submit to the people whether they will call a convention, and alter the whole Constitution. This will meet with the approval of every Senator.

The despatches to the Post state that the Cabinet has, at last, taken ground that Walker is interrupting the Transit. The fire eaters are very much enraged thereat.

Toombs in the Senate and Quitman in the House, will offer motions on Monday, against the Cabinet policy, and defend Walker.

Gen. Scott arrived here last night. He is now closeted with the President and Secretary of War. Their deliberations are supposed to refer to the Utah expedition, and to the best means of reinforcing Col. Johnston's army.

Walker has formally demanded indemnification from the U. S Government for the outrage inflicted on the Territorial government of Nicaragua, in the extradition of her Dictator by Commodore Paulding.

Despatches to the Tribune state that the New York Democratic members are all for the Lecompton constitution, notwithstanding the slavery clause.

Mr. Stephens, of Georgia, chairman of the committee on Territories, means to report Kansas and Minnesota in one bill, and try to drive it through by the previous question, without going into the committee of the whole.

Washington, Jan. 3.

The Times correspondent from Washington says: Mr. Pugh intends, to-morrow, to give notice of a bill for the pacification of Kansas; providing for her admission as a State, under the Lecompton Constitution. That after the act passed the President shall certify the fact to the two federal judges and the Supreme Court of Kansas, who shall thereupon issue a proclamation for the election of a Legislature on the 7th of April next, and that this Legislature, when convened, shall submit the slavery question fairly, to a vote of the people. The bill will also reduce the boundary of the Territory.

The filibusterers on board the Saratoga at Norfolk positively refuse to go ashore unless they are put off by force. They say they are penniless and helpless, and demand to be returned to Nicaragua, the home of their adoption. The President says it is out of the question to return the fillibusters to Nicaragua. The only possibility for them is in pecuniary indemnity which will be urged. Gen. Walker will not go west for several days.

Gen Lamar, the new minister to Nicaragua, has gone to N. Y. to take passage on the California steamer.

Gen. Walker estimates his losses by by the seizures of Davis and Paulding at $240,000.

Gen Houston intended to announce the death of Mr. Rust, to-morrow, but owing to severe hoarseness, he has postponed it till Tuesday.

Albany, Jan 7.

The report of the Bank Superintendent makes the following recommendations:

First—Allow no mortgages to be taken hereafter as security for circulating notes.

Second—Compel every incorporated Bank to gradually replace its present circulation by notes secured in the same manner as free bank notes.

Third—Compel all the banks located in the city of New York to keep 20 per cent of their average weekly deposits of all descriptions, in coin. Special deposits of coin not to form part of the statement, and every bank out of that city to keep 20 per cent. equally average of its deposits, either in coin or in balance to its credit, in some solvent bank in the cities of New York, Brooklyn, Albany or Troy.

Fourth—Allow every banking association or individual banker, to continue the business of banking, upon the deposit of $50,000 in stock of the U. S., or State of New York. But if bonds and mortgages are to be received as at present, Superintendent respectfully recommends the enactment of the acts of 1840 and 1844, relative to bank capital, in such language as shall place their construction beyond the reach of Judicial decisions.

St Louis, Jan. 6.

St. Joseph papers of the 29th state that an express passed through that place with despatches from Leavenworth, bringing intelligence that a superior force of Mormons had overpowered Col. Cook's command while passing from Ham's Fork to Fort Bridger, butchering 200, and taking and killing a number of prisoners and hanging all the officers who fell into their hands. The report is doubtless false or greatly exaggerated.

Washington, Dec. 4th.

The St. Louis Reporter of yesterday says that the passengers report that on Friday, the 25th ult., news reached Leavenworth of the engagement of the troops encamped at Sugar Mound and the dragoons. The officers ordered Lane to surrender, but he refused. The dragoons charged, but were repulsed with the loss of three of their number. They then retired, and sent to Denver for reinforcements. Denver ordered three companies of dragoons to the seat of war.

It is expected that there will be bloody work.

As soon as the news of the engagement was received, the people commenced organizing and hurried to assist Lane.

It is expected that before the dragoons arrived Lane will be reinforced by 2500 men.

Intense excitement prevails. The people of Lawrence are preparing to take the field.

Calhoun has fled from the Territory.

The new city government of New York was inaugerated yesterday. Ald. Clay was chosen President of the Board of Aldermen, and T. R. Valentine, Clerk.—C. H. Haswell, President of the Counsel, and Charles T McClenhan, Clerk.

The statements of the Banks is very encouraging.

At Washington the following matters were introduced into the Senate. A resolution by Jeff. Davis in regard to dropped and retired naval officers; by Mr Fessenden, a French Spoilation bill; by Mr. Fitspaterick a request for information from the President as to the orders of naval forces on the coast of Nicaragua and concerning Walker's arrest; by Mr Pugh a bill to provide for the admission of Kansas into the Union. The bill was referred to the committee on Territories. Mr. Pugh stated that he offered the bill as a compromise, and explained its provisions as follows: It provides for the admission of Kansas into the Union, under the Lecompton Constitution, with the same boundaries as were defined by the bill of the last Congress.

It also requires that the seventh article of the Constitution relative to slavery, shall be submitted to the direct vote of the qualified electors on the 7th of April next, and that the return of this election shall be made to the Governor of the Territories instead of the President of the Convention. States that the election shall be conducted in obedience to the laws in force on the 7th of Nov. last.

It also provides, that the Constitution shall not be so construed as to limit or impair the right of the people to (at any time) call a Convention for the purpose of altering, amending or abolishing their form of Government, subject to the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. Benjamin submitted a resolution that twenty thousand copies of the Dred Scott decision be printed for the use of the Senate. Mr. Brown commenced a pro-Lecompton speech which was to be continued to day.

In the House, Clingman of the Committee on Foreign affairs, offered a resolution of the same tenor of that offered in the Senate, desiring information of the President in regard to the arrest of Walker, Jones of Tenn., wished it modified so as to call for information in regard to the fitting out of Walkers Expedition in this country. The rules were suspended and the resolution read, by a vote of 117 to 47, and after debate and amendment passed. A resolution offered by Mr Kelsey was passed, asking the President whether Nicaragua had made any complaint on the account of Com. Paulding's seizure of Walker and his band. John Cochrane introduced a bill to establish the collection-districts ect., which was referred to the Committee on commerce.

The following bills and resolutions were also introduced. By Mr. Keitt a bill for organizing a regiment of mounted volunteers for the Texan position; by Mr. Cobb a resolution which was adopted, directing the Com on Territories to report whether the organic act of Utah ought to be repealed and that territory attached to some one adjoining, by Mr. Quitman's leave was desired to introduce a bill to repeal parts of the neutrality laws—objected to by Mr. Gow; by Mr Zollicoffer a bill for a branch military seomdy at the Hermitage, Tenn; Smith, of Illinois, moved a committee of five to enquire into the Fort Snelling swinele, with power to send for persons and papers; Blair of Mo. introduced a bill allowing the mail Contractors to carry the mail from the Mississippi river to San Francisco by any route they might choose. A bill to abolish the Court of Claims was introduced by Mr. Greenwood. Mr. Morrill introduced a bill to punish the practice of Polygamy in the Territories and a large number of minor bills and resolutions were presented.

"See what I am!" not "See what my father was!" is an old and excellent Arabic saying.

DEAFNESS CURED.—The best remedy for deafness ever offered to the public, is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT. Many cases of several years standing have been quickly and entirely cured by it; and thousands of recent cases caused by colds or obstructions of the ear chambers, have yielded to one or two applications. Full directions for use accompany each bottle. One of the most remarkable cures was at the Hartford Deaf and Dumb Asylum. A boy, 15 years of age, named Benjamin Crawford, who had been born deaf, and was consequently dumb, was sent there for education; and, as an experiment, the Liniment was tried on him, and with the most complete success. He now hears as well as any one, and is rapidly learning to talk. The Liniment is for sale at all Drug stores.

THE

NEW YORK LEDGER

FOR 1858!

THE BEST FAMILY PAPER IN THE WORLD!

All the Favorite Writers retained, and New ones added.

Still Greater Attractions for the New Year.

The circulation of THE NEW YORK LEDGER is now Three Hundred and Thousand Copies, which is greater than of any TEN other Literary Papers in America.

The profits on this unparalleled circulation enable the proprietor of THE LEDGER to expend sums upon it which would swamp any ordinary publication.

A paper with a circulation of only a hundred thousand or so would vine under the expenses of THE LEDGER to-day. Each of the old 4 favorite

Some letters will come write for THE LEDGER hereafter.

No expense will be spared to secure others who shall be considered entitled to add to THE WORLD'S extra fame and usefulness. Mr. EDMUND E. NORTH writes only for THE NEW YORK LEDGER.

GEORGE D. PRENTICE, JOHN G. SAXE, and other best writers, come to THE NEW YORK LEDGER.

THE LEDGER is the POLITE LITERARY ORGINAL ILLUSTRATED TALES ESSAYS POEMS SKETCHES, BIOGRAPHY, &c.

THE LEDGER is every where acknowledged to be the best family paper in the world—never extraordinary and unbounded popularity.

The Proprietor of the LEDGER employs the best talent and by so doing secures the best paper in the country.

THE NEW YORK LEDGER is printed on beautiful white paper and is of eight pages of forty columns each—which is the largest and handsomest weekly in the Union. It is published every Saturd'y and sent by the news agents to every city and town throughout the country, and is mailed to subscribers at $2 per year; two copies are sent for $3; and any person obtaining four subscribers at $2 each, will be entitled to one copy free. Terms invariably in advance. Address all letters to

ROBERT BONNER,
Publisher of the
NEW YORK LEDGER,
44 Ann street New York.

N. B.—Now is a good time to subscribe, as Mrs SOUTH-WORTH'S new story of THE BRIDE OF AN HOUR will be commenced in the LEDGER on the first January.

N. B. No 2.—We want Agents authorized to receive subscriptions for THE LEDGER. Subscribers may remit direct to us if they wish, but we do not send or pay any money to Agents.

A high moral tone characterizes every article in THE LEDGER. In fact, the names of its leading contributors are a sufficient guarantee that it will form a marked contrast to a class of weekly publications which have for so long a time flooded the country, and unfortunately for the morals of our people, are not yet extinct.

SQUATTER SOVEREIGN.—We are indebted to Mr. W. L. Gilman of Kansas, formerly of this place for a copy of this paper, Published at Atchison Kansas Territory, by O. F. Short Esq., at $2.00 per annum.

Mr. Gilman, who will spend a short time at his father's (Jeremiah Gilman Esq.,) in this village, is agent for the paper and will be happy to receive subscriptons from all who may desire to secure to themselves authentic information directly from that Territory.

Silas L. Force

We received a few days since a lithograph circular, purporting to come from an advertising agency by the above name, with orders to publish an inclosed advertisment, and send bill stating 'the lowest possible commission' we could afford, &c. Reference was given to the 'Tribune,' 'News' and 'Nassau Bank' of New York.—We addressed a note to the former, and here is the reply. The Tribune has also given notice of the fraud. Some publishers may already have been duped:

Office of 'The Tribune'
New York, Dec. 21, 1857.

Mr. Lewis, Dear Sir:—Yours of the 19th inst is received. We do not know any such person as Silas Force. The use of our name as reference is entirely unauthorized and we do not believe any such agency exists.

Very Respectfully
HORACE GREELY & Co.

☞THE NEW YORK LEDGER, the great Family Paper, has attained the extraordinary circulation of Three Hundred and Thirty Thousand copies. The Prospectus of The Ledger which contains all necessary information in regard to it, will be found in our advertising columns.

☞Guy Foote, Esq., President of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Bank, was found dead in his bed, at the Exchange in Detroit, on Thursday morning last.—His wife was absent on a visit to this city, at the time of his death His remains were brought to Jackson, and the funeral, which was largely attended, took place at the Episcopal Church on last Sabbath afternoon.—Jackson Patriot.

☞We understand that the Railroad excursion, over the Branch Road from Jackson to Toledo, is deferred until Thursday of next week. Tickets of invitation will be sent to the favored ones. We understand that the State Officers, members of the Legislature, and the Mayor and Aldermen of Jackson will be invited.

We learn from the Utica papers that the proprietors of the factories at the New York Mills have determined to resume work, in part, within a week or two. This will afford employment to a large number thrown out of work.

DR W. P. Wagner, Dear Sir It is now but one month since you adjusted on my enfeebled body, one of Dr. Banning's Braces, for the relief, and final cure of Bleeding Lungs; yet my experience in use of this truly wonderful Body and shoulder Brace, is so gratifying to me that I deem it important to inform you of the fact, and through you, to all whom it may concern, those like afflicted with myself. Particulars I will not stop to give but simply state that I have observed your instructions given with the Brace, that my lungs have not bled since, nor do I feel such apprehensions of bleeding as constantly annoyed me for years before My general health is much improved; dyspeptic symptoms are gone; I have greater muscular energy, and weigh more than I have in six years past. Wishing you every success in thus relieving the ills of suffering humanity, I remain very truly, &c.

C D Y ALEXANDER.

The most skeptical people can be convinced by trial that all the family medicines are not humbug, and that among the thousand of butterfly like there are a few of great merit, and undoubted worth. Of these, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver-Remedy stands first and foremost among the remedies of the day that can be relied on as a medicine that is all that is reccommended by its proprietors.

It advertises itself on every trial, for there are none who use it but tell their friends to do so, and so it goes from mouth to mouth till all the people of the Union have learned the good of this truly valuable medicine It is recommended with testimonials to prove its virtue for the cure of liver complaints of every kind, from the worst Dyspepsia to a common headache, and is particularly adapted to Jaundice, Deranged Stomach, Bowel Complaints and diseases of children

One or two doses are said to cure a cold with scarce a failure It is worth a trial for this alone. It is prticularly adapted to use of ladies, particularly those of sedentary habits. Some ladies of the highest standing in society have given their certificates of its efficacy, and we say to all who are ailing, try one bottle, and you will never be without it.

The Luxuries of a Fruit Garden.

A friend of ours in whose reliability we have implicit confidence has a small plot of ground, of which he tells us the following facts:

From a row of currant bushes, about eight rods long, he and his neighbors gathered about two bushels of currants, from the first picking to the last, was from June to Augnst 15, two and a half months.

From a row of gooseberry bushes two rods long, he gathered about a bushel of gooseberries.

From a plat of strawberries four rods long and one rod wide, he gathered nearly three bushels of strawberries. The strawberry season lasted about three weeks, ending about the middle of July.

Then his raspberries lasted about three weeks. Of these he had about half a bushel. They stood next to the strawberries in point of delicacy

He has a number of cherry trees.—They yeilded well this year. His family and friends used a bushel or so, and the children of the neighborhood fed themselves upon them, with stint, for two weeks.

Soon after the raspberries were gone, his peaches began to ripen.—One of the trees ripened its fruit late, and it has lasted within a short time past; of these he has had two or more bushsels.

All along, since the first of August his apples and pears have been ripening, and have furnished an abundant supply for his family, for the cow, and pig, and some to sell or give away besides. He will have a large quantity of excellent winter apples. He had just gathered from two or three grape vines as many bushels of fine grapes. Some of these his wife made into marmalade, and some she has preserved in paper, for use hereafter.—The best or greater portion of the whole were eaten at desert, or given to children or friends, all of whom enjoyed them much.

These are some of the enjoyments drawn from a small plat of ground, during the season just closing. They were at small cost, but they sweetened many a meal, ministered to health, and added to the comfort of many guests.

Why may not nearly exery man have a plat of ground and as many comforts? Simply because he is negligent.—Ohio Farmer.

Michigan Coal.

We are favored by Doct. J. ... with the following analysis of ... coal, which may be regarded as entirely reliable. It was made by ... the first English chemists, and ... shows how, by the very ... incombustible qualities, (ash and sulphur,) and the very large proportion of carbon that it stands extremely high as fuel:

7 Quality Court, Chancery Lane
London, 19th August, 1857.

Benjamin Fothergill, Esq., C E.
Manchester,

Sir:—The specimen of coal which you left with me on the 11th inst., marked 'Coal from Michigan, U. S. A and addressed to you, I have submitted to perfect examination and analysis and the results I beg leave to lay before you.

The coal is of a dull appearance and is not broken easil... Its specific gravity is high, being 1274 (water being taken as 1000.) In the bulk it appears a nonbituminous coal, but when reduced to a fine state of powder, to which state it must be brought for the purpose of analysis, it exhibits a decidedly brown tint, which is an indication of its bituminous nature.

One hundred parts of the coal gave an analysis as follows:

Carbon	80,301
Hydrogen	7,773
Oxygen	0,649
Nitrogen	1,475
Sulphur	3,031
Moisture	1,660
Ash	5,111
	100,000

One pound weihgt of the coal was found to be capable of evaporating off water at 212° Fahrenheit, 13,01 lbs and the same weight of coal was estimated to reduce to the metallic state 30,99 lbs of lead from the oxide of that metal.

From the foregoing analysis it will be seen that this coal although not equal to the generality of coals in this country, is still capable of being used for locomtive purposes and with much greater advantage than if previously made into coke. Its calorific value in proportion to Ramsey's coking coal, Newcastle, a first class coal, is as 0,835 to 1,000.

I am dear sir, your obd't serv't,
(signed) DUGALD CAMPBELL,
Analytical Chemist to the Brompton Hospital.

Curious Trees in Cuba.

The editor of the Horticulturist, who is a professor of Botany spent the last winter in Cuba, where he found many trees and plants very different from anything in this county, some of which are very curious in their habits; one of the most so is the clusea rosea et alva, commonly called copey and another of almost indentical habits, called jacquey; both parasites.—The seeds being deposited by birds in the forks of trees, vegetate there and send down small fibrous roots along the trunk till they reach the ground however distant, and these roots continue increasing until the whole body is enveloped, the roots uniting where they come in contact, until they finally form an enveloping case, with the bole of the old tree for the heart, which is killed by its parasite. a new top is formed, and there stands a lofty tree, which is eight or nine yards in diameter at the bottom. It is described as a beautiful and delightful shade tree. The wood is of no value—the juice so glutinous that it serves as birdlime. The flamentous roots are said to be remarkably strong and the branches bear a beautiful flower and singular shaped fruit. It is suggested that the resinous gum exuding might be used in book binding since it is proof against all insects. This singular tree is most commonly found attaching itself to the cebia tree, which grows very large and tall. It also attaches to precipices and walls of deserted houses, and completely envel... walls

...—Let we wish to ... larger Scottish lakes, and yet how many thousand steam engines has it set in motion—how many railway trains has it propelled across the country—how many thousand wagon loads of salt has it elaborated from the brine how many millions of tons of iron has it furnished, raised to the surface, smeltered and hamered! It has made Birmingham a great city, the first iron depot of Europe, and filled the country with crowded towns and busy villages.—And if one small field has done so much, what may we not expect from those vast basins laid down by Lyell in the geological map of the United States!

Does Hair turn to Snakes?—This subject is being discussed by several correspondents of the N. E. Farmer by both beleivers and non-beleivers of theory. In the last number a writer thus relates how a young lady's hair turned to snakes:—"I was visiting a friend, and when we dressed our heads, we wound the loose hair round our fingers and threw it out of the window; my friend's hair was light mine black. Near the window there was a tub set for rain water; I went to it one day and found several rolls of the hair in motion, and trying to seperate themselves; three of them were light, and four black. The boys in this vicinity this season have taken horses' hairs and produced the same result. Now if 'L. W. M.' of North Dana. will set water in the sun ... July or August, and take a few spears of hair from some young laday's head and put them in it, if they don't produce motion I will do it for him.

Patent Medicines.

ONE DOLLAR

WILL BUY

ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public, namely DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REMEDY, that acts as a Cathartic, easier, milder and more effectual than any other medicine known. Up to the present day a Cathartic but a Liver remedy, or a Liver remedy a Cathartic but a Liver remedy, or one that acts on the Liver to clear its morbid matter, the first on the Liver to clear its morbid matter, the first on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter. This accomplishing two purposes at once, and that without any of the painful feeling experienced in the operations of most cathartics. It throughly cleans the system of the morbid matter, that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects

Though possessing rare medical powers, these Gums have been but little known to Physicians and never used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the Invigorator which met with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known in its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure Liver Complaints in their worst forms

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver, and as a proof that the Invigorator relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses on retiring and it assists nature in her operations By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work as regularly as clock work

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the Invigorator, which corrects all acidity and sourness of the stomach

For an over-loaded stomach it has no equal as it relieves all oppression or uneasy feeling after eating heartily For a FAMILY MEDICINE generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints and all diseases arising from a Diseased Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it and now conviction leaves no doubt in our mind as to its great merits. We have given it to Dyspeptics for it made a complete cure before the first bottle was taken and now can eat anything edible without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain Now what we want to say to all our readers is, if Liver Complaints or Dyspepsia trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.—State Fact

We take infinite pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty and thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of diseases incident to children as DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR; nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it for it acts as a cathartic equally mild and gently and so we use it to renovate the system so thoroughly that we think we are doing a service to all in advising them where they need medicine to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where great benefit has been received in diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels where all other remedies failed to give relief. It had become so useful in our family that we will not be without it.—Jacksonville, Ala. Republican.

AYER'S

Cathartic Pills,

(SUGAR COATED,)

ARE MADE TO

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK.

Invalids, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Effects, and Judge of their Virtues.

FOR THE CURE OF

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach,

Pittsburgh, Pa. May 1, 1854.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to me that a few doses will they cleanse at once. If they will cure others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. FERRIL,
Clerk of Steamer Cora.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
WASHINGTON, D. C., 1 Feb., 1854.

Sir: I have used your Pills in my practice and believe my practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of biliousness so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M.D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

POST OFFICE, HARYLAND, Liv. Co., Miss., Nov. 14, 1853.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months. Was off to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. She then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her, by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad, and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, which others around us paid from five to twenty dollars doctor bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

Dr. Ayer: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends.

Yours,

J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, WYOMING CO., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1853.

Dear Sir: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M.D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1854.

Dr. Ayer: Your Pills are the most perfect cathartic of all that great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of obstinate sores upon her hands and feet that had been incurable for years. Her mother has been long afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 5, 1854.

Honored Sir: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not request use of your name. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were rapid, but sure. By perseverance in the use of them I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, BATON ROUGE, La., 5 Dec., 1853.

Dr. Ayer: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are a excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammations, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, though a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town, and almost every hamlet in America or States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few families in any civilized country this continent, but some personal experience of its effects; and A very few communities any where which have not among some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and grievous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the maladies to which their children are daily exposed. We have abundant grounds upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds for believing the CHERRY PECTORAL saves more lives by the consumptions it prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable; and neglect them until no human skill can master the insidious ranker that, fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and they know the virtues of this remedy. We need not more than to assure them it is still made the best that can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who require it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.

The Bride of an Evening.

BY EMMA D. E. N. SOUTHWORTH,

CHAPTER I.

THE ASTROLOGER'S PREDICTION.

Reading, a few weeks since, one of De Quincey's papers—"Three Memorable Murders,"—recalled to my mind the strange circumstances of one of the most mysterious domestic dramas that ever taxed the ingenuity of man, or required the flight of time to develop.

The locality of our story lies amid one of the wildest and most picturesqe regions of the Old Dominion, where the head waters of the Rappahannock wash the base of the Blue Ridge.

The precise spot—Crossland—is a sublime and beautiful scene; where two forest-crowned ranges of mountains cross each other at oblique angles.

At the intersecting point of these ridges nestles a little hamlet, named, from its elevated position, Altamont.

At the period at which our story opens the four estates, in the four angles of the irregular mountain cross, were owned as follows:

The eastern farm, called Piedmont, was the life property of Madame Auderly, a Virginian lady of the old school.

The western and most valuable estate was the inheritance of Honora Paule, an orphan heiress, grand daughter and ward of Madame Auderly.

The northern and smallest one, called, from being the deepest vale of the four—Hawe's Hole—was the property of old Hugh Hawe, a widower of gloomy temper, parsimonious habits, and almost fabulous wealth.

The southern farm—named, from the extravagant cost of the elegant mansion-house, elaborate out-buildings, and highly ornamented grounds, which had absorbed the means of the late owner, "Farquier's Folly"—was the heavily-mortgaged patrimony of Godfrey Farquier Dulanie, the grandson of Hugh Hawe, and now a young aspirant for legal honors at the University of Virginia.

But little benefit to the heir was to be hoped from the inheritance of his father's burthened property. In the first place, old Hugh Hawe had bought up in his own name all the claims against the estate of Farquier's Folly—doubtless to prevent a foreclosure, and to save the property for his grandson.

But, unhappily, Godfrey had mortally offended the despotic old man by declining an agricultural life, and persisting in the study of a profession—a course that had resulted in his own disinheritance.

To make this punishment more bitter to his grandson, the old man had taken into favor his nephew, Dr. Henry Hawe, whom he had established near himself at Farquier's Folly.

At this time, the disinherited heir, having finished a term at the University, had come down to spend a part of his vacation in his native place.

It was upon the Saturday evening of his arrival that he found the little hotel, and, indeed, the whole village of Altamont, in a great state of excitement, from the fact that the celebrated heiress, Miss Honora Paule, had just stopped there, and passed through on her way home.

Those who had been so happy as to catch a glimpse of her face, vied with each other in praise of her many charms, while those who had not, listened with eagerness, and looked forward to indemnifying themselves by seeing her at church the next morning.

The next day, Godfrey Dulanie attended church, where he saw and fell in love with the most beautiful and intellectual-looking girl he had ever beheld. From the cheapness and simplicity of her attire, he supposed her to be some poor dependent of Madame Auderly's, in whose pew she sat. Godfrey was completely captivated, and he resolved at once to woo, and, if possible, win this lovely being for his wife, poor girl though he was. He was glad she was poor, because she could for that reason be more easily won. But on accompanying, Mr. Willoughby, the clergyman, and his brother in law, Ernest Heine, home after church, what was his astonishment and dismay at being introduced to the supposed "poor girl," whom he found to be no other than the celebrated Miss Honora Paule, the greatest heiress and belle, as well as the best and noblest girl, in the State of Virginia. She greeted him cordially, and in a few minutes the company were loyally engaged in conversation. The topic of capital punishment having been started, Godfrey turned to Honora, and said:

"I take an especial personal interest in having capital punishment abolished—Miss Paule, do you believe in astrology?"

Honora rested, fixed her eyes intently upon the questioner, and then withdrawing them answered—

"Sir, why do you ask me if I believe in astrology?"

"Because, Miss Paule, I was about to relate for your amusement a prediction that was made concerning myself, by a professor of that black art."

"A prediction," exclaimed Mrs. Willoughby, drawing near with eager interest.

"Yes, madam," replied Mr. Dulanie, smiling, "a prediction which, if I believed, would certainly dispose me to favor the abolishment of death penalty. Three year since, while I was sojourning for a short time in the city of Richmond, on my way to the University, I chanced to hear of the Egyptian Dervis, Achbad, who was at that time creating quite a sensation in the city. His wonderful reputation was the theme of every tongue.

"Idleness and curiosity combined to lead me to his rooms. He required a night to cast my horoscope. He demanded, and I gave him, the day and hour of my birth, and then I took leave, with the promise to return in the morning. The next day I went—"

"Well?" questioned Honora, earnestly.

"My horoscope was a horor-scope indeed! It predicted for me—a short and stormy life, and sudden death."

"Good Heaven! But—the details?"

"It prophesied four remarkable events, the first of which has already come to pass."

"And that was—?"

"The loss of my patrimonial estate!"

"Singular coincidence!" interrupted Mr. Willoughby, as he rose and joined his wife and brother-in-law at the other end of the room.

"I thought so when the prophesy was fulfilled," replied Godfrey.

"And the other three events?" softly inquired Honora.

"The other three events, if they follow as predicted, must happen within the next two years, or before I reach my twenty-fifth anniversary. The first of these is to be the unexpected inheritance of vast wealth."

Upon hearing this, a bright smile played around the lips of Honora, and banished the clouds from her brow. She waited a few minutes for him to proceed, but finding that he continued silent, she said—

"Well, Mr. Dulanie, go on! what was the third predicted event?"

"Do you command me to inform you?"

"No, sir; I beg you, of your courtesy, to do so."

"Very well," he said, dropping his voice to a low undertone, "It was to be my marriage with the woman I should worship."

A deep vivid blush supplanted the bright smile that quivered over Honora's variable face. There was a pause, broken at length by her voice, as she gently inquired—

"And the fourth?"

The answer came reluctantly, and in tones so low as to meet only her ear.

"The fourth and last prediction was, that before my twenty-fifth birth-day I should perish on the scaffold."

A low cry broke from the lips of Honora as her hands flew up and covered her face.—After a minute or two she dropped them, and looking him steadily in the face, said with quiet firmness—

"You doubtless wonder at my emotion.—Now hear me. On the autumn following the summer in which the prediction was made to you, I was at Baltimore with my grandmother, and Mrs. Willoughby, who was then Miss Heine. Curiosity took us to the rooms of the Egyptian, who was then practicing in that city. And after some such preparations as he used in your case, he cast my horoscope and read my future. It was this, that before my twentieth birthday, I should be a bride, but never a wife, for that the fatal form of the scaffold arose between the nuptual benediction and the bridal chamber. Such were the words of the prophecy." She spoke with a solemnity that seemed to overshadow every other felling.

CHAPTER II.

THE SYBIL'S CIRCLE.

The next day, Honora informed her grandmother, Madame Auderly, of Godfrey's presence in the neighborhood, and the old lady sent her only brother, Colonel Shangun, to fetch him to Piedmont. Godfrey accepted the invitation. On his arrival, he found that General Sterne, the governor elect of Virginia, and his son, had just taken up their quarters, for several days, with Madame Auderly; and the old lady, in his honor, at once sent off cards of invitation to some of the neighbors to visit her that evening.

When tea was over, the company adjourned to the drawing room, where, soon after, the guests for the evening joined them.

First came Father O'Louherty the parish priest of St. Andrew's Church, at Crossland. The next arrivals were Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby, and Mr. Heine.

Immediately after them came Dr. and Mrs. Henry Hawe—the doctor, a man of great fashion and elegance, the lady, a delicate, pensive woman, with a sort of sad, moonlight face, beaming softly out between her fleecy locks of jet.

And, last of all, to the astonishment of everybody, came old Hugh Hawe, who had been invited as a matter of courtesy, and was not in the least degree expected to make his appearance.

He came not alone. On his arm he brought a young girl, unenvied, but whom, with grave courtesy, he presented to his hostess as Agnes Darke, the daughter of a deceased friend, and now his ward, who had arrived only that morning, and whom, presuming on Madame Auderly's well known kindness, he had ventured to present to her.

Madame Auderly, a reader of faces, was certainly attracted towards her; and, after a little talk, that confirmed her first favourable impressions, she took the hand of the orphan girl, and conducted her to the group formed by the Misses Auderly, Mr Sterne, Mr. Heine, Mr. Dulanie, and Honora Paule.

Under the auspices of Miss Rose Auderly, they were just about to form what she called a Sybil's Circle, for which purpose, Messrs. Heine and Sterne were dispatched to bring forward a round table. Miss Rose went to a cabinet to seek the "Sybil's Leaves," which she presently produced. All then seated themselves around the table.

A dead silence reigned. Rose shuffled the cards, turned them with their faces down, and then, addressing her right-hand neighbor, Mr. Sterne, in a low voice, she demanded—

"What would you with the Sybil?"

"I would know the future partner of my life," was the formal answer.

"Draw!"

The young man hesitated for a while, smiled, and, rejecting all those cards that were nearest himself, put his hand under the pack, and withdrew the lowest one.

"Read!" he said, extending the card to the Sybil.

"Hear!" she exclaimed—

"A widow, beautiful as light,
Fain to woo her lot to wed—
With a rich jointure, which shall rent
Its blessings on your head."

There was a general clapping of hands and shouts of laughter.

It was now Miss Jessie's turn to test her fate. Being a young lady, she would not put the question in the usual form, but merely inquired what should be her future fate.—The answer drawn was—

"To dandle fools and chronicle small beer."

A reply that early extinguished Miss Jessie for the evening.

"I declare, if here is not Mr. Hugh Hawe!" exclaimed the lively Lily, as the old miser sauntered deliberately to the table, and stood looking with indolent curiosity upon the game of the young people. "Come, Mr. Hawe! I declare, you shall have your fortune told!"

"Well, well—the commands of young ladies are not to be disobeyed," replied the old man, gallantly, as he extended his hand and drew a card, which he passed to the Sybil.

Amid a profound silence, and in a solemn voice, she read—

"Thy fate looms full of horror! From false friends,
Near at hand perdition threatens thee—
A fearful sign stands in thy house of life—
An enemy—a fiend lurks close behind
The radiance of thy planet.—Be warned!"

"Pshaw? what serious mockery!" exclaimed the old man, scornfully, as he turned away, and gave place to his nephew, who had all the while been posted behind him, peeping over his shoulder.

"Will you permit me to test my fortune?" inquired the "fascinating" Dr Hawe.

"And what would you with the Sybil?" was the response.

"I would know the future."

"Draw!" said the Sybil, in a tone of assumed sternness.

Smiling his graceful but most sinister smile, the doctor drew a card, and passed it to the reader.

"Hear!" said the latter, lifting the tablet of fate, and reading—

"I know thee!—then fearest the solemn night!
With her piercing stars and her deep dark midnight!
There's a tone in her voice thou fain wouldst shun.
For it asks what the secret soul hath done!
And though there's a weight on thine—away!—
Back to thy home and pray!"

"Look! I declare how pale the doctor has grown!" exclaimed the flippant Jessie. "One would really think, to look at him, that 'a deep remorse for some unacted crime' preyed on him."

"Nonsense! Jugglery!" said the latter, turning away to conceal his agitation.

The eyes of Honora Paule followed him with thee deepest interest—there was that upon his brow that she had never seen before.

The next in turn was Agnes. Turning to her, Rose said:

"What seek you in the magic circle lady?"

"My destiny," answered the lucious tones.

"Invoke the knowledge!"

Agnes drew a tablet, and passed it, as usual, to the Sybil, who read—

"Oh, ask me not speak thy fate!
Oh, tempt me not to tell!
The doom shall make thee desolate,
The wrong thou sins not, shall avail!
Away! away!—for death would be
Even as a mercy to thee!"

Agnes shuddered, and covered her face with her hands.

"Put up the tablets! They are growing fatal!" said Rose.

"Not for the world!—now that each word is fate! There is a couple yet to be disposed of! Miss Paule, draw near!" said Mr Heine.

The cheek of Honora Paul changed; yet striving with a feeling that she felt to be unworthy, she smiled, reached forth her hand, drew a tablet, and passed it to the Sybil, who in an effective voice, read—

"But how is this? A dream is on my soul!
I see a bride—all crowned with flowers, and smiling
As in delightful visions, on the brink
Of dread chasm—and thou art she!"

Honora heard in silence, remembering the strange correspondence of these lines with the prediction of the astrologer, made long ago, endeavoring to convince herself that it was mere coincidence, and vainly trying to subdue the foreboding of her heart.

"Mr. Dulane!" said Rose, shuffling the tablets, and passing them to him.

He drew a card, and returned it to be perused.

The Sybil took it, and a thrill of superstitious terror shook her frame as she read—

"And thou art she!"

An irrepressible low cry broke from the pallid lips of Honora. "Throw up the cards!" she said. "It is wicked, this tampering with the mysteries of the future!"

The above is an extract from the first of Mrs. Southworth's great story, which is now being published in the New York Ledger. We give this as a sample; but this only the opening of this most interesting, fascinating, and beautiful tale—the balance of it can only be found in the New York Ledger, the great family paper, for which the most popular writers in the country contribute, and which can be found at all the stores throughout the city and country, where papers are sold. Remember and ask for the New York Ledger of January 16, and in it you will get the continuation of the story from where it leaves off here. If you cannot get a copy from any news office, the publisher of the Ledger will mail you a copy on the receipt of five cents.

The Ledger is printed, to subscribers, at $2 a year, or two copies for $3. Address your letters to Robert Bonner, publisher, 44 Ann st. New York. It is the handsomest and best family paper in the country, elegantly illustrated, and characterized by a high moral tone.

The story is, of itself alone, worth the price the Ledger. To peruse the history of the lovely heroine, Miss Paule—how she came a bride for only an evening, and all the strange, and absorbing particulars connected therewith, will be a treat for all who take the trouble to get the Ledger.

Heaven.

"No sickness there!
No weary wasting of the frame away,
No fearful shrinking from the midnight air,
No dread of summer's bright and fervid ray.

"No hidden grief,
No wild and cheerless vision of despair,
No vain petition for a swift relief,
No tearful eye, no broken hearts are there.

"Care has no home
Within that realm of ceaseless praise and song;
Its tossing billows break and melt in foam
Far from the mansions of the spirit throng.

"The storm's black wing
Is never spread athwart celestial skies!
Its wailing blends not with the voice of spring
As some too tender floweret fades and dies.

"No night distils
Its chilling dew upon the tender frame,
No moon is needed there! The light which fills
That land of glory, from its Maker came.

"No parted friends
Our mournful recollections have to weep,
No bed of death enduring love attends,
To watch the coming of a pulseless sleep.

"No blighted flower
Or withered bud celestial gardens know!
No scorching blast or fierce descending shower
Scatters destruction, like a ruthless foe!

"No little word
Startles the sacred host with fear and dread!
The song of peace, creation's morning heard,
Is sung wherever angel minstrels tread!

"Let us depart,
If home like this await the weary soul!
Look up, then stricken one! thy wounded heart
Shall bleed no more at sorrow's stern control.

"With Faith our guide,
White robed and innocent, to trace the way,
Why fear to plunge in Jordan's rolling tide
And find the ocean of eternal day?"

Richard Hoffman.

A TALE OF LOVE AND RETRIBUTION.

Rachel Bentley, the lovely daughter of one of the richest merchants of London, having married George Hoffman, one of her father's clerks, during the old man's absence in India, he on his return disinherited her and discharged George. The latter being overwhelmed by disappointment took to drink, and in a few years became an habitual drunkard; his wife supporting herself and two children—Richard, now a fine boy in his thirteenth year and Mary, a sweet child of six—by selling, one after another, the remnants of her once costly wardrobe and jewelry.

On the last day of December of the year in which our story opens, Rachel was without food, light or fire, and that very day the rent must be paid.

Little Mary was moaning for bread, and crying with cold.

The drunken father was at the dram shop.

The agonized mother had but one more article of value left—a locket containing a lock of her father's hair. She had hoped to be able to save this, the last memento of her once happy home. But goaded by little Mary's cries for food she seized the locket, rushed off to a pawnbroker's, obtained a few shillings, put by the amount of the rent and with the rest purchased a little bread and milk for her children, and then set out, with them to visit the old confidential clerk of her father, Peter Maugles who had ever been kind to her, to consult him about sending Richard away from the contaminating influences with which he was surrounded.

On returning home late on New Year's eve from her fruitless visit, for the old clerk was not at home, Rachel discovered that her husband had been home and stolen the sum she had put by for the rent from the place where she had concealed it and gone off again to 'The Crown and Magpie' tavern to spend it in drunkenness. Little Mary, chilled and hungry, began to cry for food, and the suffering mother, in hopes of regaining a portion of the money taken by her husband, set out with her children to the haunt of vice whither Geo. Hoffman had gone.

There was a great crowd at the bar of 'The Crown and Magpie.' The landlady—a stout vulgar looking woman, with red ribbons in her cap, a profusion of false curls, a heavy gold chain round her neck and numerous rings on her fat fingers—was busily engaged in pouring out gin for her customers; the regular ones she was treating for it must not be forgotten that it was New Year's eve.

Such was the scene of vice and dissapation which met the eye and sickened heart of rachel when, with little Mary in her arms, and protected by the presence of her son, she ventured into the house.

'Is Mr. Hoffman here?' she inquired timidly.

The question had to be repeated several times before she could get an answer.

'Can't tell the names of any of my customers,' replied the mistress of 'The Crown and Magpie,' snappishly.

'Perhaps you will oblidge me by ascertaining.'

'Too busy, ma'am! Hot water Sally! Three and eight-pence sir. Half-and-half directly!

'You can't go in there!' shouted the landlady as Rachel was making her way towards the parlor. 'Mine a respectable house; I allow no females beyond the bar.'

'But I am Mr. Hoffman's wife.'

'So they all say,' answered the woman with a sneer.

There was a coarse mocking laugh from the crowd of half drunken wretches standing near. The eyes of Richard flashed angrily; but the voice, and still more the imploring look of his mother restrained him.

'Let us return home,' she said in a despairing tone. 'I feel faint and sick at heart.'

And leaning on the arm of her son the unhappy wife tottered rather than walked from the place.

The keen, frosty air partially restored her strength and Rachel proceeded with her children till she reached the thoroughfare leading through St. Margaret's church yard towards the Almonry, when a faint moan from Mary, whom she still carried in her arms, arrested her steps. She placed her hand under the thin faded shawl which covered her, the child was cold as ice, and shivering, as if seized with an ague fit.

'She is dying!' groaned the terror stricken parent—'dying for the want of food!'

The heart of her boy could endure no more—it was breaking. The cup of misery and endurance had been filled to overflowing. His brain was on fire—tears could not quench it.

'Take her home mother!' he cried—'take her home! never fear but I will bring you food! Mary shan't die! I'll beg—beg,' he added, 'anything to save her!'

Richard! Richard! do not leave me!' shrieked his agonized parent. 'Let me not lose both my children! if you love your mother, return—for pity's sake return!'

The appeal came to late. Her son, stung, maddened beyond endurance by the sufferings of those so dear to him, had broken from her feeble grasp, darted down the thoroughfare, and was already beyond the reach of her voice.

Rachel clung to the railings of the churchyard for support, till a second moan, still fainter than the first, sent a pang through her maternal breast.

'She must not die in the street!' murmured Rachel. 'Home—home! If I have strength to reach it!'

'Oh, God!' she cried with a sudden burst of anguish, 'protect my boy! Shield him from crime guard him against vices and the hideous snares which in a thousand forms assails unfriended youth; or take him, shy added solemnly, 'take him in Thy mercy.'

It was a Christian's prayer wrung from a mother's heart, in agony, and tears; and angels bore it to the mercy-seat on high!

Clasping her perishing child yet closer to her aching bosom, the daunkard's wife hastened to her home.

As Richard Hoffman rushed along the street, scarce knowing whither he went, and only intent on the one idea of getting by some means, food for his famished mother and sister, he was hailed by Jack Manders, an impecunious acquaintance who lived near Richard's home, and to whom he told the desperate state in which he had left those so dear to him. Jack listened with much interest, and at once proposed to pick the pocket of an old gentleman, who was staring into a window on the opposite side of the street. Richard refused with horror, although Jack urged the necessity of at once getting something to save the life of his mother and little Mary. Jack then undertook the business alone, and just as he had relieved the old gentleman of his pocket book, a policeman sprang from a doorway to arrest him; but Jack made good his escape. Not so Richard, who was at once seized by the policeman as an accomplice of the escaped pickpocket.

'I am no theif, sir,' cried Richard breaking from the strong grasp that held him, and throwing himself at the feet of the old gentleman, who had just come to the spot, 'though poverty and hunger tempted me to become one. My mother and sister are starving, [illegible]

The future history and trials of this poor boy will be found in the New York Ledger of January 16, which is for sale at all the bookstores and news offices.

We wish we had just the whole of three lines to fill out this column. But we have not, so we will go without.

My dream Serenade.

Will you come to me in my palace of pearl,
For down in the depths where my halls are whirl,
Oh! come, to me and my mermaids shall sing
In songs so sweet, we have ever a ring.

You shall see my diamond crystalline halls,
Where echoes your song as it goes by each,
There are many bright and glorious shells,
Where sea nymphs dance in laughing shells.

And then far up on the dim lighted sea,
The billows dash so mad and free,
The white capped waves far up on the height
Are sparkling and merry as starry and bright.

Then, oh! come down to me by my silver clad fount,
Come to my velvety coral leap mounts,
The "pale sea weed" has an ember rose sheen
Then come and be mine in my pearl valleys of green.

Career of a Prowling Lady.

As early as 1850, we hear of a Mrs. Cole, in the law records, appearing as executrix of certain parties for the the crime of larceny—they having, according to her affidavit, robbed the office of the District Attorney. A second affidavit appears, made shortly, after entirely revoking the accusation, and thus implying the use of hush money, or some similar means of quieting accusers.

Shortly after this Mrs. Cole, turns up in Charleston, South Carolina, where she appears in the character of mistress to a gentlman in the restaurant business. She stayed with him several months, living in a style of great magnificence and grandeur, until he, poor man, being ruined, was forced to sell out. Report says she saw between five and seven thousand dollars of his money during her sojourn with him, and it is a melancholy comment upon her affections for him, that it ceased when his money gave out. She left the unfortunate resturater, and sought a more ambitious field for her powers.

An old gentleman of great respectability, was her next lover. His name was Eggleston, and he held a good clerkship in the State Bank of Charleston. It did not take long for Mrs. C. to infatuate the old libertine, nor to make him pay roundly for said infatuation. His salary was by no means equal to her ambitous notion of things as they should be, and he was induced to commit a forgery, to keep up the extravagance into which his 'pet' ruthlessly plunged both herself and him. For three years their connection continued, during that time the old gentleman committed forgeries to the amount of $60,000 or over. Of this it is presumed over $40,000 was squandered upon this woman. The frauds were finally discovered and poor Eggleston imprisoned. Soon after his incarceration, he sent word to his 'darling Agnes' that he wished her to come and see him. Her answer showed the depth of her passion for him. 'Dear Egg—I haven't time to make calls; besides you are played out'

The Agent of a large traveling circus and menagerie next occupied her attention He was a handsome, wealthy man, of warm quick temperament, and great social developement—just one of those fellows who are not very bad, but always brilliant and agreeable. He conceived a devoted affection for Mrs. Cole, and was fairly led astray by her. From genuine love his feelings were turned into the channel of sensuousness, and the old story re enacted. He could refuse her nothing—was made to abandon his business, and squander his money until a short twelve months found him a ruined man. Then she threw him over, and after vainly endeavoring to wake one spark of pity, or the sentiment she had once professed to entertain for him, within her breast, he blew his brains out, and terminated this sad drama.

Her next love but one, was Dr. Beatty, who died lately in his hotel. The doctor was a gay man—what is called a 'society man,' and had some means. Mrs. Cole found it out, and immediately commenced her fascinations upon him. Their relation continued until Beatty's death, and we do not know that he ever had cause to rue the day when he met this 'strange woman,' unless his conscience may have given him an occasional twinge.—St. Louis Nev.

The News of the Week.

The leading news of the past week consists of three items. The present position of the Utah rebellion, the escape of fillibuster Walker, and the election of a State ticket in Kansas.

After hearing all sorts of rumors about fighting and loss of life in Utah, it turns out if the news of the past week are to be relied upon, that Col Johnson is safely entrenched with his forces at Ft. Bridger, and supplied with provisions for the winter, and that the Mormons do not propose to fight, but to leave for the British Possessions in the spring, and that some parties have gone already.—We do not implicitly confide in so amicable a termination of this matter, but it may be so notwithstanding.

With regard to the discharge of William Walker we confess we do not know what to think. It does not seem possible that after having violated most openly and shameless our neutrality laws, and forfeited his bond given against doing so again, having been taken in the very act, openly defying the authority of our government, this wholesale murderer and scourge of Central America, and out-law of all humanity, should be once more tamely sent away, without trial or rebuke, to renew again his defiance of the government and depredations upon the rights and commerce of the world. The report from Washington too, is that he has gone openly to take charge of some forces collected for him in the United States, and now at Mobile, designed to operate against the govarnment of Nicarauga.

If all this is true, and if our home government has become such a mere puppet of southern fire eaters as to permit it, why we have nothing more to say, but rather than believe this, we are frank to say that we do not believe the news.

As to the State election, held in Kansas on the 7th inst. the reports are not all in, but it would seem that the Lecompton Constitution is rejected by about 10,000 votes that the Free State men have a majority of the Legislature but being divided about the policy of State officers at all it is supposed the pro slavery men have elected the rest of the State ticket.

THE DETROIT ADVERTISER.—We notice that this excellent daily has since last New Years' come to us, somewhat reduced in size which is sensible in such times as these, but in new type and an entire new dress. The amount of reading matter is not by this arrangement at all reduced while in distinctness of type and general appearance it is a decided improvement.

We like the Advertiser and have often expressed our partiality for its talented and gentlemanly Editor, although, of course, differing from him, as we do from all the rest, most freely whenever we think that we have occasion to do so, and we are pleased to see them both in so neat and inviting a New Years' dress.

LITERARY NOTICES

Sargents School Monthly.

The first No. of Vol. 1 of a new School Monthly Edited and Published by Epes Sargent, Boston, Mass.—Is upon our table. Terms $1 per annum. It is a very fine thing well adapted to improve and refine young lads and misses, at a time of life when they should be supplied with reading of the right kind if you would not have them turn novel readers and, we do not know that we could point you to a better publication, for that purpose than Sargents School Monthly.

Peterson's Magazine.

The February No. of Peterson is promptly received. Its first engraving "The parable of the Lily" by J. D. Gross, is almost worth the price of the magazine. Its fashion plates and work patterns are always good and the reading matter uniformly of a superior quality of magazine literature. Published monthly by Chas. J. Peterson, Philadelphia. Terms $2,00 per annum.

The Lady's Home Magazine.

The February No. of this magazine of Arthur, (and which we for our part had rather had kept its old name,) is promptly received. "The dying Favorite" by Dick is a fine cut. Its Fashion plates and work patterns are most beautiful, T. S. Arthur and Miss Townsend, supported by a host of able contributors are always a sufficient guarantee that the reading matter will be good.

GREAT CHALLENGE.—The Georgia sportsmen, some time since, sent forth a challenge to the world—intended for Great Britian of course—to run a match race of four miles and repeat, for $100,000 a side, over the Ten Broeck course at Savannah. The Georgians propose in case the British accept the challenge, and their horse is beaten, to refund five per cent. of the purse, or $5,000, to pay expenses. The London Sunday Times insists that a company shall be formed in England to accept the challenge and test the superiority of the horses of the two countries. The Times calls upon Lord Zetland to become the champion of the British turf, and send on his noble horse Skirmisher "to do battle against the American celebrities"

Jacob Clarke, Esq., of Clermont county Ohio, raised 12 acres of Chinese Sugar Cane, from which he made 2840 gallons of good syrup. This he has for sale at 60 cents per gallon—which would make $1700 the product of 12 acres or $141, 75 per acre.

One of the hours, each day wasted on trifles of indolence, saved and daily devoted to improvement, is enough to make an ignorant man wise in ten years—to provide the luxury of intelligence to a mind torpid from a lack of thought—to brighten up and strengthen faculties perishing with rust—to make life a fruitful field, and death a harvest of golden deeds.

A GENTLE HINT.—The Rev. Jonathan French, of South Andover, was to be supplied with wood by his parishioners, according to the terms of his settlement. Winter was coming on, but no wood had been furnished. Mr. French waited until the Governor's proclamation for Thanksgiving came, when after reading it to his people, he said, with great apparent simplicity: "My brethren, you perceive that his excellency has appointed next Thursday as a day of Thanksgiving, and, according to custom, it is my intention to prepare two discourses for that occasion—provided I can write without a fire!" The hint took, and on the next day all his winter's wood was in his wood yard.

BAD AND GOOD TASTE.—Gov. Wise of Virginia, has so strong a dislike of the Yankees that he would not appoint a day of Thanksgiving; but the Mayor of Norfolk—remarking, perhaps the merciful exemption of that city from disease, and the charity which came from the North to the succor of its people in their hour of trial—had no scruples, and the Norfolkers observed the 26th as a day of thanksgiving accordingly.

LADY GYMNASTS.—A large number of women at New Bedford, Mass., practice in the gymnasium and are said to exhibit fine muscle and agility.

'Sal,' said one girl to another, 'I am so glad I have no beaux, now.'

'Why?' asked the other.

'Cause, I can eat as many onions now as I please.'

"I am going to the post office, Bob, shall I inquire for you?"

"Well, yes, if you have a mind to; but I don't think you'll find me there."

What tune is that which the ladies never call for?

Why, the spit-toon.

Philo White, of Racine, who has been Minister to Ecquador, residing at Quito for several years past, it is said is about resigning, to return home.

General News.

Highlands, Jan. 11.

The Sea View House at the Highlands where the murder of Moses by Donnally was committed, together with the cottage occupied by Mrs. Jarvis, was totally destroyed by fire about 9 o'clock last night. The house has not been occupied since September, and the fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary. Loss about $15,000; insured about half that amount.

Augusta, Ga Jan. 11.

On Friday last, seven men, mostly negroes, were scalded to death by molten metal, at Cooper's Iron Furnace, Cass Co. Georgia.

New York, Jan. 11.

No Congressional news to-day; lines working badly.

Washington, Jan. 10.

The Herald correspondent from Washington, Jan. 10th, says: Gen Walker leaves for the South. He goes first to Mobile and then to New Orleans. A large force had already concentrated at the above places, and will leave as early as possible to join Col Anderson. Quite a number of fillibusters discharged at Norfolk, have been here, received their orders, and gone South. The General has left his matters with his friends in Congress, who will press his claim with great vigor.

Col. Williams, of Tenn., who was appointed Minister to Constantinople, has refused to accept the position, and withdrawn his application. Mr. Poindexter, of Tennessee, who was recently appointed Chief Clerk in the Post Office Department, I understand will get the position.

A special despatch to the New York Tribune from Washington says: Private despatches from Indiana say that the Democratic Convention of that state, after endorsing the Cincinnatti platform, passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That we are still in favor of the great doctrine of the Kansas Nebraska act, and that by a practical application of the doctrine, the people of the State or Territory, are vested with the right of ratifying or rejecting at the ballot box, any constitution that may be formed for their government, and therefore no Territory should be admitted into the Union as a State without a fair expression of the will of the people being first had upon the constitution, and accompanying the application for admission.

This resolution was passed by 278 yeas, to 115 nays, and was subsequently made unanimous.

Despatches from Columbus Ohio, say that the Democratic Caucus of the members of the Ohio Legislature, has unanimously agreed to instruct their delegation in Congress, to vote and act in opposition to the Lecompton Constitution.

Washington, Jan. 11.

The House considered a resolution providing for 5000 coppies of the coast survey report. It was stated that the cost would be $20,000. During explanatory remarks by several gentlemen, Mr. Phillips said, that about one million dollars are yet due on account of paper printing and engraving for the last two Congresses. The resolution was rejected.

St. Louis, Jan 12.

The Democrat has Kansas advices to the 7th inst., which give the following Pro-Slavery majorites:

Kickapoo 864; Doniphan county 800; Johnson county 1900; Bourbon 430; Douglas county gives 500 Free State majority, and Atchison City about 30.

The Democratic State ticket is probably elected. The Free State party have a majority in the Legislature.

Only about half the vote of the Territory was cast for the State officers, but a very decided expression was given against the Lecompton constitution, being set down at 10,000.

In two districts the polls were kept open. The Free State men making arrests of fraudulent voters, under the recent Legislative act.

At Calhoun a Judge named Culvert was arrested for stuffing ballot boxes—Another, named Redman, was arrested for receiving fraudulent votes. Culvert was taken to Leavenworth, with a cannon belonging to the Kickapoo Rangers, and paraded through the street. Much excitement prevails, and fears were entertained that serious trouble would follow.

The political parties are much divided the majority being bitterly opposed to the Lecompton constitution. Gen Calhoun, who is supposed to be in western Missori, has been advised not to return to the Territory.

The Kansas Territorial Legislature met at Lecompton on the 4th, and adjourned to Lawrence. It is said that Denver signed the bill for such adjournment.

The Republican has received Utah advices to Dec. 1st.

The troops were all in winter quarters at Fort Bridger, with the exception of Col. Cooks command, which was posted 40 miles distant, on Henry's Fork, where a scant supply of grass remained.

Fort Bridges is being re-built, for the purpose of protecting the provisions.

The troops are comfortably stationed in tents with stores. The weather has been very mild and good health prevailed.—They had provisions sufficient to last until June, on close allowance. Capt. Marcy has been sent to Santa Fe to obtain supplies. Nearly two thirds of all the animals of the expedition had died.

The Mormons were preparing to leave for the British possessions. Pioneer parties had already left. Brigham Young, sent a quantity of salt to Col. Johnson. That officer sent it back stating that he would hang any other messengers from the same quarter, who came on a similar errand. Brigham also invited the officers of the army to partake of his hospitality at Salt Lake City. It is said that Col. Johnson is well assured that the Mormons will leave in the spring. He asks no increase of the force now under his command. Gov. Cummings issued a proclamation, declaring the Territory to be in a state of rebellion, and stating that the court would be organized in Green River county, near Fort Bridger, whence the proclamation was dated by Chief Justice Eckels, for the trial of offenders, and that a posse of the inhabitants of the Territory be first used to enforce obedience to the laws. That failing, military force will be resorted to, and commanding all armed bodies of men to immediately dispurse and return home, under penalty of punishment at trial. Lieut. Carroll, of the 10th infantry, bearer of dispatches to Washington, left here this morning.

Washington, Jan. 12.

House—Mr. Kellogg, of Illinois, defended the President in maintaining that it was the right and duty of our naval force to arrest Walker on the soil of Nicaragua.

Mr. Moore of Alabama, contended that Paulding exceeded his instructions and that a majority of the Nation could never sanction his conduct.

Mr. Thomson, of N. Y., thought the Administration was bound to have Walker prosecuted for a violation of the neutrality laws.

Mr. Warner, of Arkansas, asserted that Paulding exceeded his instructions. He also said if President Pierce had promtly removed Brigham Young, the trouble in Utah would have been avoided. He also advocated a grant of land to Arkansas for Rail Road purposes.

The committee then rose and the House adjourned.

SENATE.—The Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill to repeal the acts of war of 1856, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to change the names of vessels in certain cases

Mr. Benjamin, in showing the necessity of the passage of the bill, said he had a list of 92 vessels, the names of which had been changed within the last 18 months; 31 of them have been either lost at sea or the means of loss of life or property. The names were changed to deceive the public when the vessels were rotten and unseaworthy. He instanced the Central America whose name was changed from the Geo. Law. One vessel had been condemned and her name changed three times, and she went to sea and was never heard from afterwards.—The bill was passed. The joint resolution to extend the time for the restoration of naval officers, effected by the retiring board to April next was passed. After an executive session the Senate adjourned.

The Post says that Mr Eli Thayer has already commenced the organization of a company which is expected to send enough emigrants to Central America within a year to found two substantial seaports at either extremity of the Nicaraguan route, and put them into profitable relations with the agricultural interests of the interior. The Washington correspondent of the Post says the Senate Committee on Territories have agreed to postpone action on the Minnesota Constitution till Saturday.

New Orleans, Jan. 12.

Lieut. Beale will soon return to Texas. The camels will remain at Ligon Reservation, Sonora.

Lower California is politically quiet.

There had been a dreadful hurricane on the coast. Thirteen vessels had been driven on shore, and many houses in La paz destroyed.

From San Bernardo the Mormons had all gone to Salt Lake.

Washington, Jan 13

The House met in Committee of the whole, on the state of the Union on the President's annaul message.

Mr. Curtis made a speech on fillibustering. He said that Paulding, like a true and honest sailor, carried out his instructions. It was not his duty to expound law.

Mr. Clay of Ky., expressed his acquiesence in every word the President had written on Central American affairs Gen Walker was brought home to save his neck, and for that he should be grateful. Mr. Clay mentioned that it was not only in his power, but it was the duty of the President to send for Walker, over the high seas and bring him back. He tho't Paulding committed a great error; and that this remark of the President was not sufficient censure to the conduct of that officer.

DEAFNESS CURED.—The best remedy for deafness ever offered to the public, is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT. Many cases of several years standing have been quickly and entirely cured by it; and thousands of recent cases caused by colds or obstructions of the ear-chambers, have yielded to one or two applications. Full directions for use accompany each bottle. One of the most remarkable cures was at the Hartford Deaf and Dumb Asylum. A boy, 15 years of age, named Benjamin Crawford, who had been born deaf and was consequently dumb, was sent there for education and, as an experiment, the Liniment was tried on him, and with the most complete success. He now hears as well as any one, and is rapidly learning to talk. The Liniment is for sale at all Drug stores.

MOFFAT'S BILLIARD AND PHOENIX BITTERS.

RHEUMATISM—NEURALGIA.—The agonies of Rheumatism and Neuralgia are among the most acute with which the human frame is ever afflicted, and have heretofore been found the most difficult to remove. Happily a remedy is now discovered by which the most obstinate cases can be immediately cured.—This sovereign remedy is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT, for sale by Doggett generally. It is only necessary for the sufferer to try it, to be assured of its efficacy.

Dr. W. P. Wagner. Dear Sir. It is now but one month since you adjusted on my enfeebled body, one of Dr. Banning's Boxes, for the relief, and final cure of Bleeding Lungs; yet my experience in use of this truly wonderful Body and shoulder Brace, is so gratifying to me, that I deem it important to inform you of the fact, and through you, if you think proper, those like afflicted with myself. Particulars I will not stop to give but, simply state that I have observed your instructions given with the Brace, that my lungs have not bled since, nor do I feel such apprehensions of bleeding as constantly annoyed me for years before. My general health is much improved; dyspeptic symptoms are gone: I have greater muscular energy, and weigh more than I have in six years past. Wishing you every success in thus relieving the ills of suffering humanity.

I remain very truly, &c.
C D Y ALEXANDER.

The most skeptical people can be convinced by trial that all the family medicines are not humbug, and that among the thousand of butterfly life there are a few of great merit, and undoubted worth. Of these, Dr. Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy stands first and foremost among the remedies of the day that can be relied on as a medicine that is all that is recommended by its proprietors.

It advertises itself on every trial, for there are none who use it but tell their friends to do so, and so it goes from mouth to mouth till all the people of the Union have learned the good of this truly valuable medicine. It is recommended with testimonials to prove its virtue for the cure of liver complaints of every kind, from the worst Dyspepsia to a common headache, and is particularly adapted to Jaundice, Deranged Stomach, Bowel Complaints and diseases of children.

One or two doses are said to cure a cold with scarce a failure. It is worth a trial for this alone. It is particularly adapted for use of ladies, particularly those of sedentary habits. Some ladies of the highest standing in society have given their certificates of its efficacy, and we say to all who are ailing, try one bottle, and you will never be without it.

Local and Miscellaneous.

CHANGE OF PROPRIETORSHIP.—David Tine has purchased the interest of Mr. Richards in the Furniture business. D. V. will spare no expense or pains, to retain the well earned reputation of this old establishment.

By the aid of new machinery (lately introduced) at his manufactory, he is enabled to sell at prices to suit the times.

CRACKERS.—A splended article of celebrated crackers will be found at the Apothicaries Hall. They have no superior.

HEAVY BEEF.—A Cow weighing a little over 1900 was sold on the street, for $60.

BOOTS & SHOES.—A. Randall & Co. are prepared to supply the market with an excellent Boot or Shoe. They will warrant their work to be second to none.

EXCURSION TRAIN.—A train of 22 Passenger Cars containing citizens of Jackson, Michigan Legislature, and invited guests, passed through our village on Friday at 11 o'clock. for Toledo. This is the largest train that ever passed over this branch.

We have received the annual report of the Supervisors for the year of 1857, but have no room for publication in this issue. We will give it in our next. We will also give the correspondence "Great West."

COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—We noticed some time since a call in the Ann Arbor Argus and Journal, numerously signed by some of the leading citizens of Washtenaw Co. calling for a convention to form a County Historical Society. The idea struck us very favorably and we have been waiting, hoping that some one at the County site would take it up and recommend the matter to our readers also. Out-side of Wayne, Monroe and Mackinaw counties, old Lenawee may be presumed to possess as much of historical interest as any other county in the State, and ought to be able to contribute her quota towards the historical recollections of our State. We will therefore suggest that there be held, in the city of Adrian, on Tuesday evening the 16th day of February next, which is the first day of our next Circuit Court, a County Convention for the purpose of organizing a Lenawee County Historical Society auxiliary to the State Historical Society. Will our entire county press, either notice this, or else suggest some other time? We hope if we do have it, that full notice will thus be given, that every town in the county will be fully represented there.

BURNED TO DEATH.—We are pained to learn that a bright little girl four years of age, and over, the daughter of Samuel Blinn of Manchester, Washtenaw Co Mich., was burned to death on Friday of last week, at a cooper's shop near her father's residence. She was playing with the shavings when her clothes took fire, and although her father, and several men were employed with a sawing machine near by, they were completely burned up off her before she was seen by any one. She lingered in great agony for more than four hours after the accident.

SENSIBLE.—The Presbyterian Church and society of this village, at a recent meeting resolved to discard, that absurd piece of Church etiquette, which requires a whole slip-full of gentlemen to rise and strut out into the broad aisle (during service if they be,) in order to give to a lady who may have happened to come in after them a foot of the slip.

HE KNEW HIM.—'Do you know the owner, Mr. Jones?'

'Yes, to the bone.'

'What is his character?'

'Didn't know he had any?'

'Does he live near you?'

'So near, that he has only spent 50 shillings for fire wood in eight years.'

A couple were married in Cincinnati on Monday last, whose names joined make an X Press Traine, the gentleman's name is X. Press, and the lady's Miss Traine. May they never run off the track.

The Paris Courier says that Mrs. Gordon, a young American of almost endless resources, who will hereafter reside in that city, is the original Flora McFlimsey, in Butler's Sanitary poem, 'Nothing to Wear.'

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Colds, Coughs, and Hoarseness.

BOSTON, Mass., 20th Dec., 1853.

DR. J. C. AYER: I adopted without delay the best remedy I have ever found for Coughs, Hoarseness, Influenza, and the other distressing symptoms of a Cold, in your CHERRY PECTORAL. Its composition is in my practice and my family is the best we possess, as it never fails to give relief to persons suffering as victims for the treatment of these complaints. EDEN KNIGHT, M.D.

A. B. McCLEARY, Esq., of Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used your Pectoral in myself and in no family ever knew you invented it, and believe it the best medicine for its purpose ever put out. With a bad cold I should sooner pay twenty-five dollars for a bottle than be without it, or take any other remedy."

Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza.

SODUS CENTRE, Wayne Co., N. Y., Feb. 7, 1856.

BROTHER AYER: I will do anything to extend your PECTORAL as the best remedy we possess for the cure of Whooping Cough, Croup, and the chest diseases of children. We of your fraternity in the South appreciate your skill, and commend your medicine to our people.

HIRAM CONKLIN, M.D.

AMOS LEE, Esq., MONTEREY, Ia., writes, 31 Jan., 1856: "I had a bad cough and influenza, which confined me in doors six weeks; took many medicines without relief; finally tried your PECTORAL by the advice of our clergyman. The first dose relieved the soreness in my throat and lungs; less than one bottle made me completely well. Your medicines are the cheapest as well as the best we can buy, and we esteem you, Doctor, and your medicines, as the poor man's friend."

Asthma or Phthisic, and Bronchitis.

WEST MACEDONIA, Pa., Feb. 4, 1856.

SIR: Your CHERRY PECTORAL is performing marvellous cures in this section. It has relieved several from alarming symptoms of consumption, and is now curing a man who has labored under an affection of the lungs for the last forty years. HENRY E. PARIS, Merchant.

A. A. STARKEY, M.D., Adams, Monroe Co., Iowa, writes Sept. 6, 1855, "During my practice of many years I have found nothing equal to your CHERRY PECTORAL for the relief of the unfortunate patients on whom it has been tried."

We might add a thousand certificates, but the most convincing proof of the virtues of this remedy is found in the wide spread and unbounded confidence felt by the people in its cures.

Consumption.

Probably no one disease destroys more human lives than Consumption, and such is the insidious manner in which the first symptoms steal upon the unwary, that few are aware of their danger until the fatal destroyer has fastened its clutches upon the vitals. Could the first symptoms of Consumption be realized, as they should be, that a cough, or slight cold, is the beginning of the end, and that the only hope of the victim is in the immediate use of some powerful remedy, more would be saved. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, as the evidence of thousands proves, is the most effectual remedy ever discovered for Consumption. Even when the disease has become so deep-seated that the patient and friends have given up all hope, and the doctor can do no more, this remedy will often check the fatal progress of the disease, and restore the sufferer to health. Thousands, publicly known, have been cured of apparently hopeless cases of Consumption, by the use of this remedy. While it is the most powerful antidote for this fearful disease ever discovered, it is also the best remedy in the world for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Bronchitis, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Influenza, and all diseases of the throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs. Indeed, so universally are its virtues known, and so wide is the field of its cures, that we deem it unnecessary to do more than assure the people that its quality is kept unimpaired, and it can be had of all dealers.

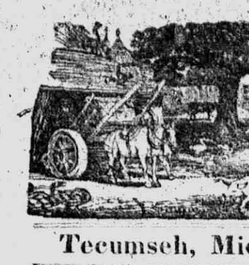
Lenawee County Farmer.



Tecumseh, Michigan, January, 1858.

From the New York Tribune.

Shall we Import Wheat ?

With a bounteous crop of cereals it would be a very curious result, particularly while the country is groaning under a load of debt for an excess of importations, if we should import into the city of New York, during the approaching winter, our breadstuffs from the ports of the Black Sea. Let us see what the chance is, because such will be the case if it will pay; not pay the country in a political economy point of view, but if it will pay the individual who may invest his dollars in that speculation.

We are told that in consequence of the financial difficulties, the usual operators in the grain markets of the West have failed to send forward a supply sufficient to serve the wants of the seaboard during the winter, and that it is now too late to send out funds, if we had them, to get from Chicago before the lakes and canals will freeze up, and consequently the price of flour will advance just as much as the price of freight is higher upon the rails than upon the navigable waters. Probably that is a fact, and taking it for granted, we should say that all who can would act wisely to buy their winter supply now.

The financial difficulty is not the thing that has kept back western grain. Owing to the high prices of former years, and the general independent condition of farmers—that is, they are not generally in want of money for anything but to pay store bills for goods bought on credit, or to buy more land, both of which are willing to postpone rather than sell their grain at a lower price than last year—many of them have their crops yet in stack unthreshed. At last reports, the price of wheat was 64 to 66 cents a bushel for spring grain at Chicago, while at New York the price is quoted, for Ohio wheat, $1,16 to $1,30; Michigan wheat $1,15 to $1,25; western mixed $1,05 to $1,27; western red 93c to $1,26. If these rates should advance 50 cents a bushel here, which is very likely, will that benefit the Illinois or Indiana farmer the fifteenth part of that sum? On the contrary it may be an injury to him, because it may induce speculators to inject wheat from Odessa. At our last advices from that port we find that, owing to the very rainy weather and bad state of the roads, the price of wheat was unusually high, yet how are the quotations in sterling currency, not only at Odessa, but several other European and African ports, per 8 bushels:

	Soft Wheat.	Hard Wheat.	Indian Corn.	Oats.	Rye.	Barley.
Odessa	9 2 4	8	3	2	3	3
Taganrog	8	7	3	2	3	3
Sandomirska	4 6
Belgium
St. Petersburg	5 6
London	5 6

At London, for wheat from Odessa, cost and freight 5s 6d from England, white wheat, 5s to 6s; red 5s to 5s 8d; Dantzig mixed 5s to 6s; Taganrog 5s 8d to 5s 10d; Sandomirska 49s 6d per 492 pounds; Black Sea wheat generally, 5s to 5s 8d.

The supply of grain is so abundant in Greece that exportations are permitted. In the sea of Azof the Nicc is high, the supply being small on account of heavy rains. And this is the case in all the Black Sea ports, yet it does not appear to average more than 30s per imperial quarter, or about $1 per bushel of our measure. And now with an equal prospect that wheat will fall as much at Odessa as it will rise at Chicago, and that both are alike valuable for food, let us see how the case stands.

The present rate of freight per rail from Chicago to New York is $1 per cwt.; that is, 60 cents a bushel for wheat, making it cost $1,26 a bushel, delivered. The winter rate of freight will be at least 10 per cent higher, advancing the price to $1,32 a bushel. The present cost of wheat at Odessa of equal or better quality than Chicago average, being $1 a bushel, and the rate of freight 20 cents a bushel, how stands the account? Why, twelve cents a bushel against the Illinois farmer, who is holding on for higher prices, and flattering himself that his wheat is to be exported, instead of coming in contact with wheat imported across the Atlantic and sold at a profit of six cents a bushel upon present rates of freight or 12 cents upon the lowest rates that can be counted upon as soon as navigation closes.

We presume that vessels can be chartered on the other side so as to deliver their cargoes here by the 1st of February; or that some of the hundreds of idle ships in this port could be had on contract to go and return before the 1st of March, or a month before canal and lakes are open, and arrive at the time when we may expect the greatest scarcity, if there is to be one, of wheat and flour in this city.

Now, we put the question to western farmers; with such facts as these before you, is it wise to hold your wheat for higher prices? In language that some of you that have opened your farms out of the woods will understand we ask, is the game worth the powder? If it is, hold on, and trust to luck, not common sense.

It does not look to us very probable that any man who knows enough to know buckwheat from beans, is very likely to pay two per cent a month for money to invest in wheat or flour at present prices, to hold for a rise, while the Atlantic and Black Sea are open now with an abundance of money on the other side, to send over quantities of wheat, just so sure as the price is very materially enhanced above the present quotations.

Let the fool go headlong—the wise man will pause and think. We have given him food for thought.

THE CORN ROT.—The Evansville Journal, which a few weeks since congratulated the farmers of that section upon their escape with an average crop, says that the damage is far more extensive than was supposed. A large portion of the corn is rapidly decaying. The cob is damp and soft and as soon as it is piled up in the pens and cribs it begins to rot, and the decay rapidly extends to the grain and in many instances where the farmers thought they had gathered a sound crop, they have been surprised to find their corn cribs emitting a very offensive odor and on opening the corn they have found the interior heated and rotting rapidly. Many have attempted to arrest the decay by opening their cribs and spreading their corn, but with only partial success.

Simple Butter Cooler

Melted butter is all very well in its right place, but when butter is put upon the table at breakfast having the appearance of just out of the oven it is anything but creditable to the housekeeper and far from satisfactory to those who eat it. Dry toast is positively spoilt if spread with soft butter, indeed, if butter cannot be brought to table at least firm, if not hard, it is better to keep it away altogether. Fortunately, however, it is not necessary to proceed to such desperate measures, as butter can be kept nice and cool in the hottest weather, and that in a very simple manner. Procure, a large, new, flower pot of sufficient size to cover the butter plate, and also a saucer large enough for the flower-pot to rest in upside down; place a trivet or meat stand (such as is sent to the oven when a joint is to be baked) in the saucer, and put on this trivet the plate of butter; now fill the saucer with water, and turn the flower pot over the butter, so that its bottom will be below the water.—The hole in the flower-pot must be fitted with a cork; the butter will then be in what may called an air-tight chamber. Let the whole of the outside of the flower pot be then thoroughly drenched with water, and place it in as cool a place as you can. If this be done over night, the butter will be as "firm as a rock" at breakfast time: or if placed there in the morning, the butter will be quite hard for use at the tea hour. The reason of this is, that when water evaporates it produces cold; the porous pot draws up the water which in warm weather quickly evaporates from the sides, and thus cools it, and as no warm air can now get at the butter, it becomes firm and cool in the hottest day. Scientific American.

ONE DOLLAR WILL BUY

ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public namely DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR or LIVER REMEDY, that will act as a Cathartic, safer, milder and more effectual than any other Physician known to be out only a Cathartic but a Liver remedy acting freely the bowels and every SECRETION system into the strength and bounds to carry on that matter thus generated every two purposes effectually, and therefore gets the good results in every case in the treatment of most diseases. It strengthens Digestion of the same time that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity

DR. SANFORDS INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine namely Gums

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Balsam, without any of its debilitating effects.

Though possessing rare medical powers, these Gums have been but little known to Physicians and never used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the Invigorator which met with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine friend and known as a Remedy, it has rarely ever failed to cure Liver Complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver, and as a proof that the Invigorator relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses on retiring, and it assists nature in her operations By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work as regularly as clock work

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the Invigorator, which effectually expels all acidity and sourness of the stomach

For an over-loaded stomach it has no equal as it relieves all oppressive or uneasy feeling after eating heartily For rancid Humors generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints, and all diseases arising from a diseased Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it, and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to the afflicted. For it never disappoints before the first bottle was taken and so we can say anything either without trouble while before

The Old House.

Now the night has settled on the mountains,
And the world is growing dark and drear;
Sleekly floats the hazle-margined river,
Drifts along the woods the uneasy air:
Time alone the comrade of our chamber
On our pulses counts his passing dower,
And the clock ticks in the darkened passage,
Climbing—chiming—
Chiming—climbing—
Climbing up the minutes towards the Hour.

Many a year has vanished since we rested
In this old House 'mid the aged trees:
Solemn thoughts are now its grave Penates,
And its Lares, loving memories:
Many a magic morn have hope and fancy
Turned this chamber to a fadeless bower,
While the clock ticked in the sunny silence,
Climbing—chiming—
Chiming—climbing—
Climbing up the minutes toward the Hour.

Here we dwelt in happy days departed,—
Heaven was then more near than now it seems;
Book-imprisoned spirits as our comrades
Yielded daily thought and evening dreams;
Here 'mid forms of purest old affection
Death undreamt-of seemed to lose his power,
While the clock ticked in the pleasant passage,
Climbing—chiming—
Chiming—climbing—
Climbing up the minutes toward the Hour.

O! the joyous times of spring and autumn,
O! the April moon, the golden sheaves,
O! the walks in mellow, mild September,
Down the sky blue river in falling leaves!
Day-by-day the belfry's pane-ful shadow
Passed the tomb long closed by many a flower;
But the clock ticked in the solemn passage,
Climbing—chiming—
Chiming—climbing—
Climbing up the minutes toward the Hour.

Here along the drooping caves of ivy
Sadly swayed the bell's remembered chimes;
Here we mused, while to the dreaming fancy
Setting suns brought back the dear old times;
Destinies of splendor orbed before us,
As you star gleamed o'er the moldering tower,
Still the clock ticked in the awesome passage,
Climbing—chiming—
Chiming—climbing—
Climbing up the minutes toward the Hour.

All is vanished—joy, and youth, and summer;
Voices from the distance throng the ears:
Memory vibrates, but to olden music,
And so wakening yields us only tears;
Yet, for love of friends and days departed,
Wait, we hear the dark, approaching Power;
List—the clock ticks in the silent passage,
Climbing—chiming—
Chiming—climbing—
Climbing up the minutes toward the Hour.

Lo! 'tis dawn!—a beam of level twilight—
As that burst of summer thunder tolled—
On the cloudy altar of the morning
Glimmers like an Angel's brand of gold:
And the first bird wakened in the glory
Sprinkles round a life exultant shower—
But the clock ticks in the granite passage,
Chiming—chiming—
Chiming—climbing—
Climbing up the minutes toward the Hour.

Mind What you say Before Chidren

It is always well to avoid saying anything that is improper, but it is especially so before children; and here parents, as well as others, are often in fault. Children have as many ears as grown persons, and they are generally more attentive to what is said before them. What they hear they are very apt to repeat; and as they have no discretion and not sufficient knowledge of the world to disguise anything, it is generally found that children and fools speak the truth.

See that boy's eyes glisten while you are speaking of a neighbor in a language that you would not have repeated. He does not fully understand what you mean, but he will remember every word; and it will be strange if he does not cause you to blush by the repetition.

A gentleman was in the habit of calling at a neighbor's house, and the lady had always expressed to him much pleasure in seeing him. One day, just after she had remarked to him her happiness from his visit, the little boy entered the room. The gentleman took him on his knee, and asked:

'Are you not glad to see me, George?'

'No, sir,' replied the boy.

'Why not, my little man?' he continued

'Because mother don't want you to come,' said George

Here the mother looked daggers at her little son, and became crimson. But he saw nothing.

'Indeed; how do you know that, George?'

'Because she said yesterday, that she wished that old bore would not call again.'

The gentleman's hat was soon in requisition, and he left with the impression 'great is truth, it will prevail."

Another child looked sharply into the face of a visitor, and being asked what she meant by it, replied:

'I wanted to see if you had a drop in your eye; I have heard mother say that you have, frequently'

A boy once asked his father, who it was lived next door to him, and when he heard his name, inquired if he was not a fool.

'No, my little friend, he is not a fool, but a very sensible man. But why did you ask the question".

'Because,' replied the boy, 'mother said the other day that you were next door to a fool; and I wanted to know who lived next door to you.'—Globe.

Correspondence of the Herald.

The West.

Much has been said and written and sung about the West. It is styled "the great west," the 'queenly west,' 'the garden of the world' &c., which are not exaggerations. Indeed there are many things to be admired in the west. There are magnificent forests, beautiful rivers, crystal lakes and laughing rills, but above all (in my estimation) are the prairies to be admired. I am aware there are some who cannot appreciate the beauties of the western prairies as I do, but it seems to me they must look through dusty spectacles, and that there is no affinity between them and nature.

The hills, the valleys, the mountains and the rivers afford many admiral scenes but the face of the prairie smiles with surpassing charms—with indescribable loveliness. But they are doubly beautiful in our own fertile Nebraska. No others can boast of such beautiful, undulating and flowery prairies as ours; none more pleasant and healthy, none better adapted to agriculture. What emotions of pleasure pervade our bosoms as we cast our eyes over the rolling surface as it stretches

"In airy undulations far away,
As if an ocean in its gentle swell
Stood still; with all its rounded billows
Fixed and motionless forever."

With its countless flowers of varied hue, its many sparkling streams and brooklets, laughing and dancing along through sunshine and shade, where the willows droop to kiss the ripples. The strips of timber which fringe our rivers and other streams which look like islands floating on the bosom of the sea, are filled with song birds, caroling their glad song all the day long. Who (to see these) would not leave the dusty and unhealthy city, and come and dwell in this fair land where the gentle breezes waft the perfume of countless flowers to every cabin door. In a prairie country the wind sometimes blows hard, but it is neccessary to disperse the unhealthy vapors and sickly effluvia that would else settle around. Sometimes in the winter the wind blows keen but it bears on its wings health and strength. Let those who will, rail against the West, I would not exchange my prairie home for the costly farm of the East. As for myself nothing would please me more than to pass my days among the varying fields of flowers,

"Whose glory and whose multitude Rival the constellations,"—

And constantly hear the merry songsters chant their notes, the hum of the busy bee, and the chorus of the insects pleasantly greet the ear, and while I cast my eyes over the flowery and luxuriant expanse, I think,

"The breezes of the South ne'er fanned
A nobler or a lovelier scene than this."

I love to linger at the hour of eve and watch old Sol sink in regal splendor to his rest. The vision is resplendent with beauty. The grandeur presented by the far-off circling horizon, combined with the floating splendor of the azure skies the gorgeous clouds floating idly in the atmosphere the graceful waving flowers which seem to woo me to their fairy haunts, the undulations of the country, the coolness of the fluttering breeze, present a scene too magnificent for pencil to depict, or pen to describe. Come, man of toil,

"The city's a prison to-morrow for thee,
Come to the prairie so boundless and free,
Where the sight is not checked till prairie and skies
In harmony blending commingle their dies,"

And secure a home in the West, and instead of bending in servitude to others in any occupation come here and assert your own right and privelege to lordship

There is almost everything to induce you to come to this fair land. Now, when the pressure of the times is so hard when you are thrown out of business as thousands of you are in the cities and towns of the East, and as you always must be in such times as these, when you are dependant on others for employment why not turn your faces to the west and take up your line of march for this land of Homes for the homeless? This land where every person with any ambition and a moderate degree of industry can, in a few years, make for himself and family, a home which will vie in point of beauty and value with the old farms of the East which it has taken many years of toil and a large expenditures of capital to render attractive and valuable. Here in Nebraska are thousands of acres of as good land as ever the sun shone upon, which you can have by merely coming and settling thereon, and at any time prior to the land sales, (which will not, in all probability, be in less than five years) paying the mere nominal sum of $1,25 per acre therefor. Nebraska may indeed be called the land of beauty and fatness. The land is very fertile capable of producing all the products of the farm; it may naturally be classed into three kinds; first the bottom lands, which are those lying immediately along the rivers and other streams; they are very level, presenting a plain like surface, and produce grass in the greatest luxuriance, on which feed numerous herds of Elk, deer and antelope. These bottoms are alluvial. They may in a general way be described as sand and clay mixed with ashes, carbon and a very large quantity of vegetable matter, altogether forming a very light porous black mould. It is very easy of cultivation and is productive to an astonishing degree. Its constant product is from three to four hundred bushels of potatoes, and twenty five to one hundred and fifty bushels of corn per acre Its fertility is inexhaustible on account of the depth of the soil. Above the first bottom lands are the second bottoms—generally from forty to one hundred feet higher than the first bottoms, extending back to the summits of the bluffs which range with the general level of the country beyond. The second bottom or table lands are also very level, equally productive with the first bottoms, but more dry.—Perhaps no land in the world can rival them in beauty and magnificence. As the eye wanders over one of these tables it is occasionally relieved by the sight of trees scattering in solitude or gathered in clumps and groves as if the hand of art had disposed them for the finest effect. The third class is the rolling prairie. It is difficult to convey to the mind of a person acquainted only with the broken country of the East, a distinct idea of the rolling prairie. The surface is undulating, looking as if a heavy groundswell of the ocean had been suddenly arrested and converted by the wand of some enchanter into solid fixed soil." It is well watered by springs and streams of pure water.—The soil is also very productive, having however a smaller proportion of vegetable and a larger share of mineral matter than the bottom lands. But as I have already written a more lengthy article than I had intended when I commenced, I will give you a brief description of the locality in which I am situated and then close. I have "stuck my stakes" in Cuming Co., which will not yield the palm to any county in the Territory for the fertility of its soil, its mineral resources or the number of its springs and running brooks. On its eastern border runs Middle Creek, a branch of the Elk-Horn river; through its centre runs the Elk-Horn river, and throughout the whole county are springs of clear cold water, together with streams of pure running water. There is scarcely a quarter section of land on which is not to be found a spring of delicious water. There is not a township which has not a stream of some importance. Lime stone and iron are found in quantities.—Some coal has been found, but as yet no thorough search has been made for it, It is to be very much regretted that as yet no geological survey of Nebraska has been made. DeWitt, the town in which I am located, is centrally situated in the county on a very beautiful ridge of land, having the Elk-Horn river on the west and Plum Creek on the east. It is said to be one of the most beautiful locations in the Territory. It is the seat of Justice for Cuming county, and is on the route of the Nebraska Central R R One of the finest steam saw mills in the Territory is located here, and next season another will be put into operation at this point There is also to be a Collegiate Institute erected here. The town is surrounded on all sides by a country which is unrivalled in the Territory and perhaps in the Union, for the fertility of its soil and the beauty of its surface. In the whole township there is not 100 acres of the land which cannot be cultivated with success. In the immediate vicinity of DeWitt are to be found the heaviest bodies of timber in the Territory, consisting of Oak, Cottonwood, Elm, Basswood, Black Walnut, Coffee, Bean &c, which in itself establishes the fact beyond dispute, that at this point is to be a town of importance. In a prairie country timber is the great desideratum and when we take into consideration the fact that at DeWitt and in the immediate vicinity are large quantities of timber; and also a country unsurpassed in the fertility of its soil and the beauty of its scenery we may set it down that here and that soon is to be a town of note. The climate of Nebraska is delightful. In summer the heat is constantly relieved by cool breezes from the prairies. There are very few diseases contracted in Nebraska. The drainage which the roll of the prairie affords, prevents the common disease of new countries fever and ague. The climate is very favorable to Pulmonary diseases.

A Sketch From Life.

BREAD UPON THE WATERS.

'Ah, Jacob, now you see how all your hopes are gone. Here we are, worn out with age—all our children removed from us by the hand of death, and ere long we must be the inmates of the poor-house.—Where, now, is all the bread you have cast upon the waters?"

The old, white-haired man looked up at his wife. He was, indeed, bent down with years, and age sat trembling upon him. Jacob Manfred had been a comparatively wealthy man, and while fortune smiled upon him, he had ever been among the first to lend a listening ear and a helping hand to the call of distress; but now misfortune was his. Of his four boys, none was left. Sickness and failing strength found him with, but little, and they left him penniless. Various misfortunes came in succession. Jacob and his wife were alone, and gaunt poverty looked them coldly in the face

'Don't repine, Susan," said the old man. 'True, we are poor, but we are not yet forsaken.'

'Not forsaken, Jacob? Who is there to help us now?'

Jacob Manfred raised his trembling fingers towards heaven.

'Ah, Jacob! I know God is our friend; but we should have friends here. Look back and see how many you have befriended in days long past. You cast your bread upon the waters with a free hand, but it has not yet returned to you.'

'Hush, Susan, you forget what you say. To be sure, I may have hoped that some kind hand on earth would lift me from the cold depths of utter want; but I do not expect it as a reward for anything I have done. If I have helped the unfortunate in days gone by, I have had my full reward in knowing that I have done my duty to my fellows." Oh! of all kind deeds I have done for my suffering fellows, I would not for gold have one of them blotted from my memory. Ah! my fond wife, it is the memory of the good done in life that makes old age happy. Even now, I can hear again the warm thanks of those whom I have befriended, and again I see their smiles!'

'Yes, Jacob,' returned the wife in a low tone, 'I know you have been good, and in your memory you can be happy; but alas! there is a present upon which we must look—there is a reality upon which we must dwell. We must beg for food, or starve!'

The old man started, and a deep mark of pain was drawn across his features.

'Beg!' he replied, with a quick shudder. 'No, Susan—we are—'

He hesitated, and a big tear rolled down his furrowed cheek.

'We are what, Jacob?'

'We are going to the poor-house!'

'Oh, God! I thought so,' fell from the poor wife's lips, as she covered her face with her hands. 'I have thought so, and I have tried to school myself to the thought: but my poor heart will not bear it.'

'Do not give up, Susan;' softly urged the old man, laying his hand upon her arm. 'It makes but little difference to us now. We have not long to remain on earth, and let us not wear out our last days in useless repinings. Come, come.'

'But when—when shall we go?'

'Now—to-day.'

'Then God have mercy upon us.'

'He will,' murmured Jacob.

The old couple sat for a while in silence. When they were roused from their painful thoughts, it was by the stopping of a light cart in front of the door. A man entered the room where they sat He was the porter of the poor-house.

'Come, Mr. Manfred,' he said, 'the guardians have managed to crowd you in the poor-house. The cart is at the door, and you can get ready as soon as possible.'

Jacob Manfred had not calculated the strength he should need for this ordeal. There was a coldness in the very tone and manner of the man who had come for him, that went like an ice-bolt to his heart, and with a deep groan he sank back in his seat.

'Come—be in a hurry,' impatiently urged the porter.

At that moment a carriage drove up to the door.

'Is this the house of Jacob Manfred?'

This question was asked by a man who entered from the carriage. He was a kind-looking man, about forty years of age.

'That is my name,' said Jocob.

'Then they told me truly,' uttered the new comer. 'Are you from the work-house?' he continued, turning towards the porter.

'Yes,'

'Are you after these?'

'Yes.'

'Then you may return. Jacob Manfred goes to no poor-house while I live.'

The porter gazed inquisitively into the features of the man who addressed him, and then left the house.

'Don't you remember me?' exclaimed the stranger, grasping the old man by the hand.

'I cannot call you to my memory now.'

'Do you remember Lucius Williams?'

'Williams!' repeated Jacob, starting up from his chair, and gazing earnestly into the face of the man before him.

'Yes, Jacob Manfred—Lucius Williams. That little boy whom, thirty years ago, you saved from the house of correction; that poor boy whom you kindly took from the bonds of the law, and placed on board one of your own vessels.'

'And are you—'

'Yes—yes—I am the man you made. You found me a rough stone from the hands of poverty and bad example It was you who brushed off the evil, and who first led me to the sweet waters of moral life and happiness. I have profited by the lessons you gave me in early youth, and the warm spark which your kindness lighted in my bosom has grown brighter ever since. With an affluence for life, I settled down to enjoy the remainder of my days in peace and quietness, with such good work as my hands may find to do. I heard of your losses and bereavements. I know that the children of your own flesh are all gone; but I am a child of your bounty—a child of your kindness—and now you shall still be my parent. Come, I have a home and a heart, and your presence will make them both warmer, brighter, and happier. Come my more than father—and you, my mother, come. You made my youth all bright, and I will not see your old age doomed to darkness.'

Jacob Manfred tottered forward, and sank upon the bosom of his preserver.—He could not speak his thanks, for they were too heavy for words. When he looked up again, he sought his wife.

'Susan,' said he, in a choking, trembling tone, 'my bread has come back to me!'

'Forgive me, Jacob.'

'No, no, Susan. It is not I who must forgive—God holds us in his hands.'

'Ah!' murmured the wife, as she raised her streaming eyes to heaven, 'I will never doubt Him again.'

A Coachman Sold by his Mistress.

The Chicago Times gives the following: For a year past, and until a few weeks ago, a notorious Cyprian, known by the name of Fanny Peel, has lived and pursued her course of shame in this city.—She was well known to the Mayor and to nearly all the city officers. Her stylish turnout and likely negro coachman have often attracted the admiring gaze of citizens in our principal streets, while the bedizened harlot reclined at her ease upon the luxurious carriage cushions.—The negro coachman handled the ribbons with an air, and was evidently proud of his position, if not of his disreputable mistress. Perhaps he was prouder still of his salary—for during all the time of this females residence in Chicago, the handsome darkey remained her faithful servant, and when she went away, he went with her!

The cyprian left this city for California some weeks ago. Her intention, as given out, was to go by the way of the Isthmus and take her coach and horses with her. The negro who had served her so long and faithfully here, and for whom she professed a strong attachment, was also engaged to accompany her, and take care of her on the way, and resume his position as her coachman on reaching San Francisco. Deluded darkey! On arriving in New Orleans the heartless Fanny sold carriage, horses and nigger to the highest bidder! With the proceeds of her pocket, she proceeded on her way, while the unhappy African, we are told, was forthwith shipped on a steamboat and conveyed to a sugar plantation up the Red River! It is said he brought a handsome price.—The intelligence of this nefarious speculation reached this city several days since, and it is this which is arousing the abolitionists. Where the excitement will end no one can tell.'

Snooks was advised to get his life insured. "Won't do it," said he—"it would be just my luck to live forever, if I should." Mrs. Snooks merely said: "Well, I would not my dear."

For the Tecumseh Herald

My last is gone.

My last—Oh God—my last is gone,
And with that one are left
One pressure to my soul to bear,
Of other joys bereft.
'Twas much to give those to the grave,
But—oh—twas not to be
As now in desolate loneliness,
With none to weep with me.

There stood by me upon this spot
In other days of grief
Those who could share with me my woe,
And lean me a relief
And so my heart broke not to feel
Its jewels, one by one
Torn from it, for it held a hope,
Alas—to be with none.

With none—and I must tread the hall
Now desolately lone
That once I trod in wealth of bliss
With many a welcoming one.
I shall not meet them there again,
Fallen idols of my breast,
And thou my last and loneliest,
They've laid thee with the rest.

And I am now alone on earth
A last rush of the tide
With all that floated with it once
Have perished from its side.
I knew that life was full of tears
For I had wept before
But—oh,—to weep in loneliness
Over hopes that come no more!

Important Railroad Movement.

We published on Saturday an item from the Railroad article of the Cincinnatti Commercial, which intimated that there was a strong probability that the Hamilton and Dayton Railroad would break off its dependence on Sandusky, or a forced connection with Cleveland, as an outlet for its freight and passenger business and take hold of, and urge to completion the Dayton & Toledo Road, now in an advanced stage of construction, its completion to Lima at an early day being a matter of certainty, and the laying of the remaining portion of the route to this city being a work eminently feasible, if the necessary funds can be secured.

In this connection, we notice with pleasure that there are strong indications that the Cincinnatti, Hamilton & Dayton Road may, ere long, take hold of the matter, and find an outlet for their immense business, in this direction. The Cincinnatti Commercial of Saturday speaking of this road, uses the following very significant language:—"It is probable that more important changes will be made upon the road soon—changes that may developе something of the power of this line eastward as well as toward the strongest lake point west of Buffalo. The cause of these changes will be, revivved."

We have neither time nor space to go into an extended review of the advantages which might result to all the parties concerned in this railway connection with Cincinnatti. It would be the shortest route from Cincinnatti to the lakes, by nearly 20 miles; and nearer for passenger travel by nearly 60 miles, than the route over the C, C. &C and Little Miami routes We have the finest line of steamers running between this city and Buffalo that the country can show. Through this route in the summer, the cost of railroad fare from the Queen city of the West to Lake Erie would be, at 3 cents, per mile, about $1,80 cheaper than over the Cleveland route; and the fare from Cincinnatti to Buffalo during the season of travel could be afforded by the Toledo route at a very much cheaper rate than by any other. So, too, of Freight, a difference of twenty or sixty miles less of railroad transportation, in our favor, could not fail to turn hither by far the greater portion of the immense freight business done between Cincinnatti and the Lake. We hope to chronicle still further movements in this direction soon Toledo Blade.

COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY.—We noticed some time since a call in the Ann Arbor Argus and Journal, numerously signed by some of the leading citizens of Washtenaw Co. calling for a convention to form a County Historical Society. The idea struck us very favorably and we have been waiting, hoping that some one at the County site would take up and recommend the matter to our county also. Out-side of Wayne, Monroe and Mackinaw counties, old Lenawee may be presumed to possess as much of Historical interest as any other county in the State, and ought to be able to contribute her quota towards the historical recollections of our State. We will therefore suggest that there be held, in the city of Adrian, on Tuesday evening the 16th day of February next, which is the first day of our next Circuit Court, a County Convention for the purpose of of organizing a Lenawee County Historical Society auxiliary to the State Historical Society. Will our entire county press, either notice this, or else suggest some other time? We hope if we do have it, that full notice will thus be given, and that every town in the county will be fully represented there

Filibusterism

Had the passé schemes of filibusterism, which do not now fail to find even Congressional defenders, been ten years ago proposed, in all their hard unscrupulous details, to the acceptance or rejection of an American Congress, the projecter would have been accounted a criminal and a madman But under the illusions and allurements of 'a Manifest Destiny,' and an 'Ostend Manifesto' doctrine, now and then shadowed forth by a leading and popular politician, the people have so familiarized themselves with these schemes of national robbery and plunder, and with the hopes aggrandizement from such a source, that many are secretly looking and hoping for the time to come, when they shall be put into execution.

The action of our government in the arrest and subsequent discharge of William Walker, will hardly succeed in, convincing the Nations of the earth, that it is in good faith opposed to the success of his bucaneering raids upon Nica augusan shores or have in fact any serious objections that they should be effectually supported by subjects of the American Government.

We are mortified to see any indications that this governmens is disposed to thus far imitate the duplicity and double dealing of the corrupt autocracies, and oligarchies of the old world, We regret it as it affects our reputation before the Nations of the earth, but we deplore it still more in view of its effects upon the moral sentiment of our own people.

It is always unfortunately potent in blunting the moral preceptions, and corrupting the moral sentiment of a people that immorality and open crime should receive countenance and support from those high in Authority. It is true that this does not at all effect or change the nature of crime, or diminish the guilt of those who indulge in it, but such is the infirmity of human nature, that place and power, stand and have always stood as half divine authority to common minds. Look at the influence of the administration of Fernando Wood upon the City of New York, as already and apt illustration of this tendency, and well may all good men unite in ever hoping and seeking that all our rulers should ever be, men of honest integrity equality and righteousness.

LITERARY NOTICES.

Godey's Lady Book,

The Febuary No of Godey is promptly upon our table. We have said so many good things of Godey, that there is little left us to say except that he keeps on improving every year and the Magazine is now upon its 56th vol 'The Old Stile' is a very fine steel plate engraving, the Fashion Plates are superb, as also are the work Patterns. Godey always gives some good original Music, and employs upon the Literay columns some of the best Magazine writers in the country. Mrs Sarah Jane Hale who has been for a long time associated, editor of the Ladies Book also leaves the impress of her mind and knowledged talent upon every consecutive number of this justly popular work.

The March.

We have, in the St Louis Republican some account of incidents to the Utah army in their march through the wilderness The army went through the south pass on the 24th, of Sept and on the following day an attack was made by the Mormons who fired at the packet and succeeded in stampeding the mules, but they were recaptured without loss On the 27th, they saw a party of Mormons, but were not disturbed by them. On the 3d, October the Mormons, succeeded in burning three supply trains near Hams Fork and in running off the oxen. On the second and fifth they burned the grass, but the army succeeded in putting out the fire before it reached the camp. On the 14th saw more Mormons but no attack was made The army was overtaken by a severe snow storm on the 17th, of October, the snow falling to the depth of eight inches; but aside from this storm, the weather had generally been favorable On the 19th, of November, Col. Cook reached and joined the main army; and all went into winter quarters very much disabled by the loss of animals which had died. A letter from Fort Scott says:

Wagons, mules, horses, harness, &c, in large numbers, were lost on the route But still Col. Cooke, pressed on, and finally we reached the head quarters of this division of the army. We must have lost on the march at least one half of the animals with which we set out, and those who were in advance of us, lost, perhaps, a greater proportion. For fifty or sixty miles before reaching this camp, one could never get out of sight of from twenty to fifty dead animals which had been lost by the army and several companies of traders and settlers en route for Salt Lake city.

Each camp ground was well marked by the carcasses of dead animals. The fatality among the oxen was far greater than that of either the horses or mules.

CONGRESSIONAL NEWS.

Washington, Jan. 18

SENATE.—Mr Seward presented the petition of 93 citizens of Phelps, N Y, praying that some means be adopted for a peaceful and gradual extinction of slavery, by taking compension out of the public treasury Laid on the table.

Mr. Harlan introduced a bill making a grant of land to Iowa, in alternate, sections, to aid in constructing a railroad in that State.

On motion of Mr Chandler, a resolution was adopted requesting the Secretary of War to forward a report, to the Senate with statements showing the number of troops stationed in Kansas for each quarter, from the 1st of January, 1855, to the present time.

A bill was passed authorizing certain officers and men who were engaged in the search for Sir John Franklin, to receive the medals presented them by the British Government.

The special order on the affair: Kansas was taken up.

Mr. Hale did not think this discussion ill timed or premature. The distinguished Senator from Illinois had spoken, and his speech had fully met the public expectation. He agreed with Mr. Douglas in opposition to the Lecompton constitution, but not because it was in contravention with principles and policy of the Nebraska bill. He opposed it for just the opposite reason, viz: Because he considered itin exact conformity with that act. He regarded it as part of the original programme and as the carrying our in letter and spirit.

He was inclined to think that in the controversy between Mr. Douglas and and the President, palm of victory ought to be awarded to the President. When the latter undertakes to bring in the Federal army to force the obnoxious constitution down the throats of the people of Kansas it is because he understands the Nebraska bill just as well as if he was in the Territory at the time that measure became a law.

Mr Hale was opposed to the whole thing from the begining to the end. He was opposed to the tree and foliage, and now he opposed the plucking of the ripe fruit.

Mr. Hale expounded his idea of popular soveriegnty, and then said allusion was made to the remark of Mr. Broderick, that Mr. Buchanan and his Cabinet were to blame for the existed state of Kansas He dissented from that opinion He thought that neither the present Executive nor his predecessor was the man to guide and control public events, but they were vance set in high places to show the distraction of public sentiment.

Mr. Hale read from of Mr. Buchanan's former speeches, in which he declared that all Christendom is leagued against the agains the South on this question of domestic Slavery Of course, remarked Mr Hale, the South can have no allies except those who are out of Christendom But what does Mr. Buchanan say in the next sentence? They have no allies to sustain their Constitutional rights, except the democracy of the North. There's a fight for you! All Christendom on one side, and the democracy of the North, on the other. [Hearty outbreaks of laughter.]

Mr Hale proposed speaking on the Dred Scott Decision, but before entering upon this branch of his remarks, at the suggestion of Mr. Seward, he gave way to a motion which prevailed, to proceed to the consideration of executive business and the Senate adjourned.

House.—A large number of bills were introduced and referred Among them was one by Mr. Taylor of New York, to promote the useful arts and to regulate the grauting of patents for invention.

DEAFNESS CURED.—The best remedy for deafness ever offered to the public, is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT Many cases of several years standing have been quickly and entirely cured by it; and thousands of recent cases caused by colds or obstructions of the ear chambers, have yielded to one or two applications. Full directions for use accompany each bottle. One of the most remarkable cures was at the Hartford Deaf and Dumb Asylum A boy, 15 years of age, named Benjamin Crawford, who had been born deaf, and was consequently dumb, was sent there for education—and, as an experiment, the Liniment was tried on him, and with the most complete success. He now hears as well as any one, and is rapidly learning to talk. The Liniment is for sale at all Drug stores

RHEUMATISM—NEURALGIA.—The agonies of Rheumatism and Neuralgia are among the most acute with which the human frame is ever afflicted, and have heretofore been found the most difficult to remove. Happily a remedy is now discovered by which the most obstinate cases can be immediately cured.—This sovereign remedy is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT, for sale by Druggists generally. It is only necessary for the sufferer to try it, to be assured of its efficacy.

A New Counterfeit Detector.

About the most useful thing that any person in business, can have in these times, is a correct and reliable Counterfeit Detector and Bank Note List. This want is now supplied.—Messrs. T. B. Peterson & Brothers have just commenced a publication of "Peterson's Philadelphia Counterfeit Detector and Bank Note List"—a monthly quarto publication which contains all the information that can be obtained in regard to all Counterfeits, Broken Banks, and the rates of discount on all the Bank Notes of the country. Messrs. Drexel & Co., the well known Bankers and Brokers, of this city, will supervise and make the corrections in each number of the list, so that it may be perfectly relied on, while the well known house of E. W. Clark & Co., Commission Stock and Exchange Brokers, will correct the Stock List.—Not being intended to subserve the purpose of any banking house, as most of the detectors do, it will be a useful and reliable publication to the whole business community, and we would advise all of our readers to remit the price of one years subscription to the pubishers at once for it. The price is but ONE DOLLAR a year. Two clubs, four copies for three dollars, 10 copies for $7,00; or 25 copies for $15,00. Address all orders to T. B. PETERSON & BROTHERS, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia.

FORGERY BY A DOG.—The Bangor [Me.] Union tells the following:

A large dog had been accustomed to get bits of money from his master to go to a meat stall to get his lunch of fresh meat. One day, when change was short the master gave Growler a piece of white paper, on which was an order for the meat. The dog, after much urging, carried it to the meat stall and received his food, and so for several days, when thinking one piece of paper as good as another would pick up pieces of white paper and carry them to the stall without applying to his master. It was not long before a long bill came in from the meat deal who had such confidence in the dog that did not think to look at the paper, and the dog himself was very fat. No arrests made, and the dog occupies as respectable position in society as ever.

A WARNING TO FLIRTS.—Miss Mary Butgess sued N. F. Wood, in Kanawha county, Virginia, last week, for damages for breach of promise.—It was proved in evidence that the young lady was a flirt, and the jury accordingly awarded her one cent damages.

"My dear Tom," said old Sheridan one day to his son, "I wish you would take a wife." "I have no objection whose wife shall I take?" said Tom.

These two lines fill out the column.

General News.

Washington, Jan. 18.

The correspondent of the Post says: The Minnesota constitution, subscribed with all the names of all the delegates and certified to by the Secretary of the Territory, has arrived, but Gov. Medary refuses to sign it. He says the copy sent to him, agreeably to the new constitution, he sent to the President.

The new Senators, Representatives and Delegates from Minnesota agree to certify that the Republican constitution is a true copy, and that the names signed are genuine. The committee on Territories had a meeting to day to settle the matter. The Lecomptonites feel sanguine of success, and boast they will carry the constitution through in less than 90 days.—The Administration is anxious to keep Minnesota out. Its supporters in the Senate will refuse to unseat Fitch and Bright, but will press actoin in the House against Davis and Darrow, of Maryland and Campbell, of Ohio, anti Lecomptonites.

Rochester, Jan 18.

In the Robertson case nothing of moment was brought to light. Several witnesses for defence were sworn, to prove motive on the part of Beigler for conspiracy against defendant Bank officers and directors testified that Robertson was engaged in the Bank upon one evening that Beigler swears was spent as his office. An attempt was made to introduce evidence, that old Dr. Beigler was seducer of Emilie Murr, to clear Robertson from insinuations made by young Beigler,—The object for introducing it, was also to show motives for conspiracy. The court decided it irrelavent. The summing up commences to morrow.

Richmond, Jan. 18.

The Legislature of this State to-day elected William L Jackson, Lieutenant Governor.

Middletown, Jan. 18.

The Republicans were triumphant at the city election. Dr. W. B Casey being elected Mayor by a majority of fifty-eight.

Madison, Ind. Jan. 18

The freight train on the Madison and Indianapolis Railroad, ran off the track near Elizabethtown, to day, owing to a displaced switch, and John Lautham, Jr. brakeman, was instantly killed.

New York, Jan. 18.

The Bank statement for this week, shows the following exhibit as compared with that of last week: Increase of loans, $681,000; increase of deposits, $1.948,059; decrease in circulation, $206,189; increase in specie, $1,034,428. Total amount of specie, $31,211,266.

Harrisburg, Pa. Jan. 18

The preparations for the inauguration of Gov. Packer are progressing. A large number of the military and citizens are arriving and the place of excitement. A large number of the military arrived by the Lebanon Valley Railroad, which opened to-day and connects with the Reading road.

Philadelphia, Jan. 18.

The case of Smith, charged with the murder of Richard Carter president of the Tamaqua Bank, was given to the jury this evening at 6 o'clock. They had not agreed on a verdict, and the court adjourned until morning.

Indianapolis, Jan 18

A circular is published here this morning, signed by many prominent Democrats of the State, calling a mass convention, to assemble at Indianapolis on the 22d of February. The circular says: "The convention of the 8th of January, reflects the sentiments of the party on some points, fully, of others it says nothing."

The Territorial question as presented by the President's Message, and the ensuing Congressional discussions, engrossed all minds, and the local interests of our own people were forgotten in the intensity of excitement arising out of the discussion of the fundamental rights and liberties of a free people. This state of things has been brought about, not so much by anything actually done by the voice and action of the delegates in convention represented as by what was omitted to be done in the excitement and confusion of the hour, and which is essential to the public interest and proved, when the excitement passed away, to be a source of undisguised dissatisfaction, and well grounded complaint.

St Louis, Jan 19.

The Republican has information from Fort Laramie through an Indian trader who arrived at Jefferson City yesterday and who reports meeting on the 23d, Dec., between 600 and 700 Cheyenne and Camanche Indians, returning from Salt Lake to their villages on black walnut hills, about 80 miles south east of Laramie, accompanied by about 20 Mormon leaders. Their intention is to remain in camp until spring, and then employ themselves under Mormon influence in harassing and cutting off the supply trains sent to the relief of Johnston. The Indians had been led to beleive that the Mormons had 80,000 fighting men, well equipped. They also spoke of the Mormon fortifications. A large number of the Indian allies had declared that the Mormons had no ides of running away.

WATER LIME—

Ames & Merriam's superior article with directions for using, for sale at wholesale or retail by E. TINDALL.

Lenawee County Farmer.

Tecumseh, Michigan, January, 1858.

What you do, do well.

After years and years of inculcating the above principle by the agricultural Press, that should govern farmers in all their labors, we find the world full of cultivators of the soil, who live and act, as though they had never read, nor heard of 'doing things well' in their lives. Everything they attempt to perform shows a lack of care attention, and knowledge of what is to their own interests. Wherever you find a farmer who has steadily grown rich by the sweat of his brow, you will find a man who does well whatever he performs. His house is always in good repair, well painted, &c.; his grounds around his dwelling neatly laid out, with an abundance of good fruit and shade trees his out houses commodious, well arranged, and also in good order. His cattle are of good stock and in good condition, and he has a system of doing work that accomplishes, what he undertakes, and he does not leave everything half done, as many farmers do, who drag through life, and die poor.

We are led to these few remarks by noticing an extract from the Hon J. R. Williams' address, President of the Michigan Agricultural College, at his inaugural before the Institution as follows:

Pass along any great thoroughfare, and you will soon come to a farmer who yards his cattle in the public highway, wastes the manure which should fertilize his fields, and allows the public to thread their breakneck passage among them. The next, perhaps, feeds his corn whole, and looses a third of its nutriment. Another deprives his pigs of light, and their growth stops. Another allows pestilential gases, generated under his barn to be inhaled by his stock. Another allows his cattle to drink out of mere mud holes, instead of pure water.—Another allows his sheep in winter to go without any water at all. The next exposes his calves and colts to the wintry storms, thus arresting their growth, while it would absolutely cost less to keep them growing and housed. The next has, perhaps, not a fit tool wherewith to work efficiently on his whole farm. Another sows poor or mixed seed, or not half enough, and consequently reaps half a crop. The next plows his land but 3 or 4 inches deep. He has but little faith in deep plowing and thorough pulverization of the earth, but has full faith in the signs of the zodiac, the moon and luck. He believes in good luck while putting in the seed, and has a realizing sense of ill luck in harvesting, costly experience in both theory and practice.

I could extend this list of practical errors to an indefinite length. Such facts prove, that instead of less, the farmer has more to learn practically about his business than any other man in the world. In fact, one third of the industry and energies of the farmers of our country are literally wasted in consequence of ingorance, and defiance of all rules of thrift and economy. The same reckleness among men in other pursuits, would result in immediate bankruptcy and starvation.

The Candle Tree.

This tree is confined to the valley of the Chagres, where it forms, the entire forest. In entering them a person might almost fancy himself transported in a chandler's shop. From all the stems and lower branches hang long cylindrical fruits, of a yellow wax color, so much resembling a candle as to have given rise to the popular appelation. The fruit is generally from two to three, but not unfrequently four feet long, and an inch in diameter. The tree itself is about twenty-four feet high, with opposite trifoliated leaves and large white blossoms, which appear throughout the year, but are in greater abundance during the rainy season. The 'Palo de Velas' belongs to the natural order 'Crescentraceæ,' and is a 'Parmentreia,' of which genus, hitherto, only one species, the 'Predulis,' De Cand., was known to exist. The fruit of the latter, called 'Quanschillote,' is eaten by the Mexicans, while that of the former serves for food to numerous herds of cattle. Bullucks, especially if fed with the fruit of this tree, Guinea grass, 'Batatilla (Ipomœa brachypoda Benth.,) soon get fat. It is generally admitted, however, that the meat partakes in some degree of the peculiar apple like smell of the fruit; but this is by no means disagreeable, and is easily prevented, if for a few days previous to the killing of the animal, the food is changed. The tree produces its principal harvest during the dry season, when all the herbaceous vegetation is burnt up, and on that account its cultivation in tropical countries is especially recommended. A few acres would effectually prevent that want of fodder, which is always most severely felt after the periodical rains have ceased.—Hookers Journal of Health.

Swamp Lands.

The following table shows the amount of land disposed of by the acts of 1849 and 1850, so far as these acts have been executed up to the 20th of September last. Under the act of 1849, which is alone applicable to Louisiana, the approval by the secretary of the Interior passes the fee and is tantamount to a patent. Thus it will appear that Lousiana has received an absolute title to 7,379,094 acres as that amount has been approved.

	Amount Selected	Amount Approved.
Ohio	54,488,12	25,640,71
Indiana	133,473.25	1,250,937,44
Illinois	3.235,273,48	1,369,140,72

Wisconsin	2,350,000,00	1,650,712,11
California
Total	54,174,281,76	40,133,564,51

The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, who furnishes the above figures, adds the following comment:

Of the 3,600,000 acres approved to the state of Missouri, patents have been issued for upwards of 1,900,000 acres. Several hundred thousand acres of the land selected by missouri is in dispute between the state and private citizens, the latter contending that the lands are not properly swamp lands and consequently not subject to the operations of the act of 1850. These disputed tracts are embraced in the amount set down in the above statement.

The total amount selected as swamp lands in the several states will astonish the country, as it was never contemplated that the law would embrace one fifth as much. Instead of the slections being only of overflowed lands, such as in their natural condition were worthless, hundreds of thousands of acres of the best lands have been covered by the claims under the swamp land act. Upward of 54,000,000 of acres have already been selected, and 40,000,000 of these selections have been approved.

AN INGRATE.—Matthew Griswold of Old Lyme (Ct.) saw a man named Wm. Austin, in the Sound on the bottom of a boat, in a perilous condition, a few days since, and rescued him from drowing; took him to his house, warmed, fed, and cared for him—took him to the cars and gave him $3 to reach Norwalk, where he said he lived. The next Saturday night, the ungrateful scamp entered the house of his benefactor, stole about $1,300 worth of property, but was caught at the Essex ferry with the property upon him, and has been bound over for trial. We move that the fellow be put back in the Sound where he was picked up and 'anchored.'—Ex

Patent Medicines.

ONE DOLLAR

WILL BUY

ONE OF THE BEST TURGATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public, namely DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REMEDY, that acts as a Cathartic, tonic, alterant and deobstruent better than any other medicine known. It is not only a Cathartic, but a Liver remedy, acting first on the Liver, to eject its morbid matter, then on the stomach and bowels to carry off the matter. Thus accomplishing two purposes effectually, without any of the painful feeling experienced in the operations of most Cathartics. It strengthens the system at the same time that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity.

DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely, Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the Invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects.

Though possessing rare medical powers, these Gums have been but little known to Physicians and never used in their prescriptions until used in the form of the Invigorator, which met with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known in its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure Liver Complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver and as a proof that the Invigorator relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator. Take it in small doses on retiring, and it assists nature in her operations. By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work as regularly as clock work.

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the Invigorator, which corrects all acidity and sourness of the stomach.

For an over-loaded stomach it has no equal as it relieves all oppressive symptoms, causing one to eat heartily. For a FAMILY MEDICINE generally, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR came to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints, and all diseases arising from a Diseased Liver. The testimonials of so many of our Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it, and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to Dyspeptics, for it made a complete cure before the first bottle was taken, and no we can eat anything edible without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain. Now what we want to say to all our readers is, if LIVER COMPLAINTS or DYSPEPSIA trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world. New Star Paper.

We take infinite pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER, and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty, and thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful vertues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of diseases incident to children as DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR; nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it; for it acts as a Cathartic in small quantity, and gently but effectually evacuates the system so thoroughly that we think we are doing a service to all in advising them, when they need medicine to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where great benefit has been received in diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels, where all other remedies failed to give relief. It had become so useful in our family that we will not be without it.—Jacksonville, Ills. Republican.

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE SICK.

Invalids, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Effects, and judge of their Virtues.

FOR THE CURE OF

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach,

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 1, 1856.

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir:—I have been troubled from one of the worst headache any body can have, for years. One of your Pills, it seems to me, would cure me, but a dose of their cathartic at once. If they will cure others as they do me, the fact is worth knowing.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. FERRIS, Clerk of Steamer Clara.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general medical practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their vitalizing action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of the organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M.D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

POST OFFICE, HARTLAND, LIV. CO., MICH., Nov. 18, 1856.

DR AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of medicine. They have done my wife more good than I can tell you. She had been sick and pining away for months. We call to be doctored at great expense, but got no better. She then commenced taking your Pills, which soon cured her by expelling large quantities of worms (dead) from her body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had it bad and my wife cured him with two doses of your Pills, who others around us paid from five to twenty dollars for Bills, and lost much time, without being cured entirely even then. Such a medicine as yours, which is actually good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Postmaster.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, WYOMING CO., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1856.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M.D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tetter, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the panacea of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had become incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her face, and a few boxes of your Pills have cleared her skin and made her fair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her. ADA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PLEASANT HOME, SAVANNAH, GA., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until, by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, BATON ROUGE, LA., 5 Dec., 1851.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are an excellent remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, and a Dinner Pill, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Inflammation, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town and almost every hamlet of the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country, on this continent, without some personal experience of its effects; and fewer are the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over the subtle and dangerous diseases of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasanter and safer remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the insidious enemy that steals upon them unprepared. We have abundant grounds to believe the CHERRY PECTORAL saves more lives by this complaints it prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable, nor neglect them until no human skill can master the inexorable canker that, fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and how they know too the virtue of this remedy, we need not say more than to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce it the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely on it the best agent which our skill can furnish for their cure.

Lines in a Son's Bible.

Remember, love, who gave thee this,
When other days shall come—
When she who had your earliest kiss,
Sleeps in her narrow home
Remember 'twas a mother gave
The gift to one she'd die to save.

That mother sought a pledge of love
The holiest for her son;
And from the gifts of God above
She chose a goodly one;
She choose for her beloved boy
The source of life, and light, and joy:

And bade him keep the gift—that when
The parting hour shall come,
They might have hope to meet again,
In her eternal home.
She said her faith in that would be,
Sweet incense to her memory.

And should the scoffer in his pride,
Laugh that fond gift to scorn,
And bid him cast that pledge aside,
That he from youth had borne:
She bade him pause and ask his breast,
If he, or she, had lov'd him best!

A parent's blessing on her son
Goes with this holy thing;
The love that would retain the one
Must to the other cling,
Remember, 'tis no idle toy,
A mother's gift—remember, boy!

Electioneering Joke.

Mr. C——, a lawyer of this city, who was a candidate for an important office last fall, on the Republican ticket, tells a good joke, in which he was the victim.—He had been about the country "stumping it," and circulating his "slips," and was returning to this city on the Central Road, when he was accosted by a young fellow on the cars who shook hands cordially with him, and said:

'I want to get a few more of those, if you can let me have them, as I don't think I shall have enough.'

C——thought, of course, that the fellow was after some more "slips" and he searched his pockets for more, but was unable to find any

"I declare," said he, "I haven't any by me at present, but if you will give me your address, I will send you some when I get to Detroit. How many do you want?"

"Why, you left me two dozen bottles, and I would like to get another dozen!"

"Another dozen!" exclaimed C——; 'I don't exactly understand you."

The fellow looked into C——'s face a little closer, and asked:

"Why, another dozen of that 'Yellow Golden Horse Ointment.' Aint you the man that sells it?"

C——wilted; and ever since, the only thing necessary to open his eyes is to say within his hearing, "Horse Ointment—got another dozen?" The best of all is, however, that he enjoys the joke as well anybody.—Det. Adv. Sipt, 1st 1857.

—NICELY DONE—At a certain eating house a day or two since, a very lean, cadaverous looking mortal, was so allured by the inviting appearance of a ten pound turkey all done up in "fixings," that he unconsciously uttered the ejaculation that he could eat it up in ten minutes.

"What'll you bet you can?" asked a snob, standing at the door.

The lean and hungry Cassius immediately responded, "Will you pay for it?"

"Yes."

"Well then, I'll bet you a drink."

"It's a bet," said the snob

The lean man immediately set to. The choicest part of the fat and savory monster were consumed with a most enviable relish, but upon the expiration of the ten minutes he found himself stuffed up to the brim, and the turkey not a third domolished. Rising very coolly he acknowledged that he couldn't go it, and quite as coolly forked 12½ cents for two whiskey toddies—lost wager. Snob looked blank upon being suddenly struck with the idea that he had been done up in a decidedly cheap package, paid down two and a half dollars for the turkey, and left his friend enjoying digestion and a prime smoke by the stove, considerably the better for a first rate dinner for a nine pence.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN GREATNESS AND MEANNESS.—What I must do is all that concerns me, and not what the people think This rule, equally arduous in actual and in intellectual life may serve for the whole distinction between greatness and meanness. It is the harder, because you will always find those who think they know what is your duty better than you know it. It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after your own; but the great man is he who, in the midst of the crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Emerson.

State Legislature—Extra Session.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE.

Fellow Citizens of the Senate and House of Representatives:

The sessions of the Legislature are limited in effect, by the Constitution, to a period of forty days, once in two years.

A considerable portion of the time of your last session was necessarily devoted to a disposition of the grants of land made by Congress to aid in the construction of Railroads, and there was scarcely time left to perfect other measures of legislation that were indispensible.

It would have been much more in consonance with my feelings, if the expense which must necessarily be incurred by an Extra Session could have been avoided, but it has seemed to me that public interests of great magnitude imperitively demand it.

One of the most important measures of the last session, that of re-districting the State, for the Circuit Courts, was passed by the House of Representatives but was not reached in the Senate for want of time—and consequently in the counties of Gratiot, Mason, Manistee Manitou, Emmett, Oceana, and several other unorganized counties, no provision was made for holding Courts. Civil contracts for the payment of debts cannot be enforced, nor is there any mode by which the guilty violators of the law can be brought to justice. The imminent peril in which a large portion of our constituents are thus placed, would of itself be a justification for calling you together; and I trust that your immediate action will provide for their necessities. The amount of labor and travel imposed upon the Judges, under the present arrangement of Circuits, is very unequal—and it is submitted to your judgment, whether the present Judicial Districts can be so modified and arranged as to equalize the duties and labors of the Judges, and include the whole State within the eight Judicial Circuits. Or if this cannot be done, whether a new Circuit ought to be created.

I invite your attention to the report of the Commissioner of the Land Office, and especially to that part in which he has assigned his reasons for witholding the Swamp Lands granted to the State by Congress, from sale, under the Act of 14th of February last. The third section of the Act, required the Commissioner to advertise in every county in the State, in which a newspaper is published, all the lands offered for sale by their legal sub-divisions. This was undoubtedly an oversight of the Legislature, for after a careful computation by the Commissioner he ascertained, that the expense of advertising would exceed by far the cash receipts for the land.

I feel confident, therefore, that you will concur with me in the opinion, that the Commissioner assumes a proper responsibility in witholding the lands from sale.

My opinions of the duties and responsibilities of the Legislature, in assuming the control of this grant, to create offices and employ engineers and laborers for the purpose of draining the lands, or a fund, out of the proceeds of their sale to be expended under the direction of the State, in their drainage; but rather to dispose of them in all the districts where there are settlements, at such a low price as would justify the purchaser in making the necessary provision for their drainage and improvement.

If in so disposing of them we shall confine their sale to actual settlers, we shall have a guarantee that the purchaser would be prompted by self interest to make such improvements as would render his lands productive and valuable.—The depression in the price of land, and all other articles, caused by the great reduction in the amount of Bank circulation, upon which we are unfortunately compelled to rely mainly for currency, renders it improbable that any considerable quantity of lands would bring the minimum price established by law, of five dollars per acre. I therefore respectfully recommend such a modification of the Act, as will reduce the minimum to one dollar twenty-five cents per acre, and that the expense of such advertising and selling be reduced to the lowest practical amount, with such other modifications as your wisdom shall suggest.

My opinions are unchanged, that the net proceeds of these lands, after the payment of our public debt, should be sacredly devoted to an educational fund, and I submit to your own judgment whether the Agricultural College, now in successful operation, should not have some endowment to secure its permanency and usefulness.

The financial embarrassment and distress which has overspread the country, and which has so sensibly affected the receipts into the National Treasury, has also seriously diminished the revenues upon which reliance had been placed to replenish the State Treasury. The State levied a direct tax in 1856 of about sixty five thousand dollars, and in 1857 of about eighty thousand dollars. This tax is levied and collected, and the county Treasurers are required to make their returns and settle with the Auditor General and State Treasurer.

A much larger portion of tax than is generally supposed is levied upon unimproved and non resident lands. The County Treasurers, therefore, instead of paying the moneys collected into the State Treasury, return to the Auditor General, for the State tax, the delinquent tax on the non-resident lands, which in a majority of the counties is fully equal or more than sufficient to pay their proportion of State tax. It will thus be perceived that very little money comes directly into the State Treasury. If the taxes on these non-resident lands are not paid, they are returned to the several counties to be sold, and if not redeemed by the owner within one year after being sold, they become forfeited to the purchaser; or if no purchaser is found, they are forfeited to the State

The amount of lands returned and forfeited to the State has been greatly enhanced the present year, not only on account of the great scarcity of money, but because an impression has been industriously circulated that the titles to the lands sold for taxes were invalid; that the State did not mean to preserve her faith with the purchasers; and that by some technical quibble, the original owner could dispossess the purchasers, and avoid the payment of a tax altogether.

Such an opinion, if well founded, besides its manifest injustice, would deprive us of one of the pricipal sources of State revenue. Very considerable receipts were also anticipated, when you were last in session, from the sale of Swamp Lands, which has been entirely cut off by the judicious action of the Commissioner, in witholding the lands from sale, to which I have referred.

Through the operation of these causes, unforeseen and temporary in their character and duration, you will perceive by reference to the Report of the State Treasurer, that he will be unable to redeem the two hundred and sixteen thousand dollars of our bonds that fall due on or before the first of January next, and meet the appropriations, for our various State Institutions, and for the current State expenses, which were made at your last session.

In this exigency, it devolves upon you, as the Representatives of the people, to determine the proper course to be pursued.

The resources of our State are undiminished—the specific tax upon Railroads is more than sufficient to pay the entire interest upon our funded debt, which is very small, amounting to only two hundred and sixty-nine thousand four hundred and sixty-seven dollars. We have about six millon acres of Swamp Land, a large portion of which is valuable.

We have an industrious, enterprising and productive population, who, notwithstanding they feel the effects of the commercial revulsion which is spreading over the civilized world, are curtaining their expenses, practising the most rigid economy, and by their unflagging labors, in our rich mines—in our vast forests—in our productive fisheries—and in the cultivation of our exuberant soil, are annually adding millions to the wealth of the State

Can we abandon discontinue any of our State Institutions? Those of learning, all all of which are in a flourishing condition? Or the State Prison or the House of Correction? Are we not too elevated in the scale of civilization and Christian refinement to relinquish the Asylums for the Deaf, Dumb and Blind, and the Insane? Can we reject the appeals to our humanity and benevolence, from these unfortunate classes in every county in the State, to provide for their care and education? I think I hazard little in asserting, that if an appeal were made directly to the people, their awakened spirit of benificence would not rest satisfied while these sufferers are left uncared for.

The State tax for the last three years has been exceedingly light not exceeding one half of a mill on a dollar, on the valuation of the property—while the average State tax from the years eighteen hundred and thirty-eight to eighteen hundred and fifty, averaged about three mills on the dollar. In the State of Ohio, the State tax for a number of years, averaged over five mills on the dollar of valuation—and yet during the present derangement, in currency and business, it might seem burdensome and inexpedient to increase the rate of taxation. This necessity can undoubtedly be avoided by authorizing a temporary loan of fifty thousand dollars, to meet the deficit in the State tax of this year to which amount we are so properly limited by the Constitution, and also if found necessary by the issue and sale of stocks sufficient to redeem those previously issued, and falling due the present year.

I invite your attention to the Report of the State Treasurer, which states with great exactness, and particularly the diminution in the receipts as compared with previous years. It will also be perceived that he has paid $147,035,34 of the public debt, during the three years of his administration.

The people are interested in knowing that a rigid economy is observed in the appropriation and expenditure of money by their representatives and agents, and I take this occasion to say that where money has been expended through agents of my appointment, and under my supervision, it has been done with a fidelity to the public interests worthy of praise No money has been expended for personal or partisian ends, and the Treasury has been well guarded against the assaults of fraudulent claimants.

In my message of January last, I had the honor of calling your attention to the condition of those of our citizens who had emigrated to Kansas, for the purpose of finding a home, and co operating with the friends of freedom in prohibiting the introduction and establishment of human slavery in that great Territory—they had for nearly two years, been exposed to the persecution and violence of an infuriated ruffian mob, who, instiagted by the slave power of the, country crossed into Kansas from the State of Missouri, and drove them from their homes—burned their houses—plundered their effects—destroyed their property—pressess, and murdered many of the people. Others were seized and arraigned before the Courts of the Territory, and subjected to chains and imprisonment, under the pretence that for seeking peaceably to establish free institutions they were guilty of treason against the Constitution and government of the United States. During this long and unequal struggle, the United States government, to whom the people had a right to look, as their natural and constitutional guardian, with a full knowledge of the facts, made public by an official investigation of Congress, shamelessly lent its aid and sympathy to the oppressors.

It is no matter of wonder that the barbarities practiced there, and the culpable conduct of the government should have excited the indignant feeling of the people in the free States, and throughout christendom, and voluntary contributions to a very large amount were freely made and forwarded to sustain those who had thus been reduced by cruel treatment, to want and starvation.

Partaking in the general sympathy, and anxious that the archieves of State should contain the earnest and solemn protest of the people against the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, and the subsequent acts by which Slavery was sought to be introduced into Kansas, the Legislature appropriated ten thousand dollars for the aid and releif of emigrants from the State of Michigan to the territory, to be drawn for that purpose at the discretion of the Governor. After becoming satisfied of the necessities of the people by an extensive correspondence, and having received the offer of the National Kansas committee, to disburse the money under my direction, without expense to the State—I transmitted to the Secretary of that committee one thousand dollars, to be expended exclusively in the purchase of seeds to be distributed among the necessitous Michigan emigrants. I have received Mr. H. B. Hurd, the Secretary of the Committee at Chicago, his report, attached to which is the report of Mr. E. B. Whitman, sub-agent in Kansas, with vouchers for the distribution of the seeds which satisfy me that the expenditure was justly and properly made. I have also received numerous letters from Michigan emigrants, and others, expressing their joy and thankfulness at the great relief thus afforded.

The atrocious attempt to extend and perpetuate Slavery in Kansas, through the influence and agency of the Government of this Uninion, which was founded to establish justice and secure the blessings of liberty"—will constitute one of the darkest chapters in our history and has been thwarted by the zealous efforts and sacrifices of the the people in the free States, in which our own has borne an honorable and conspicuous part.

A very serious breach in the St. Marie's Ship Canal the las Summer, has rendered that great work a source of anxiety to the State authorities in whose care it is intrusted. It was probably save from destruction by the timely intervention and aid of the United States officers and men, who appened to be there I have requested Mr. Burt, late Superintendent of the Canal, and an engineer of experience, to make a report of its present condition, with the hope that Congress, at its present session, will see the necessity of an appropriation to make it secure and permanent. The vast interest concerned in the navigation of the upper Lakes which are rapidly increasing every year, renders it highly important that this great National work should be placed as far as possible beyond the hazard of destruction I am assured that our members of Congress will remit no effort for its accomplishment.

I have received a communication from the Judges of the Supreme Court, asking for certain modifications in the Statutes, made necessary by the establishment of that tribunal, which is herewith transmitted.

With the confident hope that your deliberations will result in the adoption of wise and judicious measures, let us invoke the aid of that good Providence which has guided us hitherto, in our endeavors to advance the welfare, prosperity and honor of the State.

KINSLEY S. BINGHAM.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER, Jan. 20, 1858.

Thought.

Like the wind through aisles of a cathedral, sweeps the stream of thought through the chambers of the brain. It may linger awhile, playing a melancholly music, but it is not thine, thou knowest not whence it cometh. It flashes on like lightning from heaven, when you least expect it, and all that is thine is to recognize its presence. As the flute in the hands of the master renders a wonderful harmony, so it is with men. The mysterious fabric of the brain, with its organization of exquisite fineness, is but a flute or a bugle and the breath of the master is but a living God. Reader, what is memory but a shadow of the past? When events have lost the fullness of the present reality they yet leave an uncertain image in the rear. On some it falls like sunbeams on the mountain summits, lightning them up with glory; like the deepest shades of midnight around the mountain's base it falls upon others.—The saddest recollections of some men, are but as the shadow of a butterfly on the garden noontide—they cover but an atom of the soul, and that but for a moment—those of others are like the image of the earth cast upon the face of heaven that reaches to eclipse the fartherest star.

A Poet's Estimate of Americans.

In a letter from New York to the London Illustrated News, Charles Mackay, records the following observations upon the peculiar characteristics of the people of the United States:

'The Americans are a people with an immense continent to occupy and replenish, and with a national future before them more brilliant than that of any nation under the sun. They are a people of ideas as large as their political liberty and as expansive as their Union. In addition to this they are a community of traders, rather than of workers. If the Englishman works for the world, the American tradesfor the world. Labor may be called the characteristic of the one, and speculative enterprise of the other.

'The Englishman works best; the American trades best. Of late years the unparalled growth of the city of New York—a city far richer than Paris, and second only to London in extent of its commercial operations—has encouraged the idea that it was impossible to set limits to its enterprise and prosperity. The late influx of California gold has added strength to the conviction. New York has rapidly become a city of palaces—palaces of white marble, to which no city in the European and Asiatic hemisphere can offer a parallel. Marble hotels accommodating a thousand guests; marble and granite warehouses, shops and stores; marble dwelling houses, which kings of the Old World might envy, have arisen on every side; and Broadway has become beyond comparison, the richest, gayest, and most splendid street in the world—dwarfing the Regents street of London.'

Not when all is gay around thee,
Not when mirth is smiling bright,
Not when pleasures spell hath bound thee,
Nor on folly's festal night;
Not when hope is fresh at ever,
Not when thou art glad and free,
Not in such an hour,—Oh never!
Be this token traced by thee.

But if thou art sad and lonely
When the hour of mirth is past,
Or thy dream of pleasure, only
Woke to sink in gloom at last;
In an hour when none are round thee,
Should thy dark eye thither stray,
Oh! when such an hour hath found thee,
Think of one that's far away.

Michigan State Medical Society.

The annual meeting of the State Medical Society was held in Detroit on the 20th inst., at which, we learn from the Free Press there were quite a number of Physicians from the city and country.

The President, Dr. N. B. Stebbins, took the Chair; Dr. E. P. Christie, Secretary.

The election of new members,—six in all,—and the discussion of a resolution recommending the Regents of the University to investigate closely the character and preliminary education of candidates who desire to be pupils in the Medical Department, occupied the forenoon.

In the afternoon the President delivered an address on the subject of "Medicine an inductive science, and Hipocrates the Father of Medicine," a copy of which was asken for publication. Dr. J. Adams Allen was elected President for the ensuing year, by a majority of six over Dr Patterson. Dr J. A. Brown was elected Vice President and Dr. E. P. Christie, Secretary. A committee of three was appointed to report at the next annual meeting on the proper means to be used to legalize the procuring of subjects. The discussion of resolutions, the reading of reports and essays, and the appointment of members to report on specified subjects at the next meeting of the Society,—which was appointed to be held at Coldwater,—occupied the remainder of the afternoon and evening sessions, when the Society adjourned until the next annual meeting.

☞ We attended last evening a meeting of the members of the Lenawee County Bar, at the residence of T. M. Cooley, Esq., in this city. It was, indeed, a fine social gathering, and we left it with the certainity that we had enjoyed the hospitality of one of our best citizens, in the way of excellent Oysters, Turkeys, Cider and Cigars. We shall long remember that happy night, and the happy faces of the legal faculty we saw there.

Mr. Cooley, we learn, has recently received the appointment of reporter of the decisions of the supreme court in this State. His selection for this duty, for which he has rare ability, justifies us in saying to the appointing power, "Well done thou good and faithful servants."

We hope only that he will be as able to make good reports of our Supreme Court decisions, as we are truly able to make of his great integrity and hospitality.—Adrian Watchtower.

A fugitive Slave Decision.

The Supreme Court of the State of Illinois has recently rendered a decission of some importance, bearing upon the liabilities of those who aid in the escape of fugitives from servevude, during their progress through a free State. An action was brought by a citizen of Missouri against the Illinois Central Railroad Co., to recover the value of a runaway slave, who had been permitted to ride from Cairo to Chicago in their cars and thus been aided in his escape from service, the conductor of the train having cognizance of the fact that the negro was the plaintiffs slave under the laws of Missouri. The declaration also contained a count in Gover for the conversion by the defendant, in the State of Illinois, of the plaintiff's slave held to service under the laws of Missouri.

The decision of the court was, in substance, that the Constitution of the State of Illinois prohibits slavery, and therefore negroes within its jurisdiction are presumed to be free; and that the conditions of all peasons within the State can be determined according to its own laws and institutions, limited or controlled in this respect only by the constitution of the United States and the constitutional laws of Congress. That under these limits, the State constitution is paramount law; and that the citizen of a slave State, who owns property in a negro under the laws of his own State, having no extra-territorial operation, can assert no property in or power over a negro under the State authority, in a free State. That the act of Congress of 1850, by necessary implication, repeals the Fugitive Slave law of 1793, and seems intended to confine jurisdiction to Federal Courts, in execution of the Fedral laws on the subject of the reclamation of fugitive slaves. That the Fedral courts, therefore, are the proper forum for causes arising under the constitution of the United States and the laws of Congress made under its authority; and the State tribunals—at least unless jurisdiction is expressly conferred—cannot take cognizance of such causes.

The judgement for the defendants was affirmed.

An Independent Supreme Court.

We have regretted to see an apparent disposition on the part of some of the Press in this State, to find fault with, and treat as an unnecessary extravagance, the establishment of an Independent Supreme Court in this State. We say that we regret it, for we do not think that there was any act of our last legislature that is more calculated to confer lasting benefit upon the Country, and that does more entitle them to the gratitude of its citizens.

There are other acts of which we are not so well pleased to speak. That which mutilated and enfeebled our most excellent and effective Maine Liquor Law, was a most unfortunate and unasked for act, so far as the wishes and interests of the people were concerned and yet they must be held reponsible for it.

But the old system of a Supreme Court made up of Circuit Judges in Bank has long since become exploded, in almost every Country or State which has tried it. The case is never twice tried in fact. It soon becomes a matter of courtesy with the Judges not to over rule each others decisions made upon the Circuits, however incorrect or unfortunate they may have been, and thus the forms and expense of a review of the case upon an appeal to the Supreme Court, becomes but a form and expense, and nothing more.

An Independent Supreme Court will make our Circuit Judges more careful to dec de right, as they are subject to review not by themselves merely, but by others, and they will bear a pride in so deciding as not to be often overruled—whil it will lessen litigations by making our decisions more permanent and less conflicting, and also at the same time from mere local particularities and influences. Ten years from this, Michigan instead of regretting, will bless the day that first gave to her the character and protection of an Independent Supreme Court.

ADRIAN DAILY WATCHTOWER.—Which for some reason unknown and inexplicable to us, has not been laid upon our table for more than a year, we welcome to our exchange again. We confess ourselves pleased with, and always ready to exchange Editorial courtesies, and while we always held ourself free to express our actual sentiments upon any subject, no matter who may agree or differ from us we are never annoyed at the same independence in others. The Daily Tower is considerably enlarged, well printed on good paper, and brings us the latest telegraphic dispacthes at 9 o'clock A. M. instead of 4 o'clock P. M., from Detroit each day. With 7,000 inhabitants we should think that Adrian should now have two good dailies, and that the Expositor should follow the example of the Watch-Tower in this respect.

THE NEWS FROM MR. RUSSELL.—Letters were recieved yesterday from Albert Crane, Esq., in relation to the dissapearance of Wm H. Russell, of the Russell House, confirming the intelligence he communicated on Monday by telegraph. He had conversed with the officers and men employed on the steamers America and received from them such information as rendered it certain that Mr. Russell went out on the steamer as a passenger on her trip from Boston, Dec. 16th and was deranged. The gentleman supposed to be Mr. Russell answered his discription perfectly, made the acquaintance of very many persons on board the steamer, was very free in conversation, spoke of his residence at Detroit, talked very much on the subjec of his Hotel in that city, spoke of his family, and alluded to various circumstances, which were mentioned to Mr. Crane, and which satisfied him beyond all doubt that the person referred to was no other than Mr. Russell. We are glad to learn that the necessary steps have already been taken to return him to his home and friends.—Det. Adv. 22nd.

General News.

St. Louis, Jan. 25.

A gentleman from Leavenworth on the 20th, who arrived here this evening, reports having traveled from Weston to Bocuville in company with a messenger bearing dispatches from Calhoun to members of the Cabinet at Washington, the tenor of which as derived from the messenger is, that Calhoun rejected the returns which were sent to Denver, instead of himself, on the ground that in accordance with the Lecompton schedule they are illegal and therefore void. This gives the State officers to the Democrats also one majority in the Council and 2 in the House.

Mr. Stover, Democratic member of the Legislature, was shot, in the stage, between Wyandotte and Lawrence. He will probably die.

Henderson was still in custody at Lawrence.

New York, Jan. 25.

New Orleans, Jan. 25.

The Tennessee, from Vera Cruz on the 21st, has arrived.

The country is in a complete state of anarchy. Nearly all the mail stages between Vera Cruz and the capital, had been robbed. Nearly every state and town were pronouncing against Comonfort.

The city of Mexico was in a state of seige.

On the 11th, Zuloaga's brigade, which was the first to declare the Dictatorship pronounced against Comonfort. He holds the citadel and barracks at San Augustine and Santa Domingo. Comonfort was refused admittance to the last named place. He then assembled 2,000 troops at the palace, with artillery, and arrested Gen. Zuloaga, but afterwards released him on parole. A portion of Zuloaga's brigade is in favor of Zuloaga for the Presidency. Others favor Santa Anna.

On the 15th San Augustine was attacked by Comonfort's troops, but they were repulsed. All foreigners had hoisted the flags of their respective countries.—Confusion reigned in the Capital.

New York, Jan 25.

The Washington correspondent of the Tribune, under the date of to-day, says that ex-Secretary Stanton has just arrived from Kansas. He saw a gentleman at Independence on the day of his departure who had received a letter that morning from Calhoun, stating that the pro-Slavery men had carried the Legislature.

Mr. Stanton thinks the result depends entirely upon Calhoun in giving certificates and if the Free State men are defrauded Calhoun cannot return to the Territory without hazard to his life. Mr. Stanton represents the election frauds as monstrous, open and admitted. People at Weston and along the river admitted that nine young men had gone over in hacks and voted as often as they chose, without opposition. He thinks Calhoun will come with the Lecompton Constitution. He says that Slaveholders are moving out of Missouri, and the effect of the Kansas policy will be to make Missouri a free State.

The grand jury have refused to find a bill of indictment against General Walker.

CONGRESSIONAL NEWS.

Washington, Jan 25.

HOUSE.—The House went into committee of the whole on the state of the Union on the invalid Pension Bill.

Mr. Gartrell made a speech in support of Slavety. The time for apology was past. The Southern people are a unit and stand up before the world to defend and justify the institution of Slavery.

Mr. Washburn of Wisconsin reviewed the Secretary of the Treasury's report exposing what he regarded as its fallacies.

Mr. Granger accused the Administration of extravagance in increasing the expenditures 18 or 20,000,000 annually while the revenue has been run down to 20 or 30,000,000. One part of the army is surrounded by snow and the Mormons and another is playing second fiddle to Slavery in Kansas, and the remainder are fighting for honor and Billy Bowlegs.—[Laughter.] He also argued in favor of a protective tariff.

Mr. Bingham said the House should not recognize the right of the President to dictate to them in what manner they shall discharge their duties. Notwithstanding the threats of the Southern States that they will go out of the Union, unless Kansas be admitted under the Lecompton Constitution, under no possible state of things would he give to it his sanction.—That instrument is not the will of the people of Kansas. Its provisions are in direct conflict with the Constitution and the principles of eternal justice. Let the supporters of the Lecompton Constitution look to it that free men of Kansas are not pressed to the point where forbearance ceases to be a virtue. Kansas is filled with free men who know their rights.

The Committee arose, and the House adjourned.

SENATE.—The report of the Com. on the neutrality laws was presented. It reviews at length the whole case, saying in conclusion, the law of 1794 equally with that of 1818 was founded in wise policy to preserve the peace of the country and maintain amity and amicable relations with foreign States. It denounces its penalties only against those, whether citizens or foreigners, who in its jurisdiction, abuse the protection and hospitalities of the laws by secret and unlawful practices to wage war against nations with whom we are at peace, and in more than one case dishonoring the American flag, used to shield them in their acts.

ICE.—This product of the Northen frosts has now become an absolute necessity of the great body of the people during all seasons of the year, yet the first introduction of ice on an eastern ship, caused quite as much excitement among the ancient inhabitants of this city as though the vessel had brot the plague. The city authorities stirred in the matter, and with a zeal in behalf of the people worthy the best of causes, proceeded to discharge the crystalized mass into the Mississippi. But we, their descendents, have learned that there is not only no evil but a positive good in the use of ice; its daily consumption goes steadily on, the winter as well as summer months, not simply by those frequenting public houses but also by the members of private households. Now, the failure of the ice crop would produce almost as much consternation in New Orleans as the recurrence of the potato rot.—This is what many begin to fear for the coming summer. It is now the middle of January and no merchantable ice has yet been formed either in Fish pond or still more northern winter harvest fields. The bare contemplation of the failure of ice almost creates a shudder. What shall cool the burning brow of the fever patient if the ice fail? Whence will come the wintry flavor to the varied drinks that delight us in the summer time?—It were a calamity we may pray Boreas and all his icy train to prevent.—N. O. Picayune.

State Legislature—Extra Session.

Lansing, Jan. 22.

The Senate met at ten o'clock.

Mr. Pattison offered a resolution empowering the President of the Senate to fill such vacancies as may occur among the messengers of that body. Adopted, and vacancies filled.

Mr. Jerome offered a resolution granting the use of the Senate chamber to the Universalist society for divine worship each Sabbath during the time the Legislature may be in session. Adopted.

A motion was made to adjourn over until Monday, but it was stated by the chairman that the Judiciary Committee would probably have a bill to report to-morrow morning, and the Senate thereupon adjourned till that time.

The House met at nine o'clock.

Several petitions were presented in reference to swamp lands and re-apportioning the judicial districts of the State.

Mr Chase offered the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, It has been represented in the annual report of the State Treasurer that the surplus funds of the State have been largely diminished, and that the Trust funds have been loaned to a large amount, and that he will be unable to preserve inviolate the credit of the State without legislative aid,—therefore.

Resolved, That the State Treasurer be, and he is hereby requested to report to this House the amount of funds now remaining in the treasury, and where the same are kept.

On motion of Mr. McMahon, both preamble and resolution were laid on the table.

The House then adjourned until two o'clock.

In the afternoon Mr. Goodrich, of Genesee, offered a resolution ordering five hundred copies of the Congressional debates upon the grant of swamp lands to the State of Michigan at the time that question was pending in Congress; also, the act granting the same; to be printed for the use of the House. Lost.

A resolution was offered to repeal the joint resolution of the last session appropriating $10,000 to Kansas. Laid on the table.

Mr. Chase offered the following preamble and resolution:

Whereas, In consequence of the unexplained and extraordinary increase of the expenses of carrying on the State government for the past three years over the three preceding years, notwithstanding the proportionate increase in taxes levied during said time; and

Whereas, It has been recommended by the State Treasurer, and deemed necessary by the Governor, to convene Legislature in extraordinary session, among other things, to inquire into the state of the treasury, and pass such measures as will grant relief, and pay at maturity the liabilities of the State; and it being of vital importance to the people of this State to know what the reasons of said increase of expenses are, and why the surplus funds of the State have been expended and so large a loan made from the trust funds;

Resolved, That a committee consisting of five of the members of this House be appointed to investigate in detail the affairs of the State treasury, and have power to send for papers and persons and take the examination of witnesses.

Several amendments were adopted, and the whole resolution then voted down.

A similar resolution was offered by Mr McMahon, which, after some remarks by Messrs. Brownell and Gregory, was laid on the table.

The bill offered yesterday to provide rooms for holding the sessions of the Supreme Court, and the collection and preservation of the records of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Michigan, was take up and passed to a third reading.

The resolution offered by McMahon, similar to the resolution offered by Chase, calling for a committee of investigation, was taken from the table, and referred to a committee with instructions to introduce another resolution having in view the same object.

The bill for providing rooms for the use of the Supreme Court was referred back to the committee with instructions.

The House then adjourned till nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

St. Louis, Jan. 21.

The Democrat has received the returns of the election of the 21st of Dec. and the 4th of January in Kansas, as published over the signature of Gov. Denver and the presiding officers of the Territorial Legislature. The vote on the constitution on the 21st of December stands thus—with slavery 6,143; without slavery 569. In the election of the 4th the free State party was triumphant, electing all its candidates for State officers by an average majority of 415. The Senate stands 43 free State to 6 Democrats.—The House, 29 free State to 15 Democrats. The majority against the constitution on the 4th was 10,226. The alledged frauds at Oxford, Shawnee, Kickapoo and other places were counted.

The weather is very mild.

Walker's Attorney on the occasion of his last arrest, and accompanied him to Washington, with U. S. Marshal Rynders, from New York. Filibustering in Central America is not done with yet.—General Walker left Richmond Friday morning for Petersburg, Va. A banquet was given him the night previous, at which the General made a speech which created a strong impression.

GOOD TASTE IN DRESS.—A young lady, in one of the leading circles at Washington, was complimented by a gentleman on the simplicity and good taste of her dress, at an evening party.—She replied: "I am glad you like my dress; it cost just seven dollars, and I made every stitch of it myself!" When our young ladies pride themselves upon the home manufacture and cheapness of their attire, instead of its expensiveness and foreign importation, we shall have fewer "broken" fathers and husbands.

DEAFNESS CURED.—The best remedy for deafness ever offered to the public, is BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT. Many cases of several years standing have been quickly and entirely cured by it; and thousands of recent cases caused by colds or obstructions of the ear-chambers, have yielded to one or two applications. Full directions for use accompany each bottle. One of the most remarkable cures was at the Hartford Deaf and Dumb Asylum. A boy, 15 years of age, named Benjamin Crawford, who had been born deaf, and was consequently dumb, was sent there for education; and, as an experiment, the Liniment was tried on him, and with the most complete success. He now hears as well as any one, and is rapidly learning to talk. The Liniment is for sale at all Drug stores.

The undersigned believes that he needs no introduction to this community that he has formed a partner in the late famous establishment at the old Ne[w] York store, to ensure him a liberal public patronage; all are aware what a flourishing business was done at that [place] while he was a partner in the firm, but while he turned the grind-stone, and kept establishment almost disappeared when motive power was with [him]. It is doubted therefore, but that the public will be gratified to know, that the self same [man] has put in motion a full Machine Shop, turning out Tables, Bureaus, Bedsteads, Chairs, and all kind of Furniture, with velocity that will enable him to sell at prices so low, that will astonish [the] natives.

PLANK SIDE WALKS.—Our village is being quite improved of late with good substantial Plank side walks along the principal streets. A considerable portion of the side walks on Pottawattamie street are being planked, an order is already made for the building of a side-walk from Chicago St. to the Union High School Building, on the west side of Ottawa St. and Petitions are already signed for a good six foot walk on the south side of Chicago St from the Rail Road to the corporation line on the west and also for more than half that distance on the north side of Chicago street. A Plank walk on Mill street from the Rail Road Depot to Brownville is also much needed. Those friendly to these enterprises should now attend to them. This muddy weather is just the time to get up the Petitions and winter is the proper season for getting ready the plank to lay them

Donation Visit

The friends of Rev. J. B. Gilman intend to make him a donation visit at Manchester, on Tuesday Eve., Feb. 2d, '58 The Tecumseh Sax-horn Band have accepted an invitation to attend.

THE PROMENADE.—Was well patronized and passed off in fine style; we never saw a better company at Bidwell's Hall. The Music (Walker & Myers, of Toledo,) fully sustained their reputation. Their style was new, but gave general satisfaction; they are sober and unassuming, and know how to gain the respect of their company. Arrangements are on foot for the second annual promenade, of which, we will give the particulas, in time.

A LIVE LEGISLATOR.—Hon. Abner Sherman, from Ontonagon, arrived in town on Tuesday, on his way to Lansing, to attend the extra session of the Legislature. Mr. S states that he walked two hundred and twenty miles before he reached the white settlements, and was only twelve days coming from Ontonagon, to this city. He reports very mild weather at Lake Superior up to the time he left.

Lenawee County Agricultural Society--Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Lenawee County Agricultural Society, for the election of officers for the ensuing year, and the transaction of such other business as may come before the society, will be held at Bidwell's Hall, in the city of Adrian on Friday the 29th day of January, 1858, at one o'clock P. M.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Society, will be held at the office of the Secretary at ten o'clock, A. M., of the same day.

A full attendance of the annual meeting is requested. ANDREW HOWELL, Secretary.

"There he sat all night, looking at the show for nothing. It didn't cost him a cent!"

"LETTING THE CAT OUT."—A young beauty beheld one evening two horses running off at a locomotive speed with a light carriage. As they approached, she was horrified at recognizing in the occupants of the vehicle two young gentlemen of her acquaintance. "Boys! boys!" she screamed in terror, "jump out—quick quick out—especially George!"

☞A young lady had her parasol carried away by a gust of wind. It was picked up by an honest son of the Emerald Isle, who returned it with the compliment:

"Faith, Miss, an' if ye was as sthrong as ye'r handsome, be jabers a hurricane could'nt have snatched it from ye"

☞Phibbs says that where he came came from there was a boy so sharp, that when his mother went to beat him with a cane, he always "cut it."

☞An old lady of our acquaintance believes every calamity that happens to herself a trial, and every one that happens to her friends a judgment.

☞No man can be a gentleman who would wound or mortify another. No matter how refined, how cultivated he may be, he is in reality coarse, and the innate vulgarity of his nature manifests itself here. Uniformly kind, courteous and polite treatment of all persons is one mark of a true gentleman.

☞Why is a musquito like a Third street broker? Because he never stops bleeding his victim till they smash him.

☞Why does a lady wearing crinoline appear comical as well as comical? Because she is very funnily dressed.

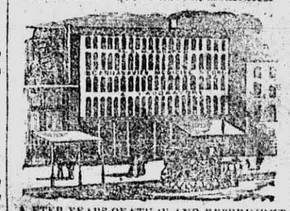
☞Why is a Nebraska shinplaster like an impenitent sinner? Because it don't know that its redeemer liveth.

DR ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD PILLS.

DISEASE VANQUISHED.

—BY—

Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies.



AFTER YEARS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT Dr. Roback, the eminent Swedish Physician succeeded in producing a medicine from seventy-three different species of mountain herbs of his native land, which acts directly upon the causes of disease in the blood, and by restoring the corrupted fountain of life, to a co ition of health and purity, expels disease from the system wherever it may be located, which ever may be its character. Indigestion, nervous complaints, splectic fits coughs, consumption in its early stages sore throat bronchitis fever sod ague aetions, low spirits, sexual incapacity, dyspepsia weakness, pricking of the skin symptomatic of paralysis rheumatism neuralgia tumor cancer, diabetes, lastitude and kidney diseases, and all other disorders of the organs of respiration the liver, the kidneys, the stomach the nerves or the muscular fibre, are unerringly cured by this preparation. It is to the materies morbi or seeds of disease what an alkali is to an acid: it neutralizes them with absolute certainty. While at the same time it regulates the secretions, removes obstructions from the bowels, or aperapeutic, renews bodily vigor and regenerates every animal function. Such is the nature such are the effects of Dr Roback's famous Scandinavian Blood Purifier, which if taken in conjunction with his Scandinavian Blood Pills, will not only obliterate the most painful diseases, but prevent their recurrence, and lengthen life beyond the ordinary span.

In the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS, Dr Roback presents the result of twenty years of experience and study and experiment as to what a perfect pill should be. No one can doubt their superiority, after one single trial. Price of the Scandinavian Blood Purifier $1 per bottle or $5 per half-dozen. Scandinavian Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or five for $1

Prev. Miami Co. Ind., Aug. 4, 1857.

DR. C. W. ROBACK: I have received so much benefit from your scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills that I have thought it my duty and it is no less my inclination to give you a plain statement of my case. I was for years afflicted with that bane of all comfort and efficiency in life, dyspepsia. I experimented all the so called remedies which have come to aid myself of this disease, would indeed make a melancholy catalogue. I also consulted with the best physicians I could hear of. I was induced to try your remedies through the persuasions of a friend, and after using them a few days was really benefitted, and in a short time, less than a month I was entirely and permanently cured. I was also afflicted with the most violent nervous headache, which I suppose was produced by my disordered stomach, for when my digestive left me my headache left with it. I now feel better in every respect than I have for ten years.

Very truly yours. JOHN S DEMUTH.

From the Rev. Mr. McMULLEN, Pastor of Roberts Chapel:

INDIANAPOLIS Oct 3 1857

DR. C. W. ROBACK—Dear Sir: I have used your Blood Purifier for a nervous affection, from which I have suffered much at times. I will say it is pleasant to the taste it certainly has a happy effect upon the nerves. Please accept my thanks for your kind regards and acts and believe me,

Yours, J. W. T. McMULLEN

FROM A WELL-KNOWN STEAMBOAT CLERK.

Louisville June 3 1857

DEAR DOCTOR: Send me half a dozen boxes of your Pills, care of H. G. Cord & co. as I cannot do without my trip. Six weeks ago nothing could have equipped me that a twenty-five cent box of Pills could have relieved my obstinate chronic constipation with its attending evils. I told you so when I bought them but I am bound to own that your Pills fill the contrast. Why, I have taken as many as six (6) of ——'s and other makers' sometimes without effect and sometimes with too much effect: but I have no trouble with yours—they are just what I want.

CINCINNATI, Friday Sept. 4, 1857.

DR. ROBACK—Dear Sir: Having been afflicted with neuralgia or rheumatism for the past year and a half and having seen your medicine called the Scandinavian Blood Purifier highly recommended by gentlemen with whom I am acquainted, I was induced to try it, but not before I had used various other medicines. After using two bottles I felt its effect very sensibly and upon using two more, I found myself perfectly cured. You will allow me therefore, to congratulate you upon making a discovery in medicine which is proving itself to be a worker of such wonders in the diseases of the human family.

GEORGE S BENNETT

INDIANAPOLIS, Wednesday Sept. 2 1857

DR. C. W. ROBACK. Dear Sir: Having been troubled for several years with extreme debility and weakness, so much so that I was unable to attend to my ordinary business at times, and having heard of the wonderful cures that your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Pills were effecting I was induced by a friend to try them. I have been using the Purifier for the last twelve months and find the medicine fully equal to its recommendations. So valuable is it to me that I cannot now dispense with the use of it at my advanced age of life—seventy-seven years.

I cheerfully give this information for the benefit of those similarly afflicted MORRIS MORRIS.

Skill in Everything

The science of agriculture is made up of a whole group of sciences, whose theory and application the farmer must understand and practice, if he would be master of his profession.

He must know something of chemistry, to understand the treatment of the soil, and the composing and use of manures. He must understand botany, to manage all the vegetables, grains and fruits which he grows.—He needs physiology and medicine, to treat his animals well in house or health and sickness. If he builds a barn, a knowledge of architecture will stand him in good stead. If he has a threshing machine, or mower, he needs some acquaintance with the principles of motive power. In the construction of drains, he must apply the principles of hydrostatics, and to some extent of hydraulics too.

We give these facts as illustrations of our meaning, not by any means as exhausting what might be properly said on this matter. The truth is the farmer needs to be a bit of a genius in almost every thing, if he would stand at the head of his profession.

It was not our purpose, however, when we penned the heading of this article, to say much on these grave themes. It was a humbler topic that tempted our pen.

We wish to exhort our readers to become well skilled in all the minor operations which the management of the farm and garden involves.—What we mean, two examples will show.

Mr. A. is a farmer, and nothing else. If a strap breaks in a harness he sends two miles to have it mended. If a horse's leg is bruised, he will not treat it himself, but sends for a farrier. His bee-hives need repairing, and he hires a carpenter to do what a very little skill would enable him to do himself. He cannot, even mend an old sled, or repair a broken hacked rake, without foreign aid. He is a good farmer. He keeps his implements in good condition, too, but it is at a great expense.

Mr. B. is another sort of man. He is as good a farmer as Mr. A. But he is limber and elastic too. All the little jobs about the house he does himself, or teaches his boys to do. He can roof a house; he can hoop a barrel, or he can dig and wall a well.—He can build a sled, put a spoke in a wagon wheel, graft or bud a fruit tree, or make a new harness of an old one with an awl, a wexed end and a bit of leather. If he attends a fair, he sees the point in the improvements that are on exhibition, and he can apply many of them to his own work without any further aid.

We will go but little further. Our readers see what we are at. We hope they will themselves be, and bring up their sons to be, men who will have some skill in every thing.

Here are some reasons for this recommendation, which we will give at the risk of making this article a little longer.

1. Almost every farmer will need this kind of skill. Not one in a thousand will live so near a village where there are skilled mechanics, as to be able to use their aid at all times.—Fewer still will farm on so large a scale as to embrace all these trades in the force employed on their own grounds. He will need some skill himself.

2. Such skill renders its possessor more independant. The sense of such independence is a great comfort. Its exercise is sometimes a great advantage.

3. It saves a great amount of time and money. We knew a man who lost a whole day's time and several dollars in money in the following way: A part of the harness was taken away. He had not enough tact and skill to repair it with a peice of a rein or halter.

4. It will develop talent in many persons, where it now slumbers useless and powerless. The exercises in mechanical skill furnished by the farm, has awakened the mind of many a youth, who has ripened into a noble and skillful mechanic and artist.

But we have said enough. Give the boys and girls a good chance to cultivate their powers in a practical way. You can never predict what treasures you will find.—Ohio Farmer.

Flowing Cranberries.

The question is frequently asked, if flowing the cranberry is beneficial in any other way than to guard against frost. In my experience, I am satisfied this plan is beneficial in four ways by overflowing.

First. To protect the vines from severe cold in winter. For this purpose they should be covered with water one foot or more above the tops of the plants, I have had my experimental plants on upland, (which could not be flooded,) cut down to the roots two winters out of six. They sprouted out again, and produced some fruit, but not half as much as usual.

Second. To guard against late frosts in spring, the plants should be kept well covered till the fore part of May; then gradually draw off the water, leaving an inch or two under the plants as long as there is danger of frost. The cranberry always grows on the new sprout, and I have seen not only the buds but the new shoots entirely cut off by frost the first day of June. With this water protection during the winter, and a partial flow until all danger of frost are over in the spring, the vines should uniformly bloom, and set a full crop every year unless the plants are injured by gathering the crop in the fall. The picking should be done by hand, as raking thrifty plants will so disarrange them that they cannot yield a full crop for one or two years after such rough usage.

Third. To kill out grass. Some portions of my meadow were so overrun with rush and other wild grasses three years ago, as to prevent their producing fruit, but by flowing and keeping the water on until the first of June, the grass has been so killed out, that it now presents but little or no obstacle to the growth of the plant, or the production of fruit, and the grass will undoubtedly all disappear in a few years by the same treatment.

Fourth. To prevent the destruction of the fruit by the worm. There is in this vicinity an insect similar to the apple worm, that attacks the early setting fruit when it is about half or two thirds grown, destroying the berry by eating it through. It has troubled me but very little since I began to flow my meadow. Last year I observed some plants on the edge of the upland, just above high water mark, that set very full fruit, but it was nearly all destroyed by the worm, while plants that were partially flooded, within one foot of them, were scarcely attacked at all, and on the main body of my meadow I hardly saw a worm eaten berry.—American Agriculturalist.

SURPLUS WHEAT IN CANADA.—The Toronto Colonist, in a statistical article on the grain crops of Canada West, states that the surplus wheat on hand is not less than 8,000,000 of bushels, and that no facilities exist, unless they are afforded by the Grand Trunk Railway, for the exportation of this produce. Hitherto Canada has had purchasers for its surplus wheat in every frontier town of the United States, and indeed, in the New England States and New York have regulated prices in Canada; but this year the United States itself has a surplus crop, probably better saved than that of Canada. The occurence so fortunate for the United States, is the means of locking up in Canada for the present some two millions sterling worth of produce for which there seems to be no outlet.

By news received from Muskegon last evening, the Dock had been on fire for a day or two, and up to that date the people had been unable to extinguish the fire. $1,000 dollars had been offered to the one who would put it out. Forty or more teams were employed in drawing away the lumber from the wharf. It appears that part of the dock had been set on fire in order to rebuild a portion of it, but the conflagration spread so in the sawdust that it was impossible to stop it. Muskegon Clarion.

Whereas. It has been clearly demonstrated that the general adoption of a phonetic system of spelling would tend in a great degree to lighten the labors of the teacher and to aid the student in the acquirement of knowledge; and whereas, in the opinion of this Convention, these and other lasting benefits would accrue from the adoption of the system in our Primary Schools,—therefore

Resolved, That we earnestly recommend to our School Boards and to private teachers, the great necessity of an early introduction of Phonetic Class Books into the school system of our State.

Resolved, That we recommend to those in our employ, a thorough acquaintance with Phonetic Short hand, as a means whereby the profession may be exalted, and which will not only be a benefit to them, but to the public at large, for whom we are all laboring

DR ROBACK'S

BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD PILLS,

DISEASE VANQUISHED.

—BY—

Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies.

AFTER YEARS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT Dr. Roback the eminent Swedish Physician has succeeded in producing a medicine from twenty-three different species of mountain herbs of his native land which acts directly upon the causes of disease in the blood, and by restoring the corrupted fountain of life to a condition of health and purity expels disease from the system wherever it may be located or whatever may be its character. Designed as an exterminator of complaints of scrofulous origin, consumption in its early stages sore throat boils or white fever and ague cake, liver complaint, dyspepsia, general debility, tetter worm, pimples, blotches, ringworm, salt rheum, scald head, itching of the skin, scrofulous affections of the eyes, ears, nose and throat, pains and diseases of the bones, rheumatism, bronchitis, tumor cancer, diabetes, lassitude and debility, neuralgia and all other disorders of the organs of respiration the liver, the kidneys, the stomach the nerves, or the mucous or fleshy tissues are unerringly cured by this preparation. It is to the materies morbi or seeds of disease what an alkali is to an acid; it neutralizes them with absolute certainty, while at the same time it regulates the secretions, removes obstructions from the pores, creates appetite, renews bodily vigor and invigorates every animal function. Such is the nature, such are the effects of Dr. Roback's famous Scandinavian Blood Purifier, which if taken in conjunction with his Scandinavian Blood Pills, will not only obliterate the most painful disease, but prevent their recurrence, and lengthen life beyond the ordinary span.

As the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS, Dr. Roback presents the result of twenty years of experience, hard study and experiment as to what a perfect pill should be. No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial. Price of the Scandinavian Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half-dozen. Scandinavian Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or five for $1

PRAIRIE MISSI CO. Ind. Aug. 4, 1857.

DR. C. W. ROBACK: I have received so much benefit from your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills that I have thought it my duty and it is no less my inclination to give you a plain statement of my case. I was for years afflicted with that bane of all comfort and efficiency in business dyspepsia. To recapitulate all the so called remedies which I have used to rid myself of this demon, would fill a book, make a midnight catalogue. I at last consulted with the best physicians I could meet of. I was induced to try your remedies through the persuasions of a friend, and after using them a few days was results benefited, and in a short time, less than a month I was entirely and permanently cured. I was also afflicted with the most violent nervous headache which no physician was prevailed by my disordered stomach, from then my dyspepsia left me my headache left with it. I now feel better in every respect than I have for ten years.

Very truly yours, JOHN S. DEMUTH.

From the Rev. Mr McMULLEN, Pastor of Roberts Chapel:

INDIANAPOLIS Oct 5, 1857

DR. C. W. ROBACK—Dear Sir: I have used your Blood Purifier for a nervous affection from which I have suffered much at times. While it is pleasant to the taste, it certainly has a happy effect upon the nerves. Please accept my Thanks for your kind regards and acts and believe me

Yours, J. W. T. McMULLEN.

FROM A WELL-KNOWN STEAMBOAT CLERK.

Louisville, June 4, 1857.

DEAR DOCTOR: Send me half a dozen boxes of your Pills, care of H. G. Curtis & Co. so I can get them next trip. Six weeks ago nothing could have convinced me that a twenty-five cent box of Pills could have relieved my chronic dyspepsia complication with its attending evils. I told you so when I bought them, but I am bound to own that your Pills fill the contract. Why I have taken as many as six (6) of ——'s and other makers' remedies without effect and sometimes with too much effect, but I have no trouble with yours—they are just what I want.

CINCINNATI, Friday, Sept 4 1857.

DR. ROBACK—Dear Sir: Having been afflicted with neuralgia or rheumatism for the past year and a half, and having seen your medicine called the Scandinavian Blood Purifier highly recommended by gentlemen with whom I am acquainted, I was induced to try it, but not before I had used various other medicines. After using two bottles I felt its effect very sensibly, and upon using two more, I found myself perfectly cured. You will allow me, therefore, to congratulate you upon having a discovery in medicine which is proving itself to be a worker of such wonders in the diseases of the human family.

GEORGE S. BENNETT.

Local Editor Cincinnati Daily Enquirer.

INDIANAPOLIS, Wednesday, Sept. 2, 1857

DR. C. W. ROBACK: Dear Sir: Having been troubled for several years with extreme debility and weakness, so much so that I was unable to attend to my ordinary business at times, and having heard of the wonderful cures by your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Pills were advertising I was induced by a friend to try them.

I have been using the Purifier for the last twelve months, and find the medicine forty equal to its recommendations. So valuable is it to me that I have not now dispensed with the use of it at my advanced age of life—seventy-seven years.

I cheerfully give this information for the benefit of those similarly affected. MORRIS MORRIS.

Sonnet: To an old Friend.

I dream.
there are bright moments when
All things material vanished into air;
And the souls it has seen sought the gleams
Of scenes in Paradise, surpassing fair,
And a blest realm which in its beauty teems
With angel forms brightly appearing there.
And in those dreams I see the forms of those,
Whom I have loved and lost in happier years,
And the dream spirit puts unto me shows
Friends known from me then they form appears,
And by thy voice and smile remembered yet
I know that thou art one, who doth not me forget

Fatal Accident.

Yesterday (Sunday, Jan. 31, 1858) Justice Greenly was called upon to hold an inquest over the body of a person drowned in the river at Le Roy Railroad bridge, in the town of Palmyra, in this county.

From the evidence taken on the inquisition, it appears that deceased, when near the west end of the bridge, about nine o'clock in the morning, hailed Hiram Emmons, (who was near his fathers house, which is but a short distance from the bridge,) and asked him if that was the road to Palmyra. He was informed that it was the road, and he immediately started to cross the bridge by stepping from tie to tie, (there being no plank on the bridge) when he had got about one fourth part of the way across the bridge he stepped and looked a moment (it is now supposed that he was frightened) and then went on. The father of the young man whom he hailed, watched him while crossing, and saw him stumble and fall through the bridge between the ties. Emmons hailed his son and told him the man had fallen from the bridge. They both ran, and got there (some 30 or 40 rods) as soon as possible. The man was not to be seen, but his hat and carpet-bag floated.—Other neighbors then came up and with a hook they drew the body up out of about ten feet of water. He was dead when drawn out. He was probably killed by the fall, it being nearly forty feet from the bridge to the water. Verdict of the jury according to above facts: death by accidental drowning.

Probably as he was crossing he looked down into the water and on account of the great distance to the water became giddy and lost his balance.

The deceased had a large number of papers with him but not one cent in money. He had three certificates in his pocket, one dated Philadelphia & Reading R R Co., Reading Pa., Sept. 5, 1855 signed James Mellholland recommending the bearer, Thomas Allen, as a brakeman and that he would make a good fireman, another from the same Co. signed John Tucker President, and one from A W. Habersham, Lieut U. S. Navy, Philadelphia Navy Yard.

He had also several letters some of them directed to Thomas Allen, and some directed to Michael Allen These letters were signed Wm Allen and Richard Allen The name of the unfortunate man was undoubtedly Thomas Allen, and he has formerly lived in Philadelphia. Supposed to be forty or forty-five years old.

The sheriff has charge of his papers and carpet bag Mr Lester P. Clark took charge of the body for interment.—Daily Watchtower.

A Runaway that bids fair to result in the death of Mr. Benj Hathaway, of the Hathaway House, came off in our streets this forenoon, (Feb 1st)

Hathaway was in a buggy with a black man, driving a vicious horse that had several times before, proved unmanageable.

The horse commenced running and kicking on Broad street, and turning round into Maumee, upset the buggy at the corner throwing Mr. H. out against a post, which he struck with the side of his head, producing so severe a concussion that it is thought he will die. He was alive at three o'clock, but remained unconscious.

Mr Hathaway who was thrown from his buggy yesterday was still alive and unconscious this afternoon.—Adv. Daily Watchtower Feb. 1st and 2d.

'Died of Thin Shoes'—We have seen it stated in an ephemeral newspaper paragraph, that there is an inscription on a tomb stone in a New Jersey graveyard, which runs thus: '———. Died of thin shoes.' As we do not put implicit confidence in the truth of all the paragraphs it is our privelege to peruse, we are willing to concede that this may be so or may not be. It makes no matter.—'Died of thin shoes,' might be the honest and veracious epitaph on thousands of tomb stones that bear a widely different one. The beautiful and crowded cemeteries, particularly, which are to be found in the vicinage of all our American cities, contain scores of victims to thin shoes, lying in their cold, unwaking sleep.

I would not advise a rigid adherence to a particular plan of study. I myself have never persisted in any plan two days together. A man ought to read just as inclinat on leads him; for what he reads as a task will do him little good. A young man should read five hours a day; and so many devote a great deal of knowledge.

THURSDAY, FEBUARY 4, 1858

Michigan Legislature—Extra Session.

The Michigan Legislature met in extra Session, upon the requision of the Governor, at Lansing, on the 20th of Jan., ult., and probably adjourned yesterday, although of that we are not yet advised.

One principle reason for this call was the fact, that, owing to the extreme stringency of the money market, the almost certain worthlessness of Tax Titles under a recent decision of the Supreme Court, and a defect, in the swamp act, which resulted in the excluding them from sale until further amendments could be had, some $2,500,000, of the State indebtedness which comes due before the next meeting of the State Legislature was found to be very inadequately provided for.

This difficulty has been provided for by a Loan Bill, authorizing the issueing of six per cent State Stocks payable on or after July, A D 1878, for $266,000, $50,000 of the same being made contingent upon a necessity for its use.

A defect also in the Circuit Court Act by which two or three new counties were left without the pale of any Judicial Court has been remedied by the construction of two additional Judicial Circuits, out of the newer Counties of the North, and creating two additional Circuit Judges, and Regents of the University to be elected at the next April election.

The Highway Act has also been materially amended, but in what respects we are not able to state. We will publish the amendments so soon as we get them.

Ypsilanti and St. Clair have been legislated into cities, at their own request.

The Swamp Land question, was not at our last advices disposed of but as heretofore, is likely to prove a bone of contention between the North and South of Michigan. Mr Bills chairman of the Committee on Public Lands in the Senate brought in a Bill, which has been passed by the Senate, for providing for a sale of the Swamp Lands at a minimum of $1.25 per acre, to be drained by the purchasers twenty five per of the money to be retained by the State for drainage, and the balance to go into the Common School fund.

A Bill for the same purpose has passed the House, fixing the minimum for the Swamp Lands at the same price ($1.25) but retaining the whole amount to the State for drainage. Both bills give four townships of Land to the Agricultural School.

Both the Senate and the House adhere each to their own Bill and refuse to pass the other, and at our last advices a committee of conference had been appointed, with what result we do not know, but should not be at all surprised if they should fail to come to any agreement upon the subject.

For our own part we are free to say that we had much rather they would not, than that the Senate should consent to yield to the demands of the House Bill and thus rob our School fund of the entire benefits of the Swamp Land donation in order that they may be absorbed by a few land sharks in the unsettled countries of the north.

A Ticket for Heaven.—The 'Society of Jesus,' for a sufficient consideration used formerly and doubtless still continues to issue corporate promisory notes guaranteeing earthly happiness and final salvation to the holder, and agreeing to defend his title against all claims and opponents whatsoever. The following is a copy of a document of this kind preserved in the British Museum. It is asserted that the infamous Louis 14. possessed one of these general commutation tickets: We the undersigned priests and true ecclesiastics, attest and promise that our society, which has full power, takes Hippolyte Beeun jurist, under our protection, and promise to defend him against all infernal power that might injure his person, soul, goods, or anything which he possesses; in faith of which we pledge the authority of his highness the prince our founder, in order that the said H B. shall be presented by him to the blessed chief of the apostles, with as much faithfulness and punctuality as our society pledges by the document Signed and sealed with the seal of the society Francois, de Seelin, rector of the Society of Jesus; Francois de Surbuu priest of Society Jesus; Petit de Poyn, priest of the Society of Jesus.'

Justice by Mistake.—In Philadelphia on Tuesday evening, a thief stepped into a law office and slipped on a valuable Raglan belonging to a student, with which he escaped without detection. A young man whose sister had been insulted by the aforesaid student, was lying in wait to flog the offender, and seeing the thief come out with the overcoat on, supposed him to be the victim he was in search of and gave him a terrible whipping before the policeman stopped him. or the mistake was of the person made known, by the cries of mercy from the thief, who supposed the punishment was for his crime. The young man was very much mortified when he found that he had been flogging a common thief instead of an undeveloped attorney.

CONGRESSIONAL NEWS.

Washington, Jan. 31.

Mr. Clarkson, with the Lecompton constitution, arrived last night. He immediately placed it in the hands of the President. The constitution is accompanied by a letter from Calhoun.

Clarkson says that the vote of Delaware Crossing precinct had been returned to the Commissioner for Leavenworth county and was in his possession when the returns were opened and counted, in the presence of the speaker of the House, President of the Senate and the Governor, and that it amounts to something over 300. This gives the Democrats a majority in Leavenworth county, and consequently in both branches of the Legislature.

Calhoun is expected to arrive here in a few days

The Union is informed that the Free State vote said to have been rejected by Calhoun because it was returned to Denver, was the vote on the constitution alone, not for State officers, and was therefore rejected.

Washington. Feb. 1.

House.—Mr. Stanton offered a resolution that the speaker issue his warrant for the arrest of J. B Wason, of New York city, who has been duly summoned and refuses to appear before the Lawrence, Stone & Co. investigating committee, and that he be brought before the Bar of the House, for contempt. The resolution was adopted.

The House is engaged in a discussion upon the bill to supply the accidental omission in the army bill of last session; to make an appropriation for the support of the national army.

Senate.—Mr. Doolittle presented a petition from 97 citizens of the United States, praying that measures be taken for the purchase of Cuba, and its annexation to this country.

Mr. Bigler introduced a joint resolution for the completion and preservation of the digest of the statistics of the mines and manufactures taken at the last census which was adopted.

Mr Collamer introduced a bill to alter the time of the Circuit and district courts in Vermont.

The consideration of the army bill was resumed. Mr. Houston opposed it. He said no necessity existed for a large standing army in time of peace.

House.—The bill passed, appropriates $360,000 for the army.

Mr. Boyce offered a resolution, which was passed, providing for the appointment of a select committee of 7, to inquire into and report on the following subjects, viz: A reduction in the expenses of the Government; the Navigation laws of the United States; the existing duties on Imports; the expediency of a gradual repeal of all duties on Imports, and a resort exclusively to internal taxation.

The House then resumed its consideration of the printing deficiency bill.—During the debate it was stated that the printing for the 33d Congress was 1 million more than that for the 34th, and that such extravagant expenditures resulted from the ordering the printing of works to the extent of which nothing was known. Several gentlemen emphatically condemned such a waste of money, but they contended that the $170,000 proposed to be appropriated, was necessary to mbet existing contracts. Pay these, and let Congress guard in fututo against such abuses. Others said that if this system of public plunder, for the benefit of party editors, was to be continued, they should have an opportunity to place their names on record against it and to wash their hands of all such corruption.

The Committee then arose, without coming to any conclusion on the subject.

Mr. Lane presented the state constitution of Oregon, which was referred to the committee on Territories.

Mr. Parrot asked leave to present certain joint resolutions of the Legislature of Kansas, with a view to have them laid on the table and printed. Impatient exclamations.—What are they? Read. Read.

Mr. Craig objected, and raised the question that the papers could not be read.

The Speaker said that the question was whether they shold be received

Mr Craig appealed from the decision of the Chair,

There was much confusion during the proceedings.

Mr. Washburn, of Illinois, moved to lay the appeal on the table, which was carried.

The resolutions were read. They stongly censure the action of the Lecompton Convention, and the odious and oppressive party machinery of law, under which the delegation was assembled, saying that the Convention repudiated and crushed out the distinctive principle of the Kansas-Nebraska Act in leaving the people free to legislate on the subject of their domestic institutions in their own way, but at every stage had been prevented from so doing, and strongly protested against admission into the Union under the Lecompton Constitution as violating the rights of 18-20ths of the people of the Territory.

General News.

Pittsburg, Feb. 1.

The Banks of this city resumed specie payment to day.

Hartford, Feb. 1.

Jno. W. Seymour, Secretary and Treas. of the Hartford County Savings Association, left town on Saturday last, and since he left, it has been ascertained that he was a defaulter to that Institution in the sum of $100,000 or more. The money has been lost in stock or other speculations. Mr. Seymour was President of the Mercantile Bank, and was considered one of the most upright men in the community. The mercantile bank does not lose a dollar by Mr. Seymour. Neither, as far as we can learn, does any other institution suffer, except the savings association.

Hartford, Feb. 1.

The U. S. P. O. agent, Mr. Holbrook, on Saturday night, arrested John Miller, a baggage master of the Hartford & Provcence Road, for robbing the mails. A decoy mail was made up on Saturday at Willimantic and on the arrival of the train at Hartford, Miller was arrested, and packages were found on him which were known to have been in the bag. He confessed the robbery.

New York, Feb. 1.

An affray occured in the bar-room of Tammany Hall last night, in which a man named Jas. Trainer was probably fatally stabbed.

A prize fight in the 8th ward was broken up yesterday, by the police.

The steamship Empire City arrived to-day off Havana dates of the 26th. No news.

New York, Feb. 2

Horace Greely publishes a card this morning, to the effect that until recently, he never heard, nor believed, nor suspected that Lawrence, Stone & Co., or anybody else, paid or promised any money, whether to members of Congress at Washington, to editors in New York, or to anybody else, to procure a change in the tariff act, and if the Committee supposes he could shed any light on the matter he is, very respectfully, at their service.

There is no truth in the story in one of our morning papers, that the Collins line of steamers is to be abandoned.

Bowen & McNamee resumed payment to-day.

Washington, Feb 1.

The Herald correspondent says, it is reported, on good authority, that Mr Buchanan contemplates withdrawing the troops from Utah. Mr. Beruheisel, the Mormon delegate, has submitted propositions to the Administration, indicating the willingness of the Mormons to vacate Utah, and colonize on some of the islands of the sea, outside of the Jurisdiction of the United States; provided the Government will purchase at a fair valuation the Salt Lake City improvements.

Mr B. asks that Commissioners be sent out to arrange terms and details.

The Administration confidently expects that Kansas will be admitted as a State with the Lecompton Constitution, and that there will b less opposition from the Northern and Western Democrats than was generally supposed. Great calculations are made on the consolidated vote of the South. It is understood that the Lecompton Constitution will be referred to the Territorial Committee in the Senate, and immediately reported upon with the bill for the admission of Minnesotta, and that both will be passed together. Similar arrangements have been made in the House.

An exciting time is anticipated in both Houses to day.

The Tribune's correspondent from Washington says: "The statement in the Herald about the Tariff Investigating Committee is a mere fabrication, made up from conjectures and floating rumors Nothing in Mr. Stone's testimony implicates Mr. Banks in the least. The Herald's seven thousand dollars is the old affair of the seven hundred dollars loan, magnified ten fold."

A whole square of buildings was destroyed by fire at Rome on Friday last. Loss $100,000.

Watertown, Mas Feb. 2

The High School building was nearly destroyed by fire yesterday, but although considerable alarm and confusion prevailed, all the scholars escaped uninjured.

Pittsburg, Feb. 2.

John Lutz, recently arrested in St Louis, was sentenced to-day to be hung, for the murder of O'Leary, in this city.

Louisville, Feb. 1.

This morning, J. Barber & Co's alcohol works were burned. Fully insured. John Raine, proprietor of the Galt house, died of consumption.

Chicago, Feb. 1

The warehouse of Thompson & Co., Iowa City, was destroyed by fire on Thursday night. Loss 100,000 dollars. Amount of insurance not known.

Amusements.

We have been no little surprised to learn that promiscuous kissing is actually practised in social gatherings amongst some of the good people of Stearns county.

The report that such was the case, has been prevalent for months, but we could not give it credence until confirmed by those whose veracity we cannot doubt and who acknowledge to having participated in this amusement! Save the mark!

This disgusting absurdity always arises from the irrepressible desire for rapid and joyous motion implanted, by our wise Creator, in the breast of every young person as well as every young animal; and its unwise repression from a mistaken religious prejudice against dancing. We never could understand the essential difference between taking hands, running around in a circle, or back and forth in a promenade march, and going through the figures of a cotillion, or any other of the many figures in which there is no encircling of waists with supporting arms. To all such dances, waltzes, polkas and scottiches, by persons of different sexes, we do most sincerely object, as injurious to that nice sense of delicacy which revolts at personal contact with a stranger; but the most indelicate dance which we have ever seen, is modest and virtuous when compared with promiscous kissing.

The idea of social etiquette, whose rules require a woman to kiss or be kissed by all the tobacco chewers in a room full of company, is certainly, in a very high degree revolting. How a delicate minded woman; can argue herself into submission to such a rule is a little beyond ordinary comprehension, and, certainly, no man of proper self respect wishes to kiss any woman he does not love. To suppose that one loves all the women whom he meets in social gatherings is making very large count on the sins of his heart.

For the love of goodness, children, take an old lady's advice, and do not let us hear of John Stubb's wife kissing Jimmy Dubbs, while John kisses the mother of Jimmy's children, and so on ad infinitum to the end of the evening. When you want to have a nice time, send down to Mr. Ball's for Mr. Dickenson and his violin, he is an old Pennsylvanian, and can talk off quadrilles and cotillions in something of the Ole Bull style. Get him to tune his string and set his bow in motion, then go to work, and 'turn your partners,' 'chassee,' and 'balance all,' until there is no time left for caricaturing, desecrating and prostituting so sacred a thing as a kiss, which never ought to be anything else than a pledge of affection.—St. Cloud Paper.

The voice of dead Nations.

Mr. Alger, in his recent celebrated oration, uttered the following impressive passage, which ought to be written on the statute books of every state in the Union:

"The dead nations, whose giant skeletons now lie bleaching and crumbling on the sands of time, all died of sin. It was their crimes that dug their graves, and pushed them in. Licentious luxury sapped the foundation strength, and rotted the live virtue of one—and it disappeared beneath the green pool of its own corruption. Brutal war, made a business of and carried in every direction, drew upon another the comb ned wrath of the world—and it was dashed upon the rock of its own barbarous force. Domestic bondage grown enormous, trodden under foot, and goaded to madness, rose on another—and buried it in the conflagration and slaughter of its own provocation. International antipathies, based on sectional differences fed by selfish interest and taunting debate finally exploded in the quarrelsome parties of another—and hurled its dissevered fragments to ruin by the convulsive eruption of its own wrong and hatred. Of all the mighty empires whose melancholy ghosts now pace the pallid margin of oblivion, not one ever sunk but its own wy was through internal iniquity in some way or other. Shall the stately shade of republican America, too, go down to join the doleful company of crowned specters, moving them beneath to rise up at her coming with the sardonic mock. 'Art thou also as we?' If we would avoid their doom of vengeance, we must not tread their path of guilt.'

Among the prisoners awaiting sentence in the Brooklyn Police Court, last Monday, says the New York Express, was an Irishman upon whose face the small pox was found to be just breaking out with great violence. A general stampede took place, the clerk turned ghastly white and made a somerset out of the window, and the Judge thinking the building was falling went after the clerk in a most undignified manner, while the deputy sheriff and other officers climbed the posts and took refuge among the rafters.—The poor Irishman was forced out of the door and bidden to clear away and never return; and as no one would venture back, the Court was pronounced to stand adjourned.

These two lines just fill out the column.

OPPOSITION

Cabinet & Chair Shop.

[One door south of Tecumseh Academy.]

The undersigned believes that he need no introduce to this community that he was formerly partner in the late famous Randall establishment at the old New York store, to ensure him a liberal public patronage; all are aware what a flourishing business was done at that time while he was a partner in the firm. But when he turned the grind-stone, and how the establishment almost disappeared when the motive power was withdrawn. It is not doubted therefore, but that the public will be gratified to know, that the self same man has put in motion a Machine that is turning out Tables, Bureaus, Bedsteads, Chairs, and all kind of Furniture, with a velosity that will enable him to sell them at prices so low, that will astonish the natives. Now I would say, to all those who are in want of Cheap Furniture, "come on, now is the time," for I am determined to "bust" every establishment in town.

Ready made, constantly on hand for sale at Adrian prices.

Repairing done on short notice.

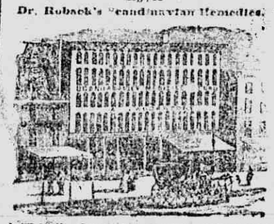
DR ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD PILLS

DISEASE VANQUISHED.

—BY—

Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies.



AFTER YEARS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT Dr Roback discovered the ominent Swedish Physician, who succeeded in producing a medicine from twenty-three species of mountain herbs of his native land which acted directly upon the causes of disease in the blood and has produced the most signal feats in the annals of medical science. Indigestion never can complain, where its coughs consumption in its early stages soon let go, bronchitis, liver and kidney complaints, scrofula, general incapacity, dyspepsia, weakness, pricking of the skin eruptions of every description, neuralgia, tumor cancer, diabetes, dropsy in the head debility diarrhea and all internal disorders of the organs of respiration the liver, the kidneys the stomach, the nerves, or the muscular fiber are unerringly cured by this preparation. It is to the materia medica or seeds of disease what an alkali is to an acid; it neutralizes them with absolute certainty while at the same time it regulates the secretions, removes obstructions from the bowels, creates appetite, renews healthy vigor and regenerates every animal function. Such is the nature and cure the effects of Dr. Roback's famous Scandinavian Blood Purifier which if taken in conjunction with his Scandinavian Blood Pills, will not only obliterate the most painful diseases, but prevent their recurrence, and lengthen life beyond the ordinary span.

In the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS Dr. Roback presents the result of twenty years' experience, hard study and experiment as to what a perfect pill should be. No one can doubt their superiority After one trial. Price of the Scandinavian Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half-dozen: Scandinavian Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or five for $1

Fredonia Mutual Co. Ind., Aug. 4, 1857

DR. C. W. ROBACK: I have received so much benefit from your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills that I have thought it my duty and it is no loss my inclination to give you a plain statement of my case. I was for years afflicted with that hane of all comfort and efficiency in business dyspepsia. To complicate all the wretchedness which I have to tell my read of this disease, would indeed make a dull unlively catalogue. I have consulted with the most eminent physicians I could get at. I was induced to try your remedies through the recommendation of a friend, and after using them a few days was really benefitted, and in a short time less than a month I was entirely and permanently cured. A more soul satisfied with the most violent measures of medicine was produced by my disordered stomach for when my dispepsia left me by the doctor left with it. I now feel better in every respect than I have for ten years.

Very truly yours, JOHN S DEMUTH

From the Rev Mr. McMeekin, Pastor of Roberts Chapel Indianapolis, Oct. 5, 1857

DR. C. W. ROBACK—Dear Sir:—I have used your Blood Purifier for a severe attack of ulcers from which I have suffered much of late. While it is pleasant to the taste it certainly has a happy effect upon the nerves. Please accept my thanks for your kind regards and acts and believe me,

Yours, J. W. T. MCCLEEN

FROM A WELL-KNOWN STEAMBOAT CLERK.

Louisville, June 4 1857.

DEAR DOCTOR:—Send me half a dozen boxes of your Pills expected if I do not I will have to forego them next trip. Six weeks ago nothing could move me except me of a twenty five cent box of pills and I have relieved my obstinate disease on the floor with its attending ills. I feel it is no exaggeration to say that these pills have saved my life. I feel it my duty to say that I am bound to warn that your pills fill the contract. Why I have taken as many as a (6) of ——'s and other makers' and found no effect—I act sometimes with too much effect; but I have my fill also with yours—they are just what I want

CINCINNATI, Friday, Sept. 4, 1857.

DR. ROBACK—Dear Sir: Having been afflicted with neuralgia or rheumatism for the past year and a half, and having seen your medicine called the Scandinavian Blood Purifier, highly recommended by gentlemen with which I am acquainted, I was induced to try it, but not before I had used various other medicines.—After using two bottles I felt its effect very sensibly, and upon using two more, I found myself perfectly cured. You will allow me, therefore, to congratulate you upon having a discovery in medicine which is proving itself to be a worker of such wonders in the diseases of the human family.

GEORGE W. BENNETT,

Local Editor Cincinnati Daily Enquirer.

INDIANAPOLIS, Wednesday Sept. 2, 1857

DR. C. W. ROBACK. Dear Sir: Having been troubled for several years with extreme debility and weakness, so much so that I was unable to attend to my ordinary business at times, and having heard of the wonderful cures that your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Pills were effecting, I was induced by a friend to try them. I have been using the Purifier for the last twelve months, and find the medicine fully equal to its recommendations. So valuable is it to me that I scarcely now dispense with the use of it at my advanced age of fifty-seven years.

I cheerfully give this information for the benefit of those similarly afflicted. MORRIS MORRIS.

To an old Friend.

I dream.
there are bright moments when
All things material vanished into air!
And the soul's vision sees naught but the gleams
Of scenes in Paradise, enrapturing fair,
And a blest realm which in its beauty teems
With angel forms brightly appearing there,
And in those dreams I see the forms of those
Whom I have loved and lost in brighter years;
And the dream spirit of unto me shows
Friends absent from me, then thy form appears,
And by thy voice and smile remembered yet
I know that thou art one, who doth not me forget

Fatal Accident.

Yesterday (Sunday, Jan. 31, 1858) Justice Greenly was called upon to hold an inquest over the body of a person drowned in the river at Le Roy Railroad bridge, in the town of Palmyra, in this county

From the evidence taken on the inquisition, it appears that deceased, when near the west end of the bridge, about nine o'clock in the morning, hailed Hiram Emmons, who was near his fathers house, which is but a short distance from the bridge,) and asked him if that was the road to Palmyra. He was informed that it was the road, and he immediately started to cross the bridge by stepping from tie to tie, (there being no plank on the bridge) when he had got about one fourth part of the way across the bridge he stepped and looked a moment (it is now supposed that he was frightened) and then went on. The father of the young man whom he hailed, watched him while crossing, and saw him stumble and fall through the bridge between the ties. Emmons hailed his son and told him the man had fallen from the bridge. They both ran, and got there (some 20 or 40 rods) as soon as possible. The man was not to be seen, but his hat and carpet-bag floated.—Other neighbors then came up and with a hook they drew the body up out of about ten feet of water. He was dead when drawn out. He was probably killed by the fall, it being nearly forty feet from the bridge to the water. Verdict of the jury according to above facts: death by accidental drowning

Probably as he was crossing he looked down into the water and on account of the great distance to the water became giddy and lost his balance.

The deceased had a large number of papers with him but not one cent in money. He had three certificates in his pocket, one dated Philadelphia & Reading R R Co., Reading Pa., Sept. 5, 1855, signed James Mellholland recommending the bearer, Thomas Allen, as a brakeman and that he would make a good fireman, another from the same Co. signed John Tucker, President, and one from A W. Habershaw, Lieut U. S. Navy, Philadelphia Navy Yard.

He had also several letters some of them directed to Thomas Allen, and some directed to Michael Allen. These letters were signed Wm Allen and Richard Allen. The name of the unfortunate man was undoubtedly Thomas Allen, and he has formerly lived in Philadelphia. Supposed to be forty or forty-five years old.

The sheriff has charge of his papers and carpet bag. Mr Lester P. Clark took charge of the body for interment.—Daily Watchtower.

A Runnaway that bids fair to result in the death of Mr. Benj. Hathaway, of the Hathaway House came off in our streets this forenoon, (Feb. 1st.)

Hathaway was in a buggy with a black man, driving a vicious horse that had several times before, proved unmanageable

The horse commenced running and kicking on Broad street, and turning rapidly into Maumee, upset the buggy at the corner, throwing Mr. H. out against a post, which he struck with the side of his head, producing so severe a concussion that it is thought he will die. He was alive at three o'clock, but remained unconscious.

Mr Hathaway who was thrown from his buggy yesterday was still alive and unconscious this afternoon.—Adv. Daily Watchtower Feb. 1st and 2c.

'Died of Thin Shoes'—We have seen it stated in an ephemeral newspaper paragraph, that there is an inscription on a tomb stone in a New Jersey graveyard, which runs thus: '————. Died of thin shoes.' As we do not put implicit confidence in the truth of all the paragraphs it is our privelege to peruse, we are willing to concede that this may be so or may not be. It makes no matter.—'Died of thin shoes,' might be the honest and veracious epitaph on thousands of tomb stones that bear a widely different one. The beautiful and crowded cemetries, particularly, which are to be found in the vicinage of all our American cities, contain scores of victims to thin shoes, lying in their cold, unwaking sleep.

I would not advise a rigid adherence to a particular plan of study. I myself have never persisted in any plan two days together. A man ought to read just as inclination leads him; for what he reads as a task will do him little good. A young man should read five hours a day, and so may acquire a great deal of knowledge.

THURSDAY, FEBUARY 4, 1858

Michigan Legislature—Extra Session.

The Michigan Legislature met in extra Session, upon the requision of the Governor, at Lansing, on the 20th of Jan., ult., and probably adjourned yesterday, although of that we are not yet advised.

One principle reason for this call was the fact, that, owing to the extreme stringency of the money market, the almost certain worthlessness of Tax Titles under a recent decision of the Supreme Court, and a defect, in the swamp act, which resulted in the excluding them from sale until further amendments could be had, some $-.50.000, of the State indebtedness which comes due before the next meeting of the State Legislature was found to be very inadequately provided for.

This difficulty has been provided for by a Loan Bill, authorizing the issueing of six per cent State Stocks payable on or after July, A D 1878, for $266,000, $50,000 of the same being made contingent upon a necessity for its use.

A defect also in the Circuit Court Act by which two or three new counties were left without the pale of any Judicial Court has been remedied by the construction of two additional Judicial Circuits, out of the newer Counties of the North, and creating two additional Circuit Judges, and Regents of the University to be elected at the next April election.

The Highway Act has also been materially amended, but in what respects we are not able to state. We will publish the amendments so soon as we get them.

Ypsilanti and St. Clair have been legislated into cities, at their own request

The Swamp Land question, was not at our last advices disposed of but as heretofore, is likely to prove a bone of contention between the North and South of Michigan. Mr Bills chairman of the Committee on Public Lands in the Senate brought in a bill, which has been passed by the Senate, for providing for a sale of the Swamp Lands at a minimum of $1,25 per acre, to be drained by the purchasers twenty five per of the money to be retained by the State for drainage, and the balance to go into the Common School fund

A bill for the same purpose has passed the House, fixing the minimum for the Swamp Lands at the same price ($1.25) but retaining the whole amount to the State for drainage. Both bills give four townships of Land to the Agricultural School.

Both the Senate and the House adhere each to their own Bill and refuse to pass the other, and at our last advices a committee of conference had been appointed, with what result we do not know, but should not be at all surprised if they should fail to come to any agreement upon the subject.

For our own part we are free to say that we had much rather they would not, than that the Senate should consent to yield to the demands of the House Bill and thus rob our School fund of the entire benefits of the Swamp Land donation in order that they may be absorbed by a few land sharks in the unsettled countries of the north.

A Ticket for Heaven.—The 'Society of Jesus,' for a sufficient consideration used formerly and doubtless still continues to issue corporate promisory notes guaranteeing earthly happiness and final salvation to the holder, and agreeing to defend his title against all claims and opponents whatsoever. The following is a copy of a document of this kind preserved in the British Museum. It is asserted that the infamous Louis 14, possessed one of these general commutation tickets: We the undersigned priests and true ecclesiastics, attest and promise that our society, which has full power, takes Hippolyte Breem jurist, under our protection, and promise to defend him against all infernal power that might injure his person, soul, goods, or anything which he possesses; in faith of which we pledge the authority of his highness the prince our founder, in order that the said H. B. shall be presented by him to the blessed chief of the apostles, with as much faithfulness and punctuality as our society pledges by the document Signed and sealed with the seal of the society. Francois, de Seelin, rector of the Society of Jesus; Francois de Surbon, priest of Society Jesus; Petit de Poyn, priest of the Society of Jesus.'

Justice by Mistake.—In Philadelphia on Tuesday evening, a thief stepped into a law office and slipped on a valuable Rug'an belonging to a student, with which he escaped without detection. A young man whose sister had been insulted by the aforesaid student, was lying in wait to flog the offender, and seeing the thief come out with the overcoat on, supposed him to be the victim he was in search of and gave him a terrible whipping before the policeman stopped him. or the mistake was of the person made known, by the cries of mercy from the thief, who supposed the punishment was for his crime. The young man was very much mortified when he found that he had been flogging a common thief instead of an undeveloped attorney.

CONGRESSIONAL NEWS.

Washington, Jan. 31.

Mr. Clarkson, with the Lecompton constitution, arrived last night. He immediately placed it in the hands of the President. The constitution is accompanied by a letter from Calhoun.

Clarkson says that the vote of Delaware Crossing precinct had been returned to the Commissioner for Leavenworth county and was in his possession when the returns were opened and counted, in the presence of the speaker of the House, President of the Senate and the Governor, and that it amounts to something over 300. This gives the Democrats a majority in Leavenworth county, and consequently in both branches of the Legislature.

Calhoun is expected to arrive here in a few days

The Union is informed that the Free State vote said to have been rejected by Calhoun because it was returned to Denver, was the vote on the constitution alone, not for state officers, and was therefore rejected.

Washington, Feb. 1.

House.—Mr. Stanton offered a resolution that the speaker issue his warrant for the arrest of J. B Wason, of New York city, who has been duly summoned and refuses to appear before the Lawrence, Stone & Co. investigating committee, and that he be brought before the Bar of the House, for contempt. The resolution was adopted.

The House is engaged in a discussion upon the bill to supply the accidental omission in the army bill of last session; to make an appropriation for the support of the national army.

Senate.—Mr Doolittle presented a petition from 97 citizens of the United States, praying that measures be taken for the purchase of Cuba, and its annexation to this country.

Mr. Bigler introduced a joint resolution for the completion and preservation of the digest of the statistics of the mines and manufactures taken at the last census which was adopted

Mr Collamer introduced a bill to alter the time of the Circuit and district courts in Vermont

The consideration of the army bill was resumed. Mr. Houston opposed it. He said no necessity existed for a large standing army in time of peace.

House.—The bill passed, appropriates $360,000 for the army.

Mr. Boyce offered a resolution, which was passed, providing for the appointment of a select committee of 7, to inquire into and report on the following subjects, viz: A reduction in the expenses of the Government; the Navigation laws of the United States; the existing duties on Imports; the expediency of a gradual repeal of all duties on Imports, and a resort exclusively to internal taxation.

The House then resumed its consideration of the printing deficiency bill.—During the debate it was stated that the printing for the 33d Congress was 1 million more than that for the 34th, and that such extravagant expenditures resulted from the ordering the printing of works to the extent of which nothing was kttown. Several gentlemen emphatically condemned such a waste of money, but they contended that the $170,000 proposed to be appropriated, was necessary to meet existing contracts. Pay these, and let Congress guard in future against such abuses. Others said that if this system of public plunder, for the benefit of party editors, was to be continued, they should have an opportunity to place their names on record against it and to wash their hands of all such corruption.

The Committee then arose, without coming to any conclusion on the subject.

Mr. Lane presented the state constitution of Oregon, which was referred to the committee on Territories

Mr. Parrot asked leave to present certain joint resolutions of the Legislature of Kansas, with a view to have them laid on the table and printed. Impatient exclamations. What are they? Read. Read.

Mr. Craig objected, and raised the question that the papers could not be read.

The Speaker said that the question was whether they should be received

Mr Craig appealed from the decision of the Chair.

There was much confusion during the proceedings.

Mr. Washburn, of Illinois, moved to lay the appeal on the table, which was carried.

The resolutions were read. They strongly censure the action of the Lecompton Convention, and the odious and oppressive party machinery of law, under which the delegation was assembled, saying that the Convention repudiated and crushed out the distinctive principle of the Kansas-Nebraska Act in leaving the people free to legislate on the subject of their domestic institutions in their own way, but at every stage had been prevented from so doing, and strongly protested against admission into the Union under the Lecompton Constitution as violating the rights of 18-20ths of the people of the Territory.

General News.

Pittsburg, Feb. 1.

The Banks of this city resumed specie payment to-day

Hartford, Feb. 1.

Jno. W. Seymour, Secretary and Treas. of the Hartford County Savings Association, left town on Saturday last, and since he left, it has been ascertained that he was a defaulter to that Institution in the sum of $100,000 or more. The money has been lost in stock or other speculations. Mr. Seymour was President of the Mercantile Bank, and was considered one of the most upright men in the community. The mercantile bank does not lose a dollar by Mr. Seymour. Neither, as far as we can learn, does any other institution suffer, except the savings association.

Hartford, Feb. 1.

The U. S. P. O. agent, Mr. Holbrook, on Saturday night, arrested John Miller, a baggage master of the Hartford & Provcence Road, for robbing the mails. A decoy mail was made up on Saturday at Willimantic and on the arrival of the train at Hartford, Miller was arrested, and packages were found on him which were known to have been in the bag. He confessed the robbery.

New York, Feb. 1.

An affray occured in the bar-room of Tammany Hall last night, in which a man named Jas. Trainer was probably fatally stabbed.

A prize fight in the 8th ward was broken up yesterday, by the police.

The steamship Empire City arrived to-day off Havana dates of the 26th. No news.

New York, Feb. 2.

Horace Greely publishes a card this morning, to the effect that until recently, he never heard, nor believed, nor suspected that Lawrence, Stone & Co., or anybody else, paid or promised any money, whether to members of Congress at Washington, to editors in New York, or to anybody else, to procure a change in the tariff act, and if the Committee supposes he could shed any light on the matter he is, very respectfully, at their service.

There is no truth in the story in one of our morning papers, that the Collins line of steamers is to be abandoned.

Bowen & McNamee resumed payment to-day.

Washington, Feb. 1.

The Herald correspondent says, it is reported, on good authority, that Mr. Buchanan contemplates withdrawing the troops from Utah. Mr. Bernheisel, the Mormon delegate, has submitted propositions to the Administration, indicating the willingness of the Mormons to vacate Utah, and colonize on some of the islands of the sea, outside of the Jurisdiction of the United States; provided the Government will purchase at a fair valuation the Salt Lake City improvements.

Mr B. asks that Commissioners be sent out to arrange terms and details.

The Administration confidently expects that Kansas will be admitted as a State with the Lecompton Constitution, and that there will be less opposition from the Northern and Western Democrats than was generally supposed. Great calculations are made on the consolidated vote of the South. It is understood that the Lecompton Constitution will be referred to the Territorial Committee in the Senate, and immediately reported upon with the bill for the admission of Minnesotta, and that both will be passed together. Similar arrangements have been made in the House.

An exciting time is anticipated in both Houses to-day.

The Tribune's correspondent from Washington says: "The statement in the Herald about the Tariff Investigating Committee is a mere fabrication, made up from conjectures and floating rumors. Nothing in Mr. Stone's testimony implicates Mr. Banks in the least. The Herald's seven thousand dollars is the old affair of the seven hundred dollars loan, magnified ten fold."

A whole square of buildings was destroyed by fire at Rome on Friday last. Loss $100,000.

Watertown, Mas. Feb. 2

The High School building was nearly destroyed by fire yesterday, but although considerable alarm and confusion prevailed, all the scholars escaped uninjured.

Pittsburg, Feb. 2.

John Luts, recently arrested in St. Louis, was sentenced to-day to be hung, for the murder of O'Leary, in this city.

Louisville, Feb. 1.

This morning, J. Barber & Co's alcohol works were burned. Fully insured. John Raine, proprietor of the Galt house, died of consumption.

Chicago, Feb. 1.

The warehouse of Thompson & Co., Iowa City, was destroyed by fire on Thursday night. Loss 100,000 dollars. Amount of insurance not known.

Amusements.

We have been no little surprised to learn that promiscuous kissing is actually practised in social gatherings amongst some of the good people of Stearns county.

The report that such was the case, has been prevalent for months, but we could not give it credence until confirmed by those whose veracity we cannot doubt and who acknowledge to having participated in this amusement! Save the mark!

This disgusting absurdity always arises from the irrepressible desire for rapid and joyous motion implanted, by our wise Creator, in the breast of every young person as well as every young animal; and its unwise repression from a mistaken religious prejudice against dancing. We never could understand the essential difference between taking hands, running around in a circle, or back and forth in a promenade march, and going through the figures of a cotillion, or any other of the many figures in which there is no encircling of waists with supporting arms. To all such dances, waltzes, polkas and scottiches, by persons of different sexes, we do most sincerely object, as injurious to that nice sense of delicacy which revolts at personal contact with a stranger; but the most indelicate dance which we have ever seen, is modest and virtuous when compared with promiscous kissing.

The idea of social etiquette, whose rules require a woman to kiss or be kissed by all the tobacco chewers in a room full of company, is certainly, in a very high degree revolting. How a delicate minded woman, can argue herself into submission to such a rule is a little beyond ordinary comprehension, and, certainly, no man of proper self respect wishes to kiss any woman he does not love. To suppose that one loves all the women whom he meets in social gatherings is making very large count on the sins of his heart.

For the love of goodness, children, take an old lady's advice, and do not let us hear of John Stubb's wife kissing Jimmy Dubbs, while John kisses the mother of Jimmy's children, and so on ad infinitum to the end of the evening. When you want to have a nice time, send down to Mr. Ball's for Mr. Dickenson and his violin, he is an old Pennsylvanian, and can talk off quadrilles and cotillions in something of the Ole Bull style. Get him to tune his string and set his bow in motion, then go to work, and 'turn your partners,' 'chassee,' and 'balance all,' until there is no time left for caricaturing, desecrating and prostituting so sacred a thing as a kiss, which never ought to be anything else than a pledge of affection.—St. Cloud Paper.

The voice of dead Nations.

Mr. Alger, in his recent celebrated oration, uttered the following impressive passage, which ought to be written on the statute books of every state in the Union:

'The dead nations, whose giant skeletons now lie bleaching and crumbling on the sands of time, all died of sin. It was their crimes that dug their graves, and pushed them in. Licentious luxury sapped the foundation strength, and rotted the live virtue of one—and it disappeared beneath the green pool of its own corruption. Brutal war, made a business of and carried in every direction, drew upon another the comb ned wrath of the world—and it was dashed upon the rock of its own barbarous force. Domestic bondage grown enormous, trodden under foot, and goaded to madness, rose on another—and hurried it in the conflagration and slaughter of its own provocation. International antipathies, based on sectional difference fed by selfish interest and taunting debate finally exploded in the quarrelsome parties of another—and hurled its dissevered fragments to ruin by the convulsive eruption of its own wrong and hatred. Of all the mighty empires whose melancholy ghosts now pace the pallid margin of oblivion, not one ever sunk but its own way was through internal iniquity in some way or other. Shall the stately shade of republican America, too, go down to join the doleful company of crowned specters, moving them beneath to rise up at her coming with the sardonic mock. 'Art thou also as we?' If we would avoid their doom of vengeance, we must not tread their path of guilt.'

Among the prisoners awaiting sentence in the Brooklyn Police Court, last Monday, says the New York Express, was an Irishman upon whose face the small pox was found to be just breaking out with great violence. A general stampede took place, the clerk turned ghastly white and made a somerset out of the window, and the Judge thinking the building was falling went after the clerk in a most undignified manner, while the deputy sheriff and other officers climbed the posts and took refuge among the rafters.—The poor Irishman was forced out of the door and bidden to clear away and never return; and as no one would venture back, the Court was pronounced to stand adjourned.

These two lines just fill out the column.

"Forgive"

O God, my sins are manifold, against my life they cry,
And all my guilty deeds foregone, up to thy temple fly;
Wilt thou release my trembling soul, that to despair is driven?
"Forgive," a blessed voice replied, "and thou shalt be forgiven."

My foemen, Lord, are fierce and fell; they spurn me in their pride;
They render evil for my good; my patience they deride;
Arise, my King, and be the proud to righteous ruin driven—
"Forgive," the awful answer came, "as thou wouldst be forgiven."

Seven times, O Lord, I've pardoned them; seven time they've sinned again;
They practise still to work me woe, and triumph in my pain;
But let them dread my vengeance now, to just resentment driven!
"Forgive," the voice in thunder spoke, "or never be forgiven."

I'll Call Around and Pay.

'What is this?' said Mr. Redwood, as, with an indolent, half-indifferent air he took a folded paper from the hand of a boy. The day was Saturday—the hour about one.

'O! yes—I see!' he added, a moment afterward. 'Very well. Say to Barker, I'll call around and pay him.—Can't attend to it just now.'

Mr. Redwood's fire-proof stood only six feet from the place where he was sitting—the door was wide open—the check-book in sight—and the ballance in bank was just four thousand dollars. It would take only a slight effort, and consume but two minutes' time, for him to have drawn a check for sixty-eight dollars and fourteen cents—the amount of Mr Barker's bill. But he was in an indolent frame of mind, and it was much easier to say, 'I'll call around and pay,' than to rise from his quiet position, and go to all the trouble of writing a check and taking a receipt.

The boy looked disappointed, and lingered a moment

'Did you understand me?' said the merchant, speaking rather sharply.

'Yes, sir; but—'

'But what?'

'It is Saturday, sir—and—and—'

'I didn't inquire of you as to the day of the week, was testily answered.

The boy looked half frightened, and went off instantly.

'Saturday, indeed!' muttered Mr. Redwood to himself. 'A rare piece of information! A bright boy, really!—What has Saturday to do with the payment of my shoe-maker's bill?'

'Did you get the money from Mr Redwood?' asked the shoemaker, as the boy came in. His face had an anxious look

'No, sir. He says he'll call around and pay.'

'When?'

'He didn't mention any time,' replied the boy.

'Did you tell him that it was Saturday, and I had workmen to pay off?'

'I tried to, sir; but it seemed to make him angry, and as he is a good customer—'

'Too bad! too bad!' ejaculated the shoe-maker, breaking in upon the boy's words. 'Call round and pay! Why didn't he send the money? That should have been easier.'

Rising from his bench, the shoe-maker went to his little unpainted pine desk, on which was an old square cork inkstand, and the stump of a quill, five inches long, which was dignified by the name of a pen, and took therefrom a package of bills. He went over them twice before selecting one, for there seemed but little promise for that day in any of them.

Take this to Mr. Glen,' said he to his boy, 'and tell him that he will particularly oblige me, if he will let me have the money. Say that I would not trouble him again, but it is Saturday, and I have my workman to pay.'

The boy was gone nearly half an hour. Mr. Glenn's store was in a distant part of the town, though his family, for which Mr. Barker worked, lived in the neighborhood. A dozen times before he came back had the anxious mechanic paused in his work and fixed his eye upon the door, hoping for his boy's return. At last he came in.

'Well, Andrew, what success?' He tried to speak cheerfully.

'Mr. Glenn says that he will call round and pay.'

The shoemaker's countenance fell.—He let his eyes drop to the work in his lap, and bent his face downward, so that its expression might be partly concealed from the boy.

'Did you say that he would oblige me particularly by settling the bill, as it was Saturday, and I had my workmen to pay?'

'Yes, sir; but he turned off, saying he didn't wish to hear anything more from me.'

Barker sighed, and for some moment's sat very still upon his bench. Then rising slowly, he referred again to his package of unsettle bills.

'Suppose you try Wharton again.'

The boy shook his head, remarking, with familiarity of manner,

'Poor chance there! He's been going to call round and pay these three months.'

'When did you see Winton?' asked the shoemaker.

'Last week.'

'What did he say?'

'That he would call around.'

'Call around! It's only a get-off. I'm out of all patience!' And the perplexed shoemaker grew excited. 'They're all eager enough to get their work, and sharp spoken enough if it isn't ready to the minute. But when it comes to paying; the matter is of too little consequence to claim their attention. Ah! here's Mayberry's account!'—he had been running over the bills as he talked. 'Didn't he promise to pay to-day?'

'Yes, sir, I think he did,' replied the boy.

'Very well, Hurry round to the store, and catch him before he goes to dinner.'

The lad started off with his usual alacrity, and Barker sat down again to work and wait.

'No money?' The shoemaker read disappointment in the boy's face.

'No, sir.'

'Why?'

'Mayberry said he had just deposited everything for the day, and that he couldn't draw a check for so small an amount. Would pay on monday.'

A thin, pale, weary-looking woman opened the shop door at this moment, and came in. She carried a basket on her arm, from which she took a bundle of 'uppers' that she had taken to close and bind.

'Here is the work, Mr. Barker,' she said in a dejected voice. 'I hope you will find it all right. They would have been ready two days ago, but my husband is very sick, and I've had to be up with him all night for three nights.'

The shoemaker did not see the quality of the work, as he took the 'uppers' from the woman's basket and made a show of examining them. He was only thinking of the woman's need and her expectations. She had performed her part, but not a single dollar had he in the house, and how he was to perform his part?

'How is your husband to-day?' he asked kindly, showing more than usual interest, for he felt that he had little more than sympathy to give.

'Not so well,' replied the woman. 'I have run down for a few minutes, and left him alone, quite as much to get the money for my work as to bring it home. The doctor has ordered a little wine, and I must get it for him, if it takes all I have earned this week.'

'How much does your work come to?'

'Two dollars,' answered the woman.

The shoemaker went to his desk, and opening it, took out his little cash-box, and made a pretence of disappointment as he turned it toward the woman. It did not contain a single copper. Then he drew forth an old pocket-book, and examined every compartment, but with no better success.

'You are a little too early, Mrs. Blythe,' he said smiling yet gratefully, 'a little too early. I haven't received my collections for the day. Shall I send you up the money?'

The woman sighed and looked very much disappointed.

'I'm very sorry, Mrs. Blythe'—the shoemaker did not manifest the slightest impatience, for he understood the case perfectly—'but we find it very hard sometimes, to get in our bills. I've had Andrew running round all the morning and he hasn't collected a single dollar so far. It is strange how little rich men think of their obligations to us poor mechanics, who live all the while from hand to mouth. If I could always get in my small bills, I would be very comfortable. As it is, I am always in trouble about money.'

Mrs. Blythe stood very still, and answered not a word. It was hardly possible for her to leave her husband again, and moreover, she had promised to bring him home the wine.

'I am very sorry, Mrs. Blythe,' repeated the shoemaker; 'but what is, can't be helped.'

'True, true.' I learned that long ago,' said the woman, with a half despairing sigh. 'The lessons of poverty sink deeply enough into the memory.

'I will send you up the money in the course of an hour or two. Andrew is going out with some bills. I will not trouble you to call down again, as your husband is so ill.'

Still Mrs. Blythe lingered. How could she return to her sick, exhausted husband without the wine that was send through all the courses of his blood a quickening spirit. She felt as if this wine was to be to him the very elixir of life; and since it had been mentioned by the doctor, she had seen that her husband's thought was resting upon it, to the exclusion of every thing else. To go home without it there was, was a serious thing, and might involve serious consequences; for his condition was one of extreme prostration, and the lightest cause might destroy the even balance of life just attained, and throw a preponderance upon the wrong side.

Slowly, at length, she moved towards the door.

'You will send up the money, Mr Barker, right soon,' she said, turning partly round and looking at the troubled shoemaker.

'The moment I receive it. Andrew is going out with some bills immediately.'

The door opened noiselessly; with noiseless steps a drooping figure went out, and noiselessly the door was shut again. The only sense that took record of the circumstance was that of sight.

Mr. Redwood, the merchant, who took his shoemaker's bill of so little consequence that he would not take the trouble to write a check in order to cancel it left his store some two hours after the visit of Andrew, and started home to his late dinner. On his way he passed a wine store, and dropped in to order a case of choice Ammontillado, the flavor of which he had tried and approved.

'Send it home within an hour. I wish a bottle for my dinner,' said Mr. Redwood as he took out his pocket book to pay for the wine.

'It shall be done,' was the ready answer.

As the merchant replaced his pocket-book, and was buttoning his coat over his breast, a poorly dressed, worn and feeble looking woman came into the store and walked back, with an air of timid irresolution, to where the two men—the wine dealer and his customer—were standing.

'Well, what's wanted?' said the wine dealer, in a short, imperative voice.

'My husband is very low, and the doctor has ordered him some wine.'

The woman's sad, pleading tone made it very apparent to the dealer that she came to beg and not to buy.

'Has he indeed?' The voice of the wine dealer was half insulting.

'I failed to get money for my work, and I cannot go home without the wine. O! sir, if you will trust me for a bottle, I will certainly come and pay you. The money is earned, and it is promised this afternoon.'

The wine merchant laughed, sneeringly as he made answer:

'It won't do my good woman! The trick is too stale.'

'But sir—'

The urgency of the case made Mrs. Blythe importunate.

'There—there! That will do. Go now.' And the wine dealer waved his hand toward the door, impatiently. Mrs. Blythe turned and went away, not speaking another word. The eyes of Redwood were on her pale, thin face, and he saw there an expression that haunted him, as we are sometimes haunted by a face in a picture, for many days afterward.

'A common dodge!' said the wine merchant, in a vulgar way, as the woman passed into the street. 'If I had given her the bottle of wine she would have been drunk as a beast in a half an hour.'

Redwood, in whose memory that parting look of Mrs Blythe had daguerrotyped itself, though differently; but he gave no utterance to his thoughts.

'That woman's story was a true one,' he said to himself, as he passed on his way homeward. 'I wish I had asked her residence;' and he looked carefully around him, up and down the street, with a kind of vague hope of seeing her. But, already too long away from her exhausted husband, she had hurried back to him with almost flying feet.

'Oh, Mary,' whispered a feeble voice, as she leaned over the bed, 'how long you have been away! I feel very faint! Have you got the wine?'

Only the bitter wine of sorrow, crushed out from an almost bleeding heart, had she brought to her husband, and as a few drops fell upon his face she whispered back, huskily,

'Barker could not pay me for my work. But he will send the money in an hour or two, and then I will get the wine.'

A feeble sigh fluttered from the breast of the sick man; his lids drooped wearily until the lashes lay in two dark lines upon his bloodless cheeks; while a more death-like hue overspread his countenance.

'Edward! Edward! O, Edward! Husband!' Slowly the eyes of the sick man opened, but closed again, heavily without sending forth a beam of intelligence.

The poor woman's strength was all gone. Sinking into a chair, she leaned over upon the bed, and laid her face against that of her husband. Its coldness chilled her to her heart. Already [illegible] damps were breaking through the relaxing pores.—A moment she tried to arouse herself to a new effort. But hope had died, and the leaden pall of despair was on her spirit.

'Mrs Blythe!'

It was the voice of Andrew the shoemaker's boy.

'Mrs Blythe!' his hand was upon her arm, but she stirred not.

'Mrs Blythe I have brought you the money for your work. And Barker has sent you a bottle of wine for Blythe.'

The voice and words together penetrated the shut door of the woman's senses and partly arousing herself, she murmured as a fuller consciousness returned.

'Too late! too late!'

A thrill of horror went through the boy's frame, as bending over, his eyes rested upon the ashen face of a man wearing the ghastly image of death.

How little dreamed the well to do merchant of a scene like this, as he sipped his delicately flavored sherry, and remarked upon its quality! Of a scene like this, which an easy act of justice on his part, in the simple payment of a bill might have been prevented! Once, as he looked at the crystal wine holding his glass to the light, the countenance of the poor woman he had seen at the wine merchants seemed to glare at him, as if reflected from a mirror. But the unpleasant vision faded in a moment. Between the despairing countenance and his failure to pay a trifling bill, he recognized no possible relation of effect and cause. Yet was it even so!—the relation did exist.

Need we give any new shades in our picture—need we turn the kaleidoscope—need we add a word of application? What good? The lesson is complete enough, and all additional groupings or coloring would but weaken the morals we seek to enforce.

Origin of Odd Fellows.

It has been supposed by many that the origin of the society of Odd Fellows—or rather the organization of that association was of comparitively modern date. They will be somewhat surprised, however, says the Cincinnati Times, to learn that its origin dates as far back as the days of Nero, and was established by the Roman soldiers in the year 55. At that time they were called 'Fellows Citizens.' The present name was given them by Titus Cæsar, twenty four years afterwards; and they were so called from the singular character of their meetings, and from their knowing each other by day or night by means of mystical signs and language. At the same time he presented them with a dispensation, engraved on a plate of gold, bearing the differntent emblems of mortality. In the fifth century the order was established in the Spanish dominions, and in Portugal in the sixth century. It did not reach France and England until the eleventh century. It was then introduced into the latter country by John De Neville, assisted by five Knights from France, who formed a Grand Lodge in London. The ancient fraternity has now lodges in every quarter of the globe, and by its usefulness and benevolent character, commands the respect and countenance of all who are acquainted with its nature and purposes.' Those upon whose information reliance may be placed, give credit to Baltimore for first introducing Odd Fellowship into the United States, and to Grand Sire Thomas Wilde, still living among us, belongs the honor.—Baltimore Patriot.

As brokers will do,
Messrs. Moore, Strange and True,
Tried their wits t'other day on the 'Change.
Says Moore, "Of us three,
The whole Board will agree,
There's only one knave—and that's Strange."

Then said Strange, rather sore,
"I'm sure there's one Moore,
A terrible knave and a Jew,
Who cheated his brother,
And would cheat his mother"—
"Oh, yes," replied Moore, "that's True."

A Cool Thief.

Some weeks ago Dr Roberts, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., visited New York, and while attending an entertainment at the Academy of Music, had his pocket picked of from $40 to $50. On arriving home he received the following cool letter from the gentleman who so politely took charge of his purse:—

New York, Jan. 5th, 1858.

Dr. Charles H. Roberts—Dear Sir: I had the pleasure of relieving you of your pocket book on the evening of the 24, in a crowd at the Academy of Music. I presume you soon became aware of your dispossession, and perhaps had some anxiety as to the application of the funds it contained. You have my assurance that they have fallen into appreciative hands, and that every cent will be applied in gratifying the tastes and fancies of a fellow being whose ambition soars higher than his calling. You need not flatter yourself with the idea that you have my acquaintance because I favor you with my correspondence; no, Doctor, divest yourself of that ambition.

I write you in accordance with the law of honor among thieves, and to do you the justice of returning to you the two enclosed pieces of paper which are of value to you and worthless to me—one being a note payable to your order, and the other a formula for making teeth—neither of which can ever be available to me, as my present employment probably pays me better, and is a business more pleasing to my taste. From the date of the note I conclude that you had been in town several days, which may account for the lightness of your purse. Now, doctor, a proper respect for gentlemen of my calling should never allow your purse to become so low; it is hardly up to the average of usual collections.

Then I have reason to protest against gentlemen of your standing carrying uncurrent money. It is under serious consideration to return to you the $5 on Morris County bank, N. J., which I find at considerable discount; the six fives on Poughkeepsie banks go current, and the few smaller bills can be easily disposed of by a person of my habits. From the name and recipe which I found in the pocket book, I conclude that you are the well known dentist who long since did me much service in your line of business, while pursuing my avocation in Poughkeepsie.

Now, doctor, don't consider it New York hospitality to extract purses for extracting teeth, but remember that all have to do something for a living. You were following your avocation on me, and I was only doing the same on you when you visited our city—and this case affords a fair example of the comparative profits of your business. You spent much time and received a small fee,—mine was an operation of a moment. When I consider this difference, and the gentle manner with which you attended me, I am quite inclined to return your purse and contents, but that would be unprofessional, and beside, would involve a loss of time on my part for such crowds do not occur every day even in New York; but be assured, that had I recognized you I would have spent the time appropriated to you upon some other person.

The only reason I can ascribe for not remembering you is, I presume, that when you come to the city you dress up in your best, and look very different than when attending to your business at home. This little lesson may be of service to you and learn you that pocket books are not safe in crowds, and if you are ever caught in one again, let your vigilance be directed to your purse in proportion to its dimensions. Yours, INCOG.

American Slavery.

Tho' any this land of ours is free;
Tho' say beneath its canopy,
Tho' oppress from far beyond the sea,
In peace their lingle do rest—
That none may here his maker praise,
And here his song of joy may raise,
For freedom's stars above him blaze—
And none till him molest.

But hark! from Southern borders come
The frantic cry—"My child is gone,"
And from a mother's arms is torn,
The dearest of her love.
Yes! wives from husbands too are sold,
And bartered off as brutes for gold;
Crushing their hearts with grief untold—
But seen by God above.

The iron-hearted masters dream
Of the foul curse—of the black stain,
That hides a Nation's face in shame;
Where wrongs like these are done:
Will they a Nation's glory blight!
For which their sires long years did fight,
Shedding their blood to gain the right—
Their trust in God alone!

We tremble as we now review
That mighty host that God o'er threw—
Say 'twas His arm more strong than now;
Can aught his wrath appease!
And can ye wrench with guiltless hand
Man's rights—his life—bind with a band
God's own free image—and curse a land,
With wrongs unjust as these!

Our Northern hearts beat high and warm
And in our midst there lowers a storm,
And soon will be with fury torn
Those Southern ranks of shame,
Think they to bribe our Freemen true
With all that wealth or power can do!
No! Country's love and duty too,
Yield e're we own the name.

Loud from the North we gladly hear,
The strong—the brave—the noble dare,
With clarion voices through the air,
Resound—break every chain;
The powerful and the weak unite,
And join the forces in their might;
Guided by truth's unerring light—
'Till slavery shall be slain.

Then Freemen raise your voices high
Heir every trembling slave to fly
'Till at your feet the foe doth lie
The Monster—slavery—
Yes! burst their bands and set them free
And your reward in Heaven shall be
Riches no tyrant's eye shall see,
Enduring as eternity

The Times has an interesting account of the views of the Mormons in regard to the movements of the government, derived from an interview with Hon. S Eldridge, one of the leaders of the Saints, who is now on a visit to this city, and is charged with a general supervision of the Mormon church in the East. M. Eldridge seeks to correct certain misapprehensions in the minds of the public concerning the disposition of the Mormons, but admits that any attempt of the troops to enter Salt Lake City in hostile array, will inevitably result in bloodshed.

In our State Legislature yesterday, Hon. T L Jones introduced, without opposition, a preamble and resolution, which met the warmest approbation of the Administration portion of the House, instructing our Senators, and requesting our Representatives in Congress to endeavor to procure the passage of a general law of the United States, making equal and just provision for creditors, and the relief of insolvent debtors, and regulate commercial intercourse between the citizens of the different States. The resolutions represented that the business of the country has been in a great measure broken up the financial revulsion, thereby producing an immense amount of private suffering, mortification and bankruptcy, and that no immediate or permanent relief can be expected but in the manner above indicated.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1858

The duty of American Citizens with regard to Party.

Just now, and just here, while and when, there are no particular party issues, nor any political canvas, towards which the remarks may be supposed to have a bearing, and therefore lose with some whatever force they might otherwise possess, we wish to say just what we think upon this subject.

We have often insisted upon the duty, as well in political as other matters, of every man's reading, thinking, deciding and acting for himself. This is our sentiment with regard to religious belief.—There are sects many, and creeds many, yet but one revealed word, and he is something less than a man, who ignoring his own judgement and intelligence, is willing take his creed upon trust, instead of going himself to that sure word of prophecy, and thinking and deciding for himself. It is indeed wise and well to take advantage of the wisdom, learning and research of other men, and times, as aids in this investigation, but not as authority unless their opinions and conclusions coincide with our own, for when we do this, we stultify ourselves, and it is not the Word, but the man and the creed that we believe in, and this is not what God requires of us.

But infinitely worse than this, is the but too common habit in political matters, of following certain party leaders, or at least what we call party, blandly, and unreasoningly, right or wrong. If we have, or propose to have, any respect for ourselves, or intend that others shall in reality respect our opinions, it will not do in politics, any more than in anything else, to thus let other men make up those opinions for us We be little and bemean ourselves beyond compare when we do this.

Besides it is not always safe to do it It is but reasonable to suppose that the rank and file of every party are honest in their support of their party. They can have but very little motive or interest for being otherwise If they are led to do wrong, it is not because they intended to do wrong, but simply because they have blindly followed party leaders, and never taken the trouble to think for themselves whether it is wrong or not It is but just also to suppose that a great majority also of the prominent men in every party are honest men, and intend to do right. But the misfortune of it is, that they too are subjected to the same party drill as the rank and file, and are not permitted to think and act for themselves but must consent to follow as blindly, the dictation of certain recognized party leaders, or be read out of the party, and at the same time out of all the honors and emoluments of office.

Now power is a dangerous thing, and has but too often been found corrupting in its influence upon the human mind and character. And even if this were not the case, and if party leaders were uniformly incorrupt and honest men, there is no good reason, why one man, or any set of men should be thus permitted to dictate political action and belief to the rest. It is true that this system of party drill is well calculated to make a united and strong party, but it is upon the same principle as that the tyranny and ignorance of Roman Catholicism makes a strong church, a principle well adapted to the depotism of Russia, but not to the free republic of America.

Of what consequence is it to our citizens at large, that any party should be weak or strong, compared with that infinitely higher importance that they should be just and right? Of what consequence or benefit is it them personally, that one party should succeed rather than another, except that the offices, and emoluments of office, should fall to certain officeholders of their own party, rather than those of another, and with neither of which they have any immediate connection? Can such an empty triumph compensate any man for thus repudiating his manhood, ignoring his intellgence and making himself the veriest tool of demagouges, or giving up the execution of his political franchise and of his duties as a citizen, with the consciousness that in doing so under the blind guidance of a party drill, there is a great wrong resting upon himself? A thousand times no, says every unbribed conscience in the land.

Now these things being so, does not good sense, and a sound discretion in the exercise of our political duties as citizens of a free country, and whose freedom and purity we desire to perpetuate, dictate to each of us, a self-enfranchisement from this false and pernicious party-drill, no matter who, or what party it affects, and a liberal use of our own intelligence and judgment in determining each for himself, what is right and what is wrong, what we will support, and what we will oppose? Party is all right enough, and well enough, in its way, but the sooner stituents only so long as they adhere to what those constituents believe to be just and right, and no longer, the better it will be for the country and for the world, and this great truth they will never learn so long as men are afraid to think and act for themselves, but look to these same party leaders to dictate their thoughts and actions for them.

CONGRESSIONAL NEWS.

Washington, Feb. 6.

The House was in session all night, mainly engaged in taking the yeas and nays on the motion to adjourn, eating, smoking, sleeping, &c.

At about half past one a serious affray occurred, which is thus narrated by a member and a witness:

Mr. Grow objected to Mr. Quitman's making any remarks.

Mr Keitt said. "If you are going to object, return to your own side of the House."

Mr. Grow responded, 'This is a free Hall, and every man has a right to be where he pleases.'

Keitt then came up to Grow and said: 'I want to know what you mean by such an answer as that?'

Grow replied: 'I mean just what I say this is a free Hall and a man has a right to be where he pleases.'

Keitt taking Grow by the throat said: 'I will let you know that you are a damned black republican puppy.'

Grow knocked up his hand saying, 'I shall occupy such place in this Hall as I please, and no nigger-driver shall crack his whip over me.'

Keitt then again grappled Grow by the throat, and Grow knocked his hand off, and Keitt coming at him again, Grow knocked him down.

The reporter adds: The respective friends of both parties rushed to the rescue. Various members on each side engaged in the fight, which took place in the area fronting the Clerk's desk. Mr Washburn of Illinois, was conspicuous among the republicans, dealing heavy blows. The speaker loudly and imperatively demanded order, and called on the the Sergeant-at-arms to interfere. That functionary, carrying his mace of office, together with his assistants, hurried to the scene, and crowded into the thickest of the fight, in which at least a dozen members were engaged. Some minutes was quieted. Further difficulties are apprehended.

From 4 till 6½ o'clock the time was wasted on the rival motions. At that hour, Mr. Quitman submitted a resolution that the House adjourn till Monday next when the 'subject under consideration—the Kansas message—shall be resumed and the vote on the pending question shall be taken, without any further delay being occasioned by debate or dilatory motions.

Unanimous consent was given for the introduction of the resolution, and the Speaker announced the House adjourned till, Monday, when the subject will come up as the special order.

Feb. 8.

Keitt rose to a personal explanation, saying the House would remember that its proceedings during the session of Friday were broken in upon in an unpleasant manner. It was due to fair dealing that he should assume to himself all the responsibility for the violation of its order, dignity and decorum He was the aggressor and whatever of responsibility properly attached to that act belonged to him alone It was also due to justice that he should make whatever reparation was in his power to the dignity and decorum of the House thus violated. He did this in the expression of his profound regret at the occurrence Personal considerations are always unpleasant, very seldom excusable rarely justifiable, never in a legislative body. He felt in full force the responsibility he had assumed in saying he was the aggressor, and that the entire responsibility properly belonged to him In this connection he had but one other remark to make and that whether any blow was directed at him or not, was more than he could say, at least he was unconscious of having received it. With this explanation he parted from the subject.

Mr Grow said he had been taught in childhood that all fights among men are disgraceful to human nature and to the Christian community; and this is especially the case when they occur among law makers, in the midst of their deliberations. Riper years and the force of education had satisfied him that this lesson was good and true; yet the act of self defence had been recognized as one of the inalienable rights of man, to be exercised on all occasions and under all circumstances, when ever necessary for the protection of life or property. At the last sitting of the House, he unexpectedly found himself engaged in the first conflict of the season. He tended to the House most cheerfully whatever apology was due for the violation of its order and decorum and no one regretted more than himself the occasion for this violation of its order.

The House immediately adjourned.

Washington, Feb 5.

The Tribune's correspondence, in speaking of Senator Iverson says that Georgia is prepared for the dissolution of the Union, and will make the adoption of the Lecompton constitution, a strict test of her continuance. He adds, that other States are to co operate.

Washington, Feb 8

The next question was announced on agreeing to Mr. Harris' proposition which was adopted.

Mr Clark of New York asked to be excused from voting, on the ground that a vote in the affirmative would be inconsistent with those he had just given, and that a vote in the negative would imply an unwillingness to have an investigation which should be by the committee on Territories The House refused to excuse him by a vote of 89 against 106. Mr Barksdale moved to lay Mr Harris' amendment on the table. Mr. Florence said that the motion was not consistent with the understanding previously agreed upon Mr. Harris remarked that it would be recollected that the understanding was by mutual consent. Mr. Savage did not think the motion to lay on the table would be inconsistent with that agreement, as it might finally determine the question in the House. Mr. Harris' amendment was then carried by a vote of 114 against 111. Mr Harris of Ill., moved to reconsider the vote and lay that motion on the table. Carried. Yeas 115 nays 111. Mr. Hughes resolution merely to refer the Kansas message to a select committee by the adoption of Harris' substitute as given above was agreed to by 115 to 110.

St Louis Feb. 9.

The Leavenworth correspondent of the Democrat says, the bill providing for the constitution has passed the Kansas Legislature Letters from Lawrence, in the Leavenworth papers, contain accounts of the proceedings of the Board of Commissioners appointed to investigate the election frauds. Mr. McLean, cheif clerk in the Surveyor General's office, testified to having sent the returns of both elections to Platte city, at Calhoun's request; and that he had not seen them since. The Delaware Crossing returns had never been received at Lecompton.

This was doubted and Sheriff Walker was dispatched to Lecompton to search Calhoun's office. He found, buried in the ground under a woodpile the identical returns which McLean swore to having sent to Platte city.

Gov. Denver, the Speaker of the House, and the President of the Senate examined them and swear to the same.

The returns which Calhoun counted in the 14th, and the delaware crossing returns are also among them, footing 349 votes.

Previous to this, Diefendorf testified to having given the Delaware Crossing returns to Calhoun at Weston, subsequent to the court at Lecompton. Writs have been issued for McLean and Mr. Woods, who have fled to escape arrest.

There is an article selling throughout the country that has attained the widest celebrity ever known as a remedy for Liver Complaints. We have reference to Dr Sanfords Invigorator, or Liver Remedy. that has performed cures almost too great to believe, and were it not for the undoubted evidence that accompany the testimonials. It is, in truth, the greatest remedy known for Dyspepsia, Jaundice, or general debility that so often baffles the skill of our most eminent physicians.

Dr Sandford has been for a long time one of the eminent physicians of New York, and it is said, most of his cases were treated with the Invigorator with such invariable success that he has been induced to offer it as a family medicine, and let the world have the benefit of his discovery. If those who are troubled with debility, headache, languor, or slow, lingering fever will try a bottle, we think they might save physicians' bills, and days, perhaps years of suffering.

[One door south of Tecumseh Academy.]

The undersigned believes that he was enough intimate to this community that he was a partner in the late famous establishment at the old New York store, to announce him a liberal public patronage; all are aware what a flourishing business was done at that place, while he was a partner in the firm. So while he turned the grind stone, and he establishment almost disappeared when motive power was withdrawn. It is doubted therefore, but that the public will be gratified to know, that the self same person has put in motion a Machine that is turning out Tables, Bureaus, Bedsteads, Chairs, and all kind of Furniture, with velosity that will enable him to sell them at prices so low, that will astonish the natives. Now I would say, to all those who want an honest article, and at prices to suit the times, for I am determined to 'bust' every establishment in town.

A Hard Shell Sermon

My Belov-ed Brethring: I am an unlarnt hard-shell Baptist preecher, of whom you have no doubt heern before, and I now appear here to expound the Scriptures, and pint out the narrer way to the new Jerooslem, and my text which I shall chuse for the occasion, is in the leds of the Bibel, somewhar between the second Cronikills and the last chapter of Timothy Titus, and when you find it, you will find it in these words:

'And they shall gnaw a file and flee unto the mountains of Hepzidam, whar the lion roareth, and the whang-doodle mourns for its first-born.'

Now, my brethring, as I have before told you, I an unedicated man, and know nothing about grammar talk, and college hifalootin, but I am a plain, unlarnt preacher of the Gospil, what's been foreordained, and called to expound the Scripters to a dyin' world, and prepar a perverse generation for the day of wrate; or

'They shall gnaw a file, and flee unto the mountains of Hepzidam, where the lion roareth, and the whang-doodle mourneth for its first-born.

My beluved brethring, the text says 'they shall gnaw a file.' It don't say may but the SHALL And now thar's mor'n one kind of file Thar's the hand-saw file, rat-tail file, single file, double file and profile; but the kind of file spoken of here, is'nt one of them kind neither, because its a figger of speech, my brethering, and means goin' it alone and gettin' ukered, for 'They shall gnaw a file, and flee unto the mountains of Hepzidam, whar the lion roareth, and the whang-doodle mourneth, for its first-born.'

And now thar be some here with fine close on thar backs brass rings on thar fingers, and lard on thar har, what goes it while they're young; and thar be be brothers here what, as long as thar constitions and forth cent whisky lasts, goes it blind; and there be sisters here what, when they get about sixteen years old, cut thar tiller ropes and goes it with a rush; but I say, my dear brthring, take care you don't find, when Gabrael plays his last trump, that you've all went it alone and got ukered, for 'They shall gnaw a file, and flee unto the mountains of Hepzidam, whar the lion roareth and the whang-doodle mourns for its first-born.'

And, my brethring, thar's more dams besides Hepzidam. Thar's Rotterdam, Haddam, Amsterdam, mill-dam, and don't-care a dam—the last of which my dear brethring is the worst of all, and reminds me of a circumstance I once knew in the State of Illinois Thar was a man what built him a mill on the East fork of Agur Creek, and it was a good mill and ground a sight of grain, but the man what built it was a miserable sinner, and never give anything to the Church, and, my brethering, thar come a dreadful storm of wind and rain, and the fountains of the great deep were broken up, and the waters rushed down and swept that man's mill dam into kingdom kum! and he, and behold, in the morning when he got up, he found it was not worth a damn! Now, my young brethring, when the storms of temptation overtake you, take care you don't fall from grace and become like that man's mill—not worth a dam; for 'They Shall gnaw a file, and flee unto the mountains of Hepzidam, whar the lion roareth and the whang-doodle mourns for its first-born.'

What the lion roareth, and the whang-doodle mourns for its first born.' This part of my text, my brethring, is another figger of speech, and isn't to be taken as it says It does'nt mean the howlin' wilderness whar John, the hard shell Baptist, was fed on locusts and wild asses; but it means, my brethring, the city of New Yorleans, the mother of har lots and hardlots—whar corn is worth six bits a bushel one day and nary red the next—whar niggers are as thick as bugs in a spoiled bacon ham; and gamblers thieves and pick-pockets go skitting about the streets like weasels in a barn-yard—whar they have cream-colored horses, gilded carriages, marble saloons with brandy and sugar in 'em—whar honest men are scarcer nor hen's teeth, and a strange woman once took in your beluved preacher and bamboozled him out of two hundred and twenty-seven dollars in a twinklin' of a sheep's tail; but she can't do it again,—Hallelujah! for 'They shall gnaw a file, and flee unto the mountains of Hepzidam whar the lion roareth, and the whang doodle mourns for its first-born.'

My brethring, I'm Capting of that flat-boat, you see tied up thar, and I've got aboard of her, flour, and bacon, and oats and potatoes, and apples and as good Monongehaly whisky as ever you drunk, and I'm mighty apt to get a big price for it all. But what, oh! my dear brethring would it all be wuth to me without religion? There's nothing like religion, brethring Its better nor gold or silver, or jimcracks, and you can no more get to Heaven without it than a jay-bird can fly without a tail. Thank the Lord I'm an uneddicated man; but I've searched the scripters from Dan to Bartheby, and found old Zion all rigt side up with cars, and the hard shell religin the best of all religins! And its not like the Methodist what expects to get into heaven by hollerin' hell FIRE, nor the Universalists what gets on the broad gage and goes the whole hog; nor the United Brethring, what takes each other by the seats of the trowses and tries to lift themselves into Heaven, nor the Catherlicks what buys thro tickets from thar preests; but it may be likened my brethring unto a man what had to cross a river, and when he got thar the ferry-boat was gone, and he just follded up his breeches and waded over—hallelujah! for 'They shall knaw a file, and flee unto the mountains of Hepzidam, where the lion roareth and the whang doodle mourneth for its first born.'

Phes the hat brother Flint, and let every hard-shell shell out. Amen.

DR ROBACK'S

BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD PILLS.

DISEASE VANQUISHED.

—BY—

Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies.

AFTER YEARS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT Dr. Roback the eminent Swedish Physician succeeded in producing a medicine from twenty-three different species of mountain herbs of his native land which acts directly upon the causes of disease in the blood, and by restoring the corrupted fountain of life to a condition of health and purity expels disease from the system wherever it may be located or whatever may be its character. Indigestion nervous complaints, spitting of blood, coughs, consumption in its early stages sore throat, bronchitis fever and sore throat, low spirits, despondency, female weakness, pain in the back, weakness of the kidneys, dropsy, scrofula, general debility, dyspepsia, liver complaint, cancer, diabetis, lumbago and debility diarrhea and all other disorders of the organs of respiration the liver the kidneys, the stomach the nerves or the muscular fiber are promptly cured by this preparation. It is to the materies morbi or seeds of disease what an alkali is to an acid: it neutralizes them with absolute certainty, while at the same time it regulates the secretions removes obstructions from the bowels, creates appetite renews bodily vigor and regenerates every animal function. Such is the nature such are the effects of Dr. Roback's famous Scandinavian Blood Purifier which if taken in conjunction with his Scandinavian Blood Pills will not only obliterate the most painful disease but prevent their recurrence and lengthen life beyond the ordinary span.

In the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS Dr. Roback presents the result of twenty years of experience, hard study and experiment of what a perfect pill should be. No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial Price of the Scandinavian Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle or $5 per half-dozen; Scandinavian Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or five for $1

Peru, Miami Co. Ind., Aug 4, 1857.

DR C. W. ROBACK: I have received so much benefit from your scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills that I have thought it my duty and it is no less my inclination to inquire you a plain statement of my case. I was for years afflicted with that bane of all comfort and efficiency in busin-ss dyspepsia To recapitulate all the so-called remedies which I have used to rid myself of this disease would indeed make a melancholy catalogue. I also consulted with the best physicians I could hear of. I was induced to try your remedies through the persuasions of a friend, and after using them a few days was relieved and in a short time, less than a month I was entirely and permanently cured. I was also afflicted with the most violent nervous head-ache which I suppose was occasioned by my disordered stomach, for when my dis-pain left me, my head-ache left with it. I now feel better in every respect than I have for ten years.

Very truly yours, JOHN S DEMUTH.

From the Rev Mr McMULLEN Pastor of Roberts Chapel

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct 5, 1857.

DR C. W. ROBACK—Dear Sir: I have used your Blood Purifier for a nervous affection, from which I have suffered much at times. While it is pleasant to the taste, it certainly has a happy effect upon the nerves disease accept my thanks for your kind regard, and acts and believe me

Yours, J. W. T. McMULLEN.

FROM A WELL-KNOWN STEAMBOAT CLERK.

LOUISVILLE, June 4, 1857

DEAR DOCTOR: Send me half a dozen boxes of your Pills care of H. G. Curtis & Co so I can get them next trip Six weeks ago nothing could have convinced me that a twenty-five cent box of Pills could have relieved my obstinate chronic constipation with its attending evils I told you so when I bought them but I am bound to own that your Pills fill the contract Why I have taken as many as six (6) of ——'s and other makers' sometimes without effect and sometimes with too much effect, but I have no trouble with yours—they are just what I want.

CINCINNATI, Friday, Sept 4, 1857

DR. ROBACK—Dear Sir: Having been afflicted with neuralgia or rh-umatism for the past year and a half and having seen your medicine called the Scandinavian Blood Purifier, highly recommended by gentlemen with whom I am acquainted, I was induced to try it, but not before I had used various other medicines—After using two bottles I felt its effect very sensibly, and upon using two more I found myself perfectly cured. You will allow me therefore, to congratulate you upon making a discovery in medicine which is proving itself to be a worker of such wonders in the diseases of the human family

DR. C. W. ROBACK Dear Sir: Having been troubled for several years with extreme debility and weakness, so much so that I was unable to attend to my ordinary business at times, and having heard of the wonderful cures that your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Pills were effecting I was induced by a friend to try them. I have been using the Purifier for the last twelve months and find the medicine fully equal to its recommendations. So valuable is it to me that I can't now dispense with the use of it at my advanced age of 81—seventy-seven years.

Process for Preserving Meat

By this process, all vegetable and animal substances can be preserved without losing any of their peculiar qualities, and without changing their form or appearance. As regards meats, it must be observed that the meat must be freed from blood, and all the watery parts, and then exposed to a current of air until it has lost its surplus moisture. Whole carcasses of the animal, or large pieces are better fit for the process than thin slices. After the meat has been sufficiently dried in the open air, it is suspended by a rope in a reservoir, and care must be taken that the several pieces are so separate each from the other as to give free access to the air from all sides. Any box, cask or apartment made of boards, or a common room may serve for the reservoir, if the walls of the latter have been covered over with boards or sized paper. The reservoir has to be hermetically closed to exclude external air, the door having to be lined with felt or rubber, so as to close up air tight. On the upper part of the reservoir a small pipe is provided, by which the air contained in the reservoir is pumped out, a similar contrivance is provided with on the lower part. After the pieces of meat or other substances have been suspended in the reservoir, a current of carbonic acid gas is let into the lower part. This effect is produced by burning the fuel in a small furnace, which is connected with the reservoir by a pipe, through which the gas passes into the reservoir. The furnace is kept burning. If the pipe on the upper part, which must also be closed, be opened, the atmospheric air in the reservoir is driven out by the carbonic acid gas, as the latter is specifically heavier than the former. The substances to be kept in the reservoir should be dried to the degree that they lose about one eighth of their weight. Four or five pounds of carbonic acid gas are sufficient to exhaust the air from a reservoir of 100 cubic feet. Meat thus preserved will keep for months, and probably for years. It may be hermetically sealed in cases, or may be combined in the usual manner with pulverized sugar, the sugar being less than required by ordinary means in preparing for long voyages. A third method is that of smoking. It will not preserve meat for several weeks. There is a process in Germany for preserving meat, which is said to be almost unlimited in point of time. Fresh meat is packed in barrels, having between each layer a layer of fine charcoal powder, which latter absorbs all moisture, however, must be kept at as low a temperature as possible. It is said that sugar is entirely unnecessary in the operation. Polytechnic Journal.

Concentrated Milk

Gail Borden Jr's patent concentrated milk and preserving milk has been in successful operation in Borden, Litchfield Co., Conn., a [illegible] 32 cts. per quart. It is [illegible] by simply evaporating the milk in vacuo, at a temperature of less than [illegible] in using it, water is simply added in which the fluid is restored to its former condition. From personal experience we can recommend it as a better article for family use than any of the milk sold in this country, and equal to the best. Under ordinary conditions this milk will keep a little longer than common milk, but there are two ways in which it can be preserved for months and probably for years. It may be hermetically sealed in cases, or may be combined in the usual manner with pulverized sugar, the sugar being less than required by ordinary means in preparing for long voyages. A third method is that of smoking. It will not preserve meat for several weeks. There is a process in Germany for preserving meat, which is said to be almost unlimited in point of time. Fresh meat is packed in barrels, having between each layer a layer of fine charcoal powder, which latter absorbs all moisture, however, must be kept at as low a temperature as possible. It is stated that sugar is entirely unnecessary in the operation. Polytechnic Journal.

We can vouch for the integrity of Mr. Borden, having known him for many years.

The undersigned believes that he need only announce to this community that he was a partner in the late famous establishment at the old New York store, to ensure him a liberal share of public patronage; all are aware what a flourishing business was done at that House, while he was a partner in the firm, that is, before he turned the grind-stone, and how that establishment almost disappeared when the power was withdrawn. It is not my intention therefore, but that the public will be informed to know, that the self same power is now in motion a Machine that is now turning out Tables, Bureaus, Bedsteads, Chairs, and all kind of Furniture, with such dispatch that will enable him to sell them at such a low, that will astonish the natives. He would say, to all those who want good furniture, "come on, now is the time" as he is determined to 'bust' every establishment in town.

The Right Alone Expedient.

There are certain principles which are acknowledged by all men. Perhaps there is none more generally received than that which declares rectitude to be the only guarantee of permanent prosperity.

Few would openly contradict this sentiment and yet many do practically deny it. Many admit it with a mental reservation in their favor, and imagining themselves exceptions to the rule, presume by their peculiar shrewdness and foresight to make a speedy and fortunate voyage to the haven of success, even though they do swerve somewhat from the Chart of Truth.

But, however much men by their actions intimate the contrary, it is nevertheless a fact, that truth governs the Universe; and consequently is the only rule of expediency. The poet declared this, when he sung of Satan and all 'his horrid crew hurled headlong from the ethereal sky.' The record of man from his first transgression down to the present attests it. Conscience proclaims it. God proclaims it. Whoever denies this decree, denies the existence, or impeaches the character of Jehovah.

This principle of true expediency is strikingly exhibited and verified in the disposition of all nations and systems of power to found themselves upon some moral force. Conscious that might is not right, they are always seeking to set up a claim to justice;—to derive from the cloud mists of antiquity a God-given supremacy. Hence arise the innumerable myths of Gods and Goddesses kindling the breath of mighty nations, and personally interposing for their establishment. Athems extolled her titular Goddess and foster mother Minerva. Sparta deified her lawgiver, Lycurgus; and Rome her Romulus. Augustus Cesar, borrowed his scepter from Venus' godlike son. And in more modern times the Papal Pontiff claims to be the vicegerent of God, and like his diabolical coadjutor can cite scripture for his purpose. Peru too has her Incas, children of the sun, and Mexico her Montezumas of sacred lineage. Thus are mankind warned by invincible instinct, that force gives no title to rule; thus do they tacitly acknowledge reason justice and right to be the fountain of all political legitimacy.

Once admit this principle, once recognize rectitude to be the only source of truly prosperous action, and you have the beginning of that thread which followed will lead safely through the labyrinth of human destiny. Deny it, and you are lost in a wilderness of perplexity and defeat, gyrating in an ever recurring series of vain imaginings and empty speculations. Deny it, and you strike down the very pilot of your ship, and are plunged headlong upon the breakers or drawn within the fatal maelstrom.

The universal experience of mankind goes to sustain this law of right. The merchant finds unflinching honesty the only true tailsman of success. It was uncompromising rectitude, that won fortune for Budgett, Girard, Astor, Lawrence and Peabody. It is this which has made all our modern merchants As mushrooms suddenly spring up and maintain a transient existence amidst corruption and decay, so may the petty time server, out of chicanery and deceit, suddenly rise to affluence, and as suddenly fall. Even Barnum, the prince and most successful champion of humbuggery, has not been without his reverses; nor has he with all his cunning escaped the ban of public opinion.

The legal profession is truly honorable only as it is based upon rectitude. And although multitudes have brought reproach upon it, and employed their talents but to 'finish faults illustrious and give infamy renown,' yet there have ever been a few who dared at all times to uphold the right and oppose the wrong. Such were Marshall and Wirt; such are Seward, and others of our day, whose names are untarnished, whose characters are unimpeachable.

True expediency has also laid her interdict upon all political intrigue and subserviency. Bacon set aside virtue, and as a reward for his duplicity, received the title of 'brightest, wisest, meanest of mankind.' Arnold and Burr truckled to selfishness and became the dupes of their own traitorous Machinations. The names of Tallyrand and machiavelli have become synonymous with everything that is villainous in artifice or abominable in practice. Such characters stand forth upon the page of time, like those ancient castles of the Old World whose empty halls and silent domes, where the dreary owl his midnight vigil keeps, tell naught but the the memory of their vanished greatness.

As we draw aside the curtain from the vaulted chambers of the past, myriads of grim ghosts arise and stalk along in sad funeral silence; how that silence speaks; speaks of broken vows and perjured tongues; of time-bought villainies; of worshipers of mamon, traitorous to themselves, their country and their God; speaks of naught but splendid failures; of lofty hopes buried in everlasting despair.—These are false ambition's doomed sons

But amidst the hordes of expediency-lovers, like gems amid heaps of rubbish, appears a Hampden, Wilberforce, Washington and Adamses, and a host of others whose names but grow brighter with the lapse of time. Such men are heaven's richest legacy to mortals.

Again this principle, true of individuals, is no less true of nations, which are but an aggregate of individuals. The kingdoms of the world, built upon wrong, grown great by oppression, run their short race of cruelty and ambition, live their brief day of glory, and then, having devastated the earth and subjugated her tribes, checked by no control, hold at bay by no Argus-eyed foe, and acknowledging no principle of right, fall a prey to their lust and plunge the dagger into their own breasts. Maddened by success, set on fire by every inhuman passion and drunk with the blood of their fellows, they become victims to the scourge of God.

The finger of time, ever points to the fact that a nation to be truly prosperous must be just. It echoes from Babylon's mouldering heaps, and amid Judea's sacred hills; the winds breathe it in hollow tones over the ruins of Carthage; it comes like a solemn dirge from the tombs of the Cesars; at is written in blood on the plains of France; and Spain the land of the Iquisition and auto de fee, bears it deep emblazoned on her brow. Kings, Empires, Thrones, nurtured in wrong, all join the funeral march of Time. Thus may it be said of nations as of individuals 'their passions forge their fetters.'

Whether we as a people are to rush madly on in a career of self-agrandisement trampling down the rights of others and acquiring their territory by dint of superior force; whether we are to flash forth upon the political sky with a transient sickly glare and then dissappear in endless night, adding another to the list of nations that were and are not, is a question yet to be decided by us and by posterity. Abide by the principles of our forefathers and we shall have harmony and prosperity, abandon them and we shall have discord and destruction.

Such a fate is as sure as that there is a God who casts down the haughty, and befriends the weak.

Not only the outer, but also the inner world, the conscience, declares rectitude and expediency to be coincident. Her counsel ever is 'be just and fear not.' She sends terror to the evil doer, paralizing every effort and dwarfing every energy. Tis conscience that makes cowards of us all. Happy the man who enjoys her approving smile.

But it cannot be denied that there are many maxims rife in the world which are directly at war with the teachings of history and conscience. It is commoh for men to say that such and such things are desirable but unfortunately they are impracticable. As though anything could be really desirable and yet impracticable As though the Almighty had placed before us objects beneficial and proper, yet unattainable. No, it they are impracticable they are undesirable.

Another and a prevalent delusion is embraced in the saying, 'Our country right or wrong!' But is this the sentiment of true patriotism? Is it consonant with a high exalted love for our country, to aid or encourage her in a course of injustice which must be disastrous, suicidal? Is it (to speak of no higher motive,) is it policy, to uphold her in fraud and oppression?

Such are some of the 'seeming truths which cunning times put on to entrap the wisest.'

But notwithstanding the caviling and spurious policy which abounds, it is evident that Truth is advancing; is becoming more and more the criterion. The moral sentiment of the world is ever against the man who acts contrary to her teachings. The very tottering of thrones and trembling of monarchs, bear witness to her power, betoken her triumph. Even now have the nations of the farthest East risen in their might to greet her. Steadily onward is her march. A heaveuly radiance gilds her path. Dackness fleeth before her, light is dawning. Soon shall the morning stars sing together over a new creation, the abode of Liberty Truth and Love.

Little Bell.

He prayeth well who loveth well
Both man, and bird, and beast.
[The Ancient Mariner.

Little Bell sat down beneath the rocks—
Tossed aside her gleaming, golden locks—
"Bonny bird" quoth she—
"Sing me your best song before I go."
"Here's the very finest song I know,
"Little Bell," said he.

And the Blackbird piped—you never heard
Half so gay a song from any bird—
Full of quips and wiles.
Now so round and rich, now so soft and slow;
All for love of that sweet face below,
Dimpled o'er with smiles.

And the while that bonny bird did pour
His full heart out freely o'er and o'er,
'Neath the morning skies,
In the little childish heart below
All sweetness seemed to grow and grow,
And shine forth in happy overflow,
From the bright blue eyes.

Down the dell she tripped, and through the glade
Peeped the Squirrel from the hazel shade,
And from out the tree,
Swung and leaped, and frolicke'd void of fear—
While bold Blackbird piped that all might hear—
"Little Bell!" piped he.

Little Bell sat down amid the fern—
"Squirrel, Squirrel! to your task return—
"Bring me nuts!" quoth she.
Up away! the squirrel hies—
Golden wood-lights gleaming in his eyes—
And down the tree,
Great ripe nuts, kissed brown by July sun,
In the little lap drop one by one—
Hark! how Blackbird pipes to see the fun!
"Happy Bell!" quoth he.

Little Bell looked up and down the glade—
"Squirrel, squirrel, from the nut-tree shade,
Bonny Blackbird if you're not afraid,
Come and share with me!"
Down came Squirrel, eager for his fare—
Down came bonny Blackbird, I declare;
Little Bell gave each his honest share—
Ah! the merry three!

And while the frolic playmates twain
Piped and frisked from bough again,
'Neath the morning skies,
In the little childish heart below,
All sweetness seemed to grow and glow,
And shine out in happy overflow,
From her blue, bright eyes.

By her snow white cot, at close of day,
Knelt sweet Bell with folded arms to pray.
Very calm and clear
Rose the praying voice to where, unseen
In blue heaven, an angel shape serene
Paused awhile to hear.

"What good child is this," the angel said,
"That with happy heart, beside her bed,
Prays so lovingly!"
Low and soft, oh! very low and soft,
Crooned the Blackbird in orchard croft,
"Bell, dear Bell!" crooned he.

"Whom God's creatures love," the angel fair
Murmured, "God doth bless with angel's care.
Child, thy bed shall be
Folded safe from harm—love, deep and kind,
Shall watch around and leave good gifts behind,
Little Bell, for thee."

A Man Ruined by his Wife.

A poor and dissipated man sought lodgings the other night at the Hammond street station-house, having no other place to go, and no friends to aid him—Seventeen years ago he was an upright and industrious mechanic, when he married a widow, the mother of two girls, who kept boarding house on Front street—This woman seemed to have many amiable and estimable qualities, and the mechanic expected to find her a helpmeet and affectionate companion.

A few months served to dissipate his delusion. She was not only perverse and unkind, but positively dishonest and depraved. She strove in every way to thwart her husband's wishes; and the mere expression of a desire of his, was sufficient to beget a contrary one on hers. They lived a worse than cat-and-dog life for several years; but still the husband, on account of a female child that had been born to them, as well as of her two daughters, to whom he was much attached thought a seperation would result unfortunately, and so he bore all her ill-humors and contradictions.

The wife soon perceived the growing fondness of her husband for her daughters and with that unnatural jealousy and inexpicable spirit of perversity that characterizes her sex, determined not only to render the girls odious in his sight, but to remove them as far as possible from his influence. Strange and horrible as it may seem in a mother, she connived at their ruin, and in a few months they were leading, publicly, abandoned lives.

Powerful and cruel as was this blow the worthy mechanic, yet bore up against it. He had his own daughter still to love—to live, to labor and to struggle for.—With anxiety but delight, he saw her expanding and ripening into womanhood and his heart was centered more and more in her—the sole object of his thoughts the end of his desires. But the vile woman who disgraced the sacred name of mother, had designs upon her also, and for the purpose of thwarting her husband of revenging herself upon him for an imaginary wrong, she was willing to blacken her soul with a hideous crime.

One morning, when the husband asked for his daughter, who had then reached her eighteenth year, her mother told him she had left home and gone, she knew not where. The miserable father saw in the ill-suppressed feeling of malignity, in the revengeful gleam of the eye, that the woman told a falsehood, and guessed but too well the horrid truth, as he remembered the awful fate of her other daughters.

Still, it behooved him to make every possible exertion to recover his child, and if possible, to snatch her from a life of infamy. He searched the city through traveled East and West, North and South wherever the smallest shadow of hope pointed, but could hear no other tidings of her than that she led a course of shame.

He returned to his now desolate home a hopeless crushed and broken hearted man. His mission was ended. He had nothing to perform now—nothing to bind him to the world. The last strand by which he clung to hope was severed and he fell, far into the bottomless abyss of despair

Since then, he has been an outcast, a wanderer; striving to drown memory in the Circean cup, and to extinguish the fires of consuming grief. He is slowly but as surely committing suicide as if he had placed the pistol to his brain or the dagger to his breast.—Cin. Enq.

A Mothers last Prayer.

BY MRS. ANN S. STEPHENS.

"First our flowers die—and then
Our hopes, and then our fears,—and when
These are dead, the debt is due,
Dust claims dust—and we die too."

I was very young, scarcely beyond the verge of infancy, the last and most helpless of the three little girls who were gathered around my poor mother's death-bed When I look on the chain of my varied existence—that woof of gold and iron woven so strangely together—the remembrance of that young being who perished so early and so gently from the bosom of her family, forms the first sad link which ever gives forth a thrill of funeral music when my heart turns to it—music which becomes deep-toned and solemn as that chain is strengthened by thought and bound together by the events of successive years. The first human being that I can remember was my mother, moving languidly about her home, with the paleness of disease sitting upon her beautiful features and a crimson spot burning with painful brightness upon either cheek. I remember that her step became unsteady, and her voice fainter and more gentle day by day, till at last she sunk to her bed, and we were called upon to witness her spirit go forth to the presence of Jehovah. They took me to her couch, and told me to look upon my mother before she died.—Their words had no meaning to me then but the whisper in which they were spoken thrilled painfully through my infant heart, and I felt that something very terrible was about to happen. Pale, troubled faces were around that death-pillow—stern men, with sad, heavy eyes—women overwhelmed with tears and sympathy—and children that huddled together, shuddering and weeping, they knew not where fore. Filled with wonder and awe, I crept to my mother, and burying my brow in the mass of rich brown hair that floated over her pillow, heavy with the damp of death, but still lustrous in spite of disease, I trembled and sobbed without knowing why, save that all around me was full of grief and lamentation. She murmured and placed her hand upon my head. My little heart swelled, but I lay motionless and filled with awe. Her lips moved, and a voice, very tremolous and low, came faintly over them. These words broken and sweet as they were, left the first clear impression that ever remained on my memory—'Lead her not into temptation, but deliver her from evil.' This was my mothers last prayer! In that imperfect sentence her gentle voice went out forever. Young as I was, that prayer had entered my heart with a solemn strength. I raised my head from its resting-place, and gazed awe-stricken upon the face of my mother. Oh, how an hour had changed it. The crimson flush was quenched on her cheeks, a moisture lay upon her forehead, and the gray mysterious shadows of death were stealing over her thin features, yet her lips still moved, and her deep blue eyes were bent on me, surcharged with spiritual brightness, as if they would have left one of their vipid, unearthly rays as the seal of the death-bed covenant. Slowly as sunbeams pale at nightfall from the leaves of a flower, went out the starlight fire of her eyes; a mist came over them, softly as the dew might fall upon that flower, and she was dead! Even then I knew not the meaning of the solemn change I had witnessed; but when they bore forth from my mother's death-bed my heart was filled with awe and misgiving.

All were overwhelmed with the weight of their own sorrow, and I was permitted to wander around my solitary home unchecked and forgotten. I stood wondering by as they shrouded my mother, and smoothed the long hair over her pale forehead. Silently I watched them spread the winding-sheet, and fold those small pale hands over her bosom; but when they closed the blinds and went forth, my little heart swelled with a sense of unkindness in shutting out the sunshine, and the sweet summer air which had so often called a smile to her pale lips, when it came to her bed fragrant from the rose thickets, and white clover field which lay beneath the windows they had so cruelly darkened. The gloom of the death-chamber made me very sorrowful, but I went to the bed, turned down the linen, and laid my hand caressingly on the pale face which lay so white and motionless in the dim light. It was cold as ice. I drew back affrighted, and stealing from the room sat down alone, wondering and full of dread.

They burried her beneath a lofty tree on the high bank of a river. A waterfall raises its anthem near, and the sunset flings his last golden shadows among the long grass that shelters her. I remember it all—the grave with its newly-broken sod—the coffin placed on its brink—the clergyman with his surplice sweeping the earth, and the concourse of neighbors gathered around that grave; each lifting his hat reverently as the solemn hymn swelled on the air, answered by the lofty anthems surging up from the waterfall, and the breeze rustling through the dense boughs of that gloomy tree.—Then came the grating of the coffin as it was lowered into its narrow bed, the dull, hollow sound of the falling earth, and those most solemn words of 'Dust to dust, and ashes to ashes.' With mournful distinctness were all these things impressed on my young mind; but my mother's last prayer is written more forcibly than all in characters that deepen with maturity. It has lingered about my heart, a blessing and a safeguard, pervading it with a music that cannot die.

Many times when the heedlessness of youth would have led me into error, has that sweet voice, now hushed for ever, intermingled with my thoughts, and like the rosy links of a fairy chain, drawn me from my purpose. Oft when my brow has been wreathed with flowers for the festival, when my cheek has been flushed and my eyes have sparkled with anticipated pleasure, have I caught the reflection of those eyes in the mirror, and thought of the look which rested upon me when my mother died—that broken supplication to Heaven has come back to my memory; the clustering roses have been torn from my head; sad and gentle memories have drank the unnatural glow from my cheeks, and my thoughts have been carried back to my lost parent, and from her up to the heaven she inhabits. The festival, with all of its attractions, has been lost in gentle reflections, and I have been "delivered from temptation." Again, when the sparkling wine cup has almost bathed my lips, amid merriment and smiles and music, has the last sad prayer of my mother seemed to be mingled with its ruby contents, and I have put away the the goblet that "I might not be led into temptation." When my hand has rested in that of the dishonourable, and trembled at the touch of him who says in his there is no God, as that voice seemed to flow from his luring accents, I have listened to it and fled as from the serpent of my native forests.

Again, and again, when the throbbings of ambition have almost filled my soul, and the praises of my fellow-men have become a precious incense, the still voice of my mother's prayer has trembled over each heart-string, and kindled it to a more healthy music. In infancy, youth and womanhood, that prayer has been to me a holy remembrance—a sweet thought full of melody, not the less beautiful that there is sadness in it.

For the Tecumseh Herald

There Must be Something Wrong.

When earth produces, free and fair,
The golden waving corn,
When fragrant fruits perfume the air,
And fleecy flocks are shorn,
While thousands have no mouth to do
And sing this ocean's song—
"We starve, we die, Corn is no food"
There must be something wrong.

When wealth is wrought in season's roll
From off the fruitful soil,
When luxury from pole to pole
Reaps fruit from hemmit toil
When from a thousand, one alone
In plenty rolls along,
While others only guess the bone,
There must be something wrong.

And when productions never ends,
The earth is yielding ever;
A copious harvest oft begins,
But distribution—never!
When toiling millions work to fill
The wealthy coffers strong,
When hands are crushed that work and till,
There must be something wrong.

When poor men's tables waste away
To barrenness and drought,
There must be something in the way
That's worth the finding out;
With surfeit one's great tables bend
While numbers move along;
While scarce a crust their boards extend,
There must be something wrong.

Then let the law give equal right
To wealthy and to poor:
Let Freedom crush the arm of might
We ask for nothing more,
Until this system it begun,
The burden of our song
Must, and can only be, this one—
There must be something wrong.

The following article which we clip from the St. Cloud Visitor, and which is edited by Mrs. Jane G. Swisshelm, formerly of the Pittsburgh Visitor, is a just and womanly tribute to one of Minnesota's richest gems, and to a name not unfamiliar to many of our readers, the lady alluded to being Mrs Julia A. A. Wood, formerly Miss Sargeant, for some years a resident of our village:

"Minnie Mary Lee"

This is the nom de plume of a popular contributor to Arthur's Home Magazine, whose home is in Sauk Rapids, a town on the opposite side of the Mississippi, and about two miles above St. Cloud. Her real name is Mrs. Wood and her native State is New Hampshire. Her husband is a lawyer and was Receiver at the Land Office during Gen. Pierce's administration, a gentleman of very commanding appearance and great urbanity of manners. Their home is remarkable for the elegance of its construction and appointments—The house sits upon a high bluff where one has the finest view of prairie, woodland and waterfall that we have seen in Minnesota,

Mrs. Wood, in person, is exceedingly prepossessing, of medium height, with fair and ruddy complexion, dark masses of brown hair; and large hazle eyes beaming with intelligence. In manner she is diffident almost to bashfulness, yet graceful, ladylike, and she has that "excellent thing in woman, a voice low and sweet." She appears to be one of the very few literary women who are happy in their domestic relations; and who have not fled to the pen to get away from the pressing consciousness of some crushing misery. Her only great sorrow appears to have been the death of her first born which leaves her but one child, a bright boy of three summers. Her pen has been an important means of making known the great natural beauty and many resources of her adopted land. They have lived in Sauk Rapids near seven years, have endured all the hardships of pioneer life, and are now enjoying their reward in being already surrounded with appreciating friends, and all the comforts of civilized life.

Washington, Feb. 16

Last night officer McHenry arrested W. Fleming, alias M. F. Norton, who is suspected of being the man who murdered H. F. Roberts, at Winchester, Tenn., about Christmas time. Subsequent information induces the belief that the same person followed Calhoun and his party from Kansas, with nefarious designs. He has been committed for further examination, on the receipt of intelligence from Tenn. Col. Carpenter of Chicago, has been detained by Calhoun to assist in the prosecution.

The Primary School Fund.

We indicated some two weeks since our satisfaction that at least a portion of the avails of the Swamp lands donated to this State by Congress, are devoted to an increase of our common school fund. Such a disposition of these lands, is worthy the beneficence that bestowed them upon us, and the intelligence of the people of our Peninsular State.

The complaint made by some, that it is a perversion of the grant, inasmuch as that was made for the single purpose of drainage, is unfounded. All the drainage contemplated by Congress, is made a condition of sale to every individual who proposes to buy, and as for the rest it is, a gift to the State, for its sole use and benefit, as shall to it seem to be most desirable. A simple reading of the terms of the grant will convince any one of this.

The pretence is that this is robbing the Northern counties of any rights accruing to them under the grant is still more absurd. It is indeed true that most of these lands lie in the new counties, but it is also true that most of the inhabitants of the State are in the older ones. If congress had intended to give the lands to the counties in which they lie, it was very easy for the law to have said so, but it does not, and it is therefore sufficiently evident, that it was designed for the use and benefit of all, instead of one-tenth of the inhabitants of the State, as those counties holding these lands were somewhat inclined to claim.

We say again that it speaks well for the character and intelligence of the people of this State, and of the Legislature which represent them, that they have thus elected to devote so much of the large fund, which this swamp land grant has thrown into their hands, to the purposes of education. We only wish that the whole instead of the half of said fund had taken this direction.

It may be said that our School Fund is already large, and so it is. Michigan though not yet possessing a State history of a quarter of a century, is one of the most richly endowed in her educational interests, of any State in the Union, and this addition to that fund will materially advance its general scope and utility.—Yet it must be brone in mind, that while this fund cannot hereafter, in all probability become to any considerable extent augmented, a large portion of the State is still unsettled, and when settled cannot fail to increase the number of scholars among whom this money is to be distributed manyfold, so that after all, it is not very probable that the amount to be appropriated from this fund, to each scholar, per capita, will ever very much exceed what it now is.

There is no danger therefore that it will ever be found too large for the purposes proposed in its institution. For our own part, we would cheerfully assume any risk of injury to the cause, were it in our power to double the amount.

LITERARY NOTICES.

Michigan Farmer.

The January and February Nos. of this excellent Agricultural State Journal are duly received, and are well worthy the attention of every farmer in the State.—This excellent magazine so ably conducted by R. F. Johnston Esq and his indefatigable associate Mrs L. B. Adams, has so much of local adaptation and interest that it cannot well be dispursed, for any of the more showy, though less useful publications of eastern Cities. One thing more the price is so low, that if not promptly, paid in by the subscriber, its value is nearly lost to the publisher, those therefore who are not willing to commit a deliberate wrong, should never wait to have a dollar subscription to any paper, or magazine, called for at all, and especially not a second time.

Pienusular Journal of Medicine.

The February No. of this excellent medical Journal is promptly upon our table. We notice that with this No. Drs. Pitcher & Brodie retire from the Journal, passing it over to their associate editors Drs. Palmer & Christian. We see it also announced in some of the Detroit Dailies, how officially we know not, that the medical Independent, is to become merged in the Journal, and Prof. Gunn, became associated with Prof. Palmer in conducting the Journal & Independent, united.—We hope it is true.

We commend it to the favorable notice of our agricultural readers.

The party arrived at the mouth of the Colorado, after an unusually long passage from San Francisco. Ives found the charts of the river defective, but material for their correction had been gathered from the mouth of the Colorado to Fort Yuma. As soon as the Kansas question is disposed of, it is believed the President will call the attention of Congress, publicly, to the state of our relations with Spain, and the necessity for the adoption of prompt and vigorous measures for the enforcement of redress for the outrages committed by that power upon our flag and citizens.

The correspondent of the Times says that the House select committee on Kansas, had a meeting this afternoon, and had a stormy time. The majority voted down every proposition looking to a fair investigation of the facts.

The Tribune correspondent said the Administration Senators intend to hasten the passage of the Lecompton constitution, by a resolution to close debate at an early day. The debate promises to be one of the greatest in the history of Congress.—All the Republican Senators are preparing to take part in it. Judge Douglas is making ready for a great demonstration. The separation of himself and of Messrs. Stuart, Broderick, Harris, Marshall, Montgomery, Hickman, Cox and their associates, from the Lecompton party, is looked upon as final and complete. Arrangements are in progress for the consolidation of a great Anti-Lecompton party. It is said that Postmaster Gray, of the Cleveland Plain Dearler, is to be removed in spite of his caving in on Lecompton

SINGULAR RECOVERY.—About one year ago, in St. Louis, a German girl, five years of age, mysteriously disappeared from its parents, and all efforts for its recovery were in vain. A few days ago, the mother of the lost one noticed, while passing through the street, a finely dressed child, playing with a number of others, and almost immediately recognized it as her own. She took her home, and learned that she had been taken away in a carriage to a family in the country, who had kept her and treated her kindly—The morning of her recovery she had been brought to the city in a carrisge, in which she was left while the lady, who accompanied her, went to visit a store. She left the carriage to play with some children, at the time her mother fortunately passed. The affair has a curious air of romance, but the St. Louis papers vouch for its actual occurrence.

EAR ACHE CURED.—This painful affection to which so many persons especially children are subject every fall and winter, is readily curable by the use of BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT. A few drops upon a piece of raw cotton should be put into the ear as warm as can be borne, and the surrounding parts well bathed with the Liniment, applied with gentle friction with the hand. Thousands of cases have been relieved in a few minutes by this invaluable liniment. It is also infallible cure for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sprains and Bruises, Burns and Scalds, and all diseases of the skin It is for sale by all respectable Druggists.

There is an article selling throughout the country that has attained the widest celebrity ever known as a remedy for Liver Complaints. We have reference to Dr Sanfords Invigorator, or Liver Remedy, that has performed cures almost too great to believe, and were it not for the undoubted evidence that accompany the testimonials. It is, in truth, the greatest remedy known for Dyspepsia, Jaundice, or general debility that so often baffles the skill of our most eminent physicians.

Dr. Sandford has been for a long time one of the eminent physicians of New York, and it is said, most of his cases were treated with the Invigorator with such invariable success that he has been induced to offer it as a family medicine, and let the world have the benefit of his discovery. If those who are troubled with debility, headache, languor, or slow, lingering fever will try a bottle, we think they might save physicians' bills, and days, perhaps years of suffering.

Bragg's Arctic Liniment

This unexceptionable Liniment, upon which the great mass of afflicted of all lands now rely for relief from the pangs of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sores, Tetter, Cancer, Scrofula, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, and all cutaneous diseases, is rapidly superceding all similar preparations. The proprietors give for the encouragement of sufferers, the following enumeration of a few of the wonderful cures effected by it during the past few months. Certificates from the parties named are in the possession of the proprietors; their space precludes the publication of all but a few.

One Bottle Triumphant.

Mrs. Moffitt, No 241 Morgan Street, St. Louis, has suffered for three years with Rheumatism, and tried many preparations without effect, was restored by one fifty cent bottle of Arctic Liniment.

Out of Purgatory.

Henry Davis, Mound street St. Louis, who declared was "in the pangs of purgatory" with rheumatism for months, was cured by three or four applications of the Arctic Liniment.

Pity the Little Children.

A little daughter of Mrs Lee, residing on Lake street, Chicago was scalded all over by the upsetting of a kettle of boiling water. The Arctic Liniment was promptly applied according to the directions, and the fire was entirely extracted, and in a few days the little sufferer was well.

Restored to Beauty.

Mrs George F. Tyler, Canal street N Orleans had long suffered from a painful and disfiguring eruption on the face and by the use of one bottle of the Liniment was cured, and restored to her original beauty.

A Horrible Tumor.

Eugene Mallory, Natchez was three years the victim of a horrible tumor on the neck which resisted remedies until he tried the Arctic Liniment. Two bottles cured him in a few weeks.

Wonderful Cure!

Mrs Bedford, Mobile, was confined to her couch three years with numb palsy and after being in pair from the failure of all other remidies, was cured by the Arctic Liniment, in a little over a month.

An Explosion.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 20th, 1857.
I hereby certify, that having been badly scalded and received by the explosion of a Steam Boiler, which produced me to try Bragg's Arctic Liniment. The pain was instantly extracted from the scalds, and in a short time all the pain was gone from the bruises, in two weeks I was well, and able to resume my business.

The Blind See!

Webster City, Iowa, Nov 9th, 1857.
Dr. A. G. Bragg.—Dear Sir: For more than 6 years I had been afflicted with inflamed eyes, in an aggravated degree and tried various Physicians and several nostrums, to no effect. I was induced by a friend to try the Arctic Liniment and in two months my sight was nearly well. My little daughter was afflicted in the same manner for the same time, and during the time of the time was entirely blind in one eye. I applied your valuable Liniment and her eyes are now perfectly sound. Thus I have with one two-bottle of Liniment cured my daughter's eye and my own besides the rheumatism in my back. I would not be without your invaluable remedy in my house. Yours Truly,
WM RUSSELL.

Webster City, Iowa, Nov. 9th, 1857.
I hereby certify that I am well acquainted with Wm Russell, and with the astonishing cures he mentions and know his statement to be strickly true.

Good for Animals.

This Insalina Liniment is also equally effective in curing the diseases of animals as others the following certificate: Messrs J. & A. Arnot, Lynch, Arnot & Co., keep the two largest livery stables in the west and are generally known throughout the St. Louis, Dec. 22th, 1857.

We the undersigned having used Dr. Bragg's Arctic Liniment for a number of months, cheerfully testify to its superior efficacy in curing the diseases of horses, so well are we satisfied of the Arctic being the best Liniment made that we would use no other in our livery stables in this city, and consequently must experience about horses and their diseases is great, we unhesitatingly say, that the Arctic Liniment is the only one we have ever found it always effective and cordially recommend it to all livery stable keepers and others having the care of horses.

Liberal Proposition.

The proprietors agree to furnish each purchaser of a dollar bottle, with a free subscription to the Illustrated Journal for one year. This is one of the best weekly illustrated papers. A certificate containing the bottle to the benefit of this proposition, is enclosed in the wrapper around every dollar bottle. The Arctic Liniment is put up in 25 cent 50 cent and $1 bottles. The 50 cent and $1 bottles contain 50 and 100 per cent more Liniment in proportion to their size, and are the cheapest. For sale by CURE FOR GOUT.—Board with a Printer a few weeks.

☞ A bad mistake occurred in the memorial to Village Board, in our last issue. It now compares with copy.

☞ A beautiful Ambrotype can be obtained at Mrs. Bissell's Rooms, Usborn's block, for 50cts. 75cts, and $1, until the 20th of March.

☞ J. S. Strong is preparing to give our citizens a Concert of vocal and instrumental music, of which due notice will be given. Mr. S. has a fine class at the Union School also, which will soon offer an interesting programme.

THE WEST.—Dudly Sholes is anxious to exchange his house and lot in this village, for a span of horses, wagon and harness. A good bargain is offered.

DONATION.—A Donation visit will be given Rev. William Fox, Wednesday, Feby. 24th, afternoon and evening, at Union Hall.

Also, for the benefit of Rev. John Fletcher, at the residence of Dr I. H. Hamilton, on Tuesday, Feby. 23d.—A general invitation is extended.

☞ We noticed, a few days since, a beautiful piece of dentistry, at the office of Dr. Barr. It comprises a full sett on gold, and styled rim work, and is an improvement on anything in the dental line, ever exhibited in our village. This is a bold assertion, but a comparison, will not only sustain us, but will prove that Dr. B. is one the "progressive artists," who does not allow an important improvement in his art, to pass unheeded. We are glad to see our citizens appreciate the Dr's. skill. All that is necessary to obtain a job that will match the best, is, to call at Bidwell's Block, and give Mr. Barr his Price.

AUCTION.—John Vanvalkenburgh will sell, at his residence, Franklin Center, Saturday Feby. 20th.

Henry Cowie, will hold his sale 2 miles east of Mills' school house, in Macon. March 2d. See posters.

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.—We are indebted to Hon Z Chandler for a Congressional copy of the Address upon the death of Hon. John M. Clayton of Delaware.

DAILY TOLEDO BLADE.—We ought in justice to ourselves, to express our appreciation of this excellent, well sustained, and ably edited daily, which although published without the limits of our State always to be found promptly among our exchanges. Messrs Stewart & Waggoner have in spite of the hard times made it to be one of the best dailes issued upon our border.—Terms Daily $6,00, Tri Weekly $3,00 and Weekly $1,00.

WEATHER.—On last Sabbath night, (Feb. 10.) we had the heaviest fall of snow for the season; the depth at this time, though less than an average for former winters, is approximating thereto, being 2 feet here on the lake shore and three feet on the range.

Here we are, in the middle of winter with the thermometor at 30 deg., above zero, the lake compartively free from ice and harbor still open, and the general appearance of the weather more like that of March than January; the metorogical reports show that the thermometer has been below zero six nights during the entire season—three in November and three in January.—Ontonagon Miner Jan. 16.

CRINOLINE AHEAD.—The Portland Transcript says that a young lady and gentleman recently skated, on a trial of speed from Bangor to Hamden in half an hour. The gentleman had the longest leg, but the lady spread most canvass, and the wind being fair and fresh she beat him 2½ minutes.

THE NEW YORK PRESS is one of the best and cheapest illustrated family papers published. It contains over 1000 quarto pages of closely printed matter yearly, filled with handsomely illustrated Tales, Essays, &c., by the most popular writers of the day. The Press each year contains about twice as much matter as any of the monthlies, at the low price of Two Dollars.

THE REGULATORS.—The Lafayette (Ind.) Courier of Wednesday has late and reliable accounts from Noble Co., Ind., from a Mr. Richmond a prominent citizen of Noble county, and a member of the Vigilance Committee, who arrived by the express train on the Valley road that afternoon, with four of the bogus coin manufacturers in charge, on his way to Indianapolis. The Regulators at the present time have no less than 76 persons in the county jails of Noble, Steuben and Lagrange counties, and are making arrests daily. They have recovered stolen property to the value of over $10,000—broken up two mints for coining bogus halves quarters, dimes, and $20 gold peices.—Also, one Bank, with press, plates, and everything complete for issuing counterfeit notes. Five different plates on eastern banks, were found, and about $40,000 in well executed notes.

A BRISK BUSINESS.—A gentleman at Syracuse, N. Y., having written to several county clerks at the west to inquire if his wife had made application for divorce from him—the errand on which she had started—received this answer from Nunnee, Indiana: 'There has not been an application for divorce in the name of——in our courts, but I think we have divorced one-half the citizens of your State, and if we have good luck, we will, I guess, finish your State and Massachusetts in a few more years.

☞ Not a thousand miles from Oneida Co., a coroner's jury lately rendered a verdict that a certain deceased man "came to his death by excessive drinking, producing apoplexy in the minds of the jury."

☞ "Now Patrick," said a judge, 'what do you say to the charge—are you guilty or not guilty?' 'Faith, but that's difficult for your honor to tell, let alone myself—wait till I hear the evidence."

☞ A boy was going along the street, carrying a pitcher of milk, when presently he stumbled, and smash went the pitcher, and away ran the milk. Another boy, across the way, saw the accident, and shouted: "Oh! wont you catch it when you go home; your mother'll give it to you!" "No she won't, neither!" screamed the other; "my mother always says, 'Never cry for spilled milk!'"

MR. EDITOR.—At a meeting of the Board for the village of Tecumseh on the 8th. inst. the following petition was received and upon motion the village Marshall was directed forthwith to notify the dealers and venders of intoxicating liquors in said village in accordance with the prayer of the petitioners and also that said petition with the names annexed be published in the Tecumseh Herald. F. S. SNELL Clerk. Pro tem

Tecumseh Feb. 8th 1858.

PETITION.

To the President and Members of the Village Board of the village of Tecumseh Lenawee County. Michigan.

The undersigned citizens of the aforesaid village of Tecumseh would respectfully memoralize your honorable body that according to section 1st. of An Act passed by the Legislature of the State of Michigan entitled "An Act prohibiting the manufacture of intoxicating liquors and the traffic therein." No person shall be allowed to manufacture or sell at any time, by himself, his clerk, servant or agent directly or indirectly any spirituous or intoxicating liquors, or any mixed liquors a part of which is spirituous or intoxicating, except as heretofore provided." And whereas in section 5 of said Act it is made "the duty of the common council of any City, the village board of any incorporated village &c to commence an action according to law in the name of the people of the State of Michigan against any person guilty of a violation of any of the provisions of this act. &c.

And whereas it is well and publicly known that there are divers persons in this village who are selling and trafficking in intoxicating liquors contrary to law; Your memorialists would therefore respectfully request your honorable body to give notice to all persons in this village who are unlawfully selling or trafficking in spirituous or intoxicationg liquors that they discontinue such unlawful selling or trafficking therein within thirty days from the date of such notice, or they will be dealt with according to law.

DR. ROBACK'S

BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD PILLS.

DISEASE VANQUISHED.

—BY—

Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies.

AFTER YEARS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT Dr. Roback, the eminent Swedish Physician, succeeded in producing a medicine from twenty-three different species of mountain herbs of his native land, which acts directly upon the causes of disease in the blood, and by restoring the corrupted fountain of life to a condition of health and purity, expels disease from the system, wherever it may be located, or whatever may be its character. Indigestion, nervous complaints, epileptic fits, coughs, consumption in its early stages, sore throat, bronchitis, fever and ague asthma, low spirits, sexual incapacity, feminine weakness, pricking of the skin, symptomatic of paralysis, rheumatism, neuralgia, tumor cancer, diabetis, lassitude and debility, diarrhea, and all other disorders of the organs of respiration, the liver, the kidneys, the stomach, the nerves, or the muscular fiber are unerringly cured by this preparation. It is to the materies morbi or seeds of disease what an alkali is to an acid: it neutralizes them with absolute certainty, while at the same time it regulates the secretions, removes obstructions from the bowels, creates appetite, renews bodily vigor, and regenerates every animal function. Such is the nature, such are the effects of Dr. Roback's famous Scandinavian Blood Purifier which, if taken in conjunction with his Scandinavian Blood Pills, will not only obliterate the most painful disease, but prevent their recurrence, and lengthen life beyond the ordinary span.

In the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS, Dr. Roback presents the result of twenty years of experience, hard study and experiment as to what a perfect pill should be. No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial. Price of the Scandinavian Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half-dozen; Scandinavian Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or five for $1.

PEASE, Miami Co. Ind., Aug. 4, 1857.

DR. C. W. ROBACK: I have received so much benefit from your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills, that I have thought it my duty and it is no less my inclination to give you a plain statement of my case. I was for years afflicted with that bane of all comfort and efficiency in business dyspepsia. To recapitulate all the so-called remedies which I have used to rid myself of this disease, would indeed make a melancholy catalogue. I also consulted with the best physicians I could hear of. I was induced to try your remedies through the persuasions of a friend, and after using them a few days was greatly benefitted, and in a short time, less than a month, I was entirely and permanently cured. I was also afflicted with the most violent nervous headache, which I suppose was produced by my disordered stomach, for when my dispepsia left me, my headache left with it. I now feel better in every respect than I have for ten years.

Very truly yours, JOHN S. DEMUTH.

From the Rev. Mr. MCMULLEN, Pastor of Roberts Chapel:

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 5, 1857.

DR. C. W. ROBACK—Dear Sir: I have used your Blood Purifier for a nervous affection, from which I have suffered much at times. While it is pleasant to the taste it certainly has a happy effect upon the nerves. Please accept my thanks for your kind regards and acts and believe me,

Yours, J. W. T. McMULLEN.

FROM A WELL-KNOWN STEAMBOAT CLERK.

Louisville, June 4 1857.

DEAR DOCTOR: Send me half a dozen boxes of your Pills, care of H. G. Card & Co so I can get them next trip. Six weeks ago nothing could have convinced me that a twenty-five cent box of Pills could have relieved my obstinate chronic constipation, with its attending evils. I told you so when I bought them, but I am bound to own that your Pills 'fill the contrails.' Why I have taken so many as six (6) of ——'s and other makers' sometimes without effect and sometimes with too much effect; but I have no trouble with yours—they are just what I want.

CINCINNATI, Friday, Sept. 4, 1857.

DR. ROBACK—Dear Sir: Having been afflicted with neuralgia or rheumatism for the past year and a half, and having seen your medicine, called the Scandinavian Blood Purifier, highly recommended by gentlemen with whom I am acquainted, I was induced to try it, but not before I had used various other medicines. After using two bottles I felt its effect very sensibly and upon using two more, I found myself perfectly cured. You will allow me, therefore, to congratulate you upon making a discovery in medicine which is proving itself to be a worker of such wonders in the diseases of the human family.

GEORGE S. BENNETT.

Local Editor Cincinnati Daily Inquirer.

INDIANAPOLIS, Wednesday, Sept. 2, 1857.

DR. C. W. ROBACK Dear Sir: Having been troubled for several years with extreme debility and weakness, so much so that I was unable to attend to my ordinary business at times, and having heard of the wonderful cures that your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Pills were effecting, I was induced by a friend to try them. I have been using the Purifier for the last twelve months, and find the medicine fully equal to its recommendations. So valuable is it to me that I cannot now dispense with the use of it, at my advanced age of life—seventy-seven years.

I cheerfully give this information for the benefit of those similarly afflicted. MORRIS MORRIS.

Wheat and Wool Crop of Michigan.

The statistics of the exports from Detroit during the past season, which we published yesterday, present some interesting facts in reference to the wheat and wool crop of this State. All the wool which went east was taken down by vessels, scarcely a pound going by railroad; and the whole of this was produced in Michigan. The amount exported was 9,378,000 lbs., valued at $2,751,200, or forty cents per pound. The flour exports amounted 214 445 barrels, valued at $1 286-670, or 5,10 cents per barrel; and the amount exported to 1,300,978 bushels valued at $1,236,929,10, or 95 cents per bushel. The value of the wheat and flour exported is $2,523,599,10, which falls short of the value of the wool exported by $1,227,600,90.

As we have already stated, scarcely any wool was shipped by railroad, whereas both wheat and flour have gone that way. This might be an insuperable obstacle to forming an estimate by the custom house statistics if it were not for one or two facts.—It is well known that but very little wheat has been shipped through Canada, and of the flour that has gone that way, by far the largest share has been from States west of us, and we may safely say that the amount of both wheat and flour thus shipped is not equal to the quantity coming from Illinois. Thus, the amount that has been exported by vessels will cover the amount that has come out of Michigan.

Reducing the 214.445 barrels of flour to wheat, gives 965,002 bushels; which, being added to the amount of wheat, gives us the grand total of 2,265,980 bushels shipped from this port. Now, supposing that Detroit ships one-half the wheat sent out of the state, we have the whole amount thus far shipped at 4,531,960 bushels. The wheat crop of 1854, according to the last census, 7,027,931 bushels, but as the last season was an extraordinary good one, and what with increased facilities and improvements the crop of last summer must have exceeded that of 1854 by a considerable amount, probably running up to 9,000,000 bushels.

It will be seen from this that but about one-half of the wheat crop has come forward, the remainder being still in the hands of the producers. Very near 4,000,000 bushels of wheat are now in the State of Michigan, and farmers, merchants, and shippers at liberty make the most they can from a knowledge of this fact.—Detroit Free Press.

Lard and Resin for Tools.

Look at the plows, harrows, cultivators hoes, shovels, forks, chains, axes, saws, not enumerate wagon irons and a multitude of little tools that ought to be provided on or about any farm, and then reckon up how many of them will be lost where the combined effect of air and moisture will attack their surfaces and eat away enough to render them rough at least, if not to materially depreciate their value. Many instruments are destoyed faster by lying idle than they would be by constant wear. We will not now write a homily upon the value and importance of a tool house, and of having every implement stored in it, but give a recipe for an exceedingly simple, cheap and effective preperation one available to all, which will at least save all metals from loss by rust.

Take about three pounds of lard and one pound of resin. Melt them together in a basin or kettle and rub over all iron and steel surfaces in danger of being rusted. It can be put on with a brush or peice of cloth, and wherever it is applied it most effectually keeps air and moisture away, and of course prevents rust. When knives or forks, or other household articles, liable to become rusted and spotted, are to be laid away, rub them over with this mixture, and they will come out bright and clean even years afterwards. The coating may be so thin as not to be perceived, and it will still be effectual. Let every one keep a dish of this preparation on hand. As it does not spoil of itself it may be kept ready mixed for months or years. mem. Fresh lard, containing no salt should be used. Resin is a cheap article, and may be obtained almost anywhere for four to six cents per pound.

INDIAN MEAL DOUGH NUTS.—A teacup and a half of boiling milk, poured, on two teacups of sifted Indian meal. When it is cool, add two teacups of wheat flour, one teacup of butter, one teacup and a half of sugar, one of yeast, and two eggs, with a table spoonful of cinnamon, or a grated nutmeg.

If not sufficiently stiff, add equal portions of wheat and Indian meal.—Let it rise till very light. Roll it about half an inch thick, and cut it into small diamond shaped cakes, and boil them in lard.

"What are vagus here?" asked a lawyer of a boy.

"What lawyers's father get of a Saturday night?"

"Cyt?" said the boy, "why he gets tight as a brick."

Why does the ladies like the North-East wind?

Because it brings chaps to their lips.

ONE OF THE BEST PURGATIVE AND LIVER MEDICINES now before the public, namely DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, or LIVER REMEDY, that will not say Cathartic, easier, milder and more effectual than any other medicine known. It is not only a Cathartic, but a Liver remedy, acting first on the bowels to expel its morbid matter then on the stomach and bowels to carry off that matter, thus accomplishing two purposes effectually, without any of those painful feeling experienced in the operation of most cathartics. It strengthens the system at the same time that it purges it, and when taken daily in moderate doses will strengthen and build it up with unusual rapidity. DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR is compounded entirely from new articles of medicine, namely Gums.

Some idea of the strength of these gums may be formed when it is known that one bottle of the invigorator contains as much strength as one hundred doses of Calomel, without any of its deleterious effects.

Though possessing rare medical powers, these Gums have been but little known to Physicians and never used in their prescriptions until made in the form of the Invigorator, which met with such unprecedented success as to induce the proprietor to offer it as a family medicine tried and known in its effects. It has rarely ever failed to cure Liver Complaints in their worst forms.

INDIGESTION being caused by a deranged Liver is cured when the Liver is excited to action.

JAUNDICE is caused by an improper action of the Liver, and as a proof that the Invigorator relieves this disease, let any one troubled with Jaundice take the Invigorator regularly one week, and their skin will begin to assume its original color.

COSTIVENESS can be permanently cured by the Invigorator, Take it in small doses on retiring, and it assists nature in her operations. By gradually diminishing the dose, the bowels are left in a healthy and active state, and work as regularly as clock work.

SICK HEADACHE is very soon relieved by taking a double dose of the Invigorator, which corrects all acidity and sourness of the stomach.

For an over-loaded stomach Hiatus no equal, as it relieves all oppressive or uneasy feeling after eating heartily. For a RAPID SAFE and CERTAIN remedy, all who use it speak in the highest terms.

DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR come to us recommended as a cure for Liver Complaints, and all diseases arising from a Diseased Liver. The testimonials of our County and Physicians in its favor, induced us to try it, and now conviction is certain that it is one of the greatest blessings ever given to living man. Not a single case has been known the first bottle was taken, and we can eat anything edible without trouble, while before nothing but the lightest food would digest, and often that gave pain.—Now what want we say to all our readers is, if LIVER COMPLAINTS or DYSPEPSIA trouble you, do not fail to try this the greatest remedy in the world.—State Pilot.

We take infinite pleasure in recommending this medicine as a preventative for FEVER and AGUE, CHILL FEVER, and all FEVERS of a BILIOUS TYPE. It operates with certainty, and thousands are willing to testify to its wonderful virtues.

There has never been tried in our family a remedy which has met with such unbounded success in the cure of diseases incident to children, as DR. SANFORD'S INVIGORATOR, nor is it alone for diseases of children that we use it; for it acts as a Cathartic so mildly and gently, and seems to renovate the system so thoroughly that we think we are doing a service to all in advising them, when they need a medicine to try this remedy. There are cases that have come under our notice where great benefit has been received in diseases of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels, where all other remedies failed to give relief. It had become so used in our family that we will not be without it.—Jacksonville, Ala. Republican.

CLEANSE THE BLOOD AND CURE THE
Invalids, Fathers, Mothers, Physicians, Philanthropists, read their Experience and Judge of their Virtues
FROM THE CURE OF

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir: I have been a sufferer for the worst headache for many years. Have taken one box of your Pills. It seems to have put my liver right; they cleanse at once. If there will ever come a time when I am without your Pills, you may depend upon it I shall be sure to use them, the first to procure them. Yours with great respect, REV. W. PETERS, Clerk of Second Church.

Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaint

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
WASHINGTON, D. C. Feb. 1, 1855.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my family and in practice ever since you put them before the public, and say they are the best cathartic we have. Their prompt, yet mild and salutary action on the liver is quick and decided, and by them only are we admirable remedy for derangement of that important organ. Indeed, I have since found a certain cure so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them.

Fraternally yours, ALONZO POWELL, Physician of the Interior Department.

Dysentery, Relax, and Worms.

POST OFFICE, HARTLAND, LIV. CO. MICH., Jan. 8, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of physic. They have done my wife more good than all the doctors she had been sick and paying away for months. She was given off to be doctored at great expense, but got to be well when she commenced taking your Pills, which soon relieved her by expelling large quantities of worms from the body. They afterwards cured her and our two children of bloody dysentery. One of our neighbors had been sick for many months, and was given up to die. His wife cured him with two doses of your Pills. Several others around us paid from five to twenty dollars a piece for your Pills, and have much more, without any cure, than they received from them. Such a medicine as yours, which is good and honest, will be prized here.

GEO. J. GRIFFIN, Peddler.

Indigestion and Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Hiatt, Pastor of Advent Church, Cincinnati.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with great success in my family and among those I am associated with in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion, and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends.

Yours, J. V. HIATT.

WARSAW, WYOMING CO., N. Y., Oct. 6, 1856.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system, and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Erysipelas, Scrofula, King's Evil, Tumors, and Salt Rheum.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Mo.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all cathartic medicines. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had been incurable for years. Her mother has been long troubled with blotches and pimples on her skin and loss of her hair. After our child was cured, she also took Pills, and they have cured her. ASA MORGRIDGE.

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawles, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

TULASKI HOUSE, SAVANNAH, GA., Jan 8, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the benefit I have received from your skill was it not known to you. For 11 months I was afflicted with Rheumatic Gout, A celebrated physician in this and Europe considered my case one of neuralgia pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians to attend me, my disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of Dr. Mackenzie, I left my home and went last August in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I lifted your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them I am now entirely well.

SAMUEL CRAWFORD, BATON ROUGE, LA., 5 Jan 1856.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. — VINCENT SIGUR.

For Dropsy, Plethora, or kindred Complaints, requiring an active purge, they are a safe and reliable remedy.

For Costiveness or Constipation, Dinner Pills, they are agreeable and effectual.

Fits, Suppression, Paralysis, Indigestion, and even Deafness, and Partial Blindness, have been cured by the alterative action of these Pills.

Most of the pills in market contain Mercury, which, though a valuable remedy in skillful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, INFLUENZA, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,

and for the relief of consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

We need not speak to the public of its virtues. Throughout every town, and almost every family in the American States, its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints have made it already known. Nay, few are the families in any civilized country that do not contain some personal experience of its effects; and few are the communities any where which have not among them some living trophy of its victory over dangerous disease of the throat and lungs. While it is the most powerful antidote yet known to man for the formidable and dangerous diseases of the pulmonary organs, it is also the pleasantest and safest remedy that can be employed for infants and young persons. Parents should have it in store against the heedless exposure that leads so often, and one dose will check the incipient cough, when it will be found to cure, long before it can settle into confirmed consumption. We have abundant proof to believe the CHERRY PECTORAL saves more lives by curing consumptions it prevents than those it cures. Keep it by you, and cure your colds while they are curable. Neglect them until no human skill can master the inveterate cough that, fastened on the vitals, eats your life away. All know the dreadful fatality of lung disorders, and how few they know too the virtues of this remedy, we need say no more than to assure them it is still made the best it can be. We spare no cost, no care, no toil to produce the most perfect possible, and thus afford those who rely upon it the best agent which our skill can furnish for the cure of disease.

The undersigned believes that he need only intimate to this community that he was a partner in the late famous establishment at the old New York store, to ensure him a liberal publica tronage; all are aware what a flourishing business was done at that House, while he was a partner in the firm, that is, while he turned the grind-stone, and how that establishment almost disappeared when the active power was withdrawn. It is not doubted therefore, but that the public will be satisfied to know, that the self same power is put in motion a Machine that is now turning out Tables, Bureaus, Bedsteads, Chairs, and all kind of Furniture, with such celerity that will enable him to sell them at prices so low, that will astonish the natives. Now I would say, to all those who want Cheap Furniture, "come on, now is the time!" I am determined to 'bust' every establishment in town.

The Dying Wife's Appeal.

Come near me, let me lay my hand
Once more upon thy brow,
And let me whisper in thine ear
Love's last and loudest vow.
The lips that breathe these trembling words
Will soon be cold in death,
And thy dear cheek can feel no more
Their warm and loving breath.

I go from thee; God only knows
How I have long'd to stay—
How I have shudder'd thus to tread
The lone and shadowy way.
Faith tells me that I soon may know
The joys the blessed find,
And yet I falter while I cast
A lingering look behind.

I see thee bow'd before me here,
In bitterness and tears,
But I can leave thee something still
To light thy weary years.
Young, tender forms will cling to thee,
Perhaps will miss my tone,
And though they may not share thy grief,
Thou will not feel alone.

Fold them still closer to thy breast,
And soothe their childish woe,
And cheer the many lonely hours
The motherless must know.
The world, with all its hopes and joys,
Will sometimes make thee glad,
But they must linger round ashearth
All desolate and sad.

And O, when Time shall calm thy grief,
Perchance the hour may come,
When thou wilt win another form
To share thy heart and home—
When thou wilt welcome to thy board
A younger, fairer face,
And bid thy children smile on her
Who takes their mother's place.

But think not, could I speak, of thee,
That I would frown or blame,
Though they should love the stranger one,
And call her by my name;
For they will speak to thee of me;
My memory is their trust;
A word, a smile, a look like mine
Will call me from the dust.

Yet make my grave no place of tears,
But let the dear ones bring,
To cheer their mother's lonely home,
The blossoms of the spring
And even there thou, too, mayst kneel,
And softly press the earth
That covers her whose face once gave
A brightness to thy hearth.

Then will the forms of early years
Steal softly to thy side,
And for an hour thou canst forget
Thou hast another bride.
She may be all thy heart can ask,
So dear, so true to thee,
But O! the spring time of thy love,
Its freshness was for me.

May she be bless'd who comforts thee,
And with a gentle hand
Still guide the little, trembling ones,
Who make our household band.
She cannot know the tenderness
That fills their mother's breast,
But she can love them for thy sake,
And make thee more than bless'd.

Yet keep one place, one little place
From all the rest apart,
One spot which I will call "a home,"
Within thy faithful heart;
And in the holy hour of dreams,
When spirits fill the air,
With tender eye and folded wing
I'll softly rest me there.

May God forgive this erring love
That is to mortals given;
It almost woos my spirit back
From happiness and heaven;
And yet I feel it will not die
When this frail life is o'er,
But watch till all my loved ones come
Where we shall part no more.

☞ The following letter was sent by a man to his son at college:

My dear son—I write to send you two pair of my old breeches, that you may have a new coat made out of them. Also, some new socks which your mother has just knit, by cutting down some of mine Your mother sends you ten dollars without my knowledge, and for fear you will not use it wisely, I have kept back half, and only send you five. Your mother and I are well, except your sister has got the measels, which we think would spread amongst the other girls, if Tom had not had them before, and he is the only one left. I hope you will do honor to my teachings; if not, then you are an ass, and your mother and myself your affectionate parents.

Life's Troubles.—We may compare the troubles which we have to undergo in the course of this life to a great bundle of faggots, far too large for us to lift. But God does not require us to carry the whole at once; he mercifully unties the bundle, and gives us first one stick, which we are to carry to-day, and then another which we are to cary to-morrow, and so on.—This we might easily manage, if we would only take the burden appointed for each day; but we choose to increase our troubles by carying yesterday's stick over again to day, and adding to-morrow's burdens to our load before we are required to bear it.

Shall I tell you a story of real life as romantic and affecting as any you will find in fiction? Well—listen! Every citizen of Mobile is familiar with the sight of the Indian girls who are in our streets in the winter. With their little parcels of lightwood upon their backs, they mark the approach of cold weather as regularly as the mocking bird, and the cardinal chronicle the approach of spring. They peddle their small parcels of pine from door to door, and all are familiar with the soft, quick petionary voice in which they exclaim 'Champa,' as they offer their cheap burdens for sale.

These Indian girls, it is well known, belong to certain Choctaw families, who refused to emigrate with their tribe beyond the Mississippi, and yet linger upon their aboriginal hunting grounds on the waters of the Pearl and Pascagoula. Though they thus exhibit an unconquerable attachment to their native soil, they have refused to adopt the habits, language, or pursuits of the whites by whom they are surrounded, and are perversely indifferent to all the inducements of civilization—They persist in leading a species of savage gipsy life—the men sustaining themselves by hunting, and the women by vending whortleberries and other wild fruits in the summer, and bundles pine in the winter. With these simple productions they visit Mobile semi-annually and for the time reside in the vicinity, in small huts or camps, constructed of bark, boards, or the limbs of trees. This has been their custom from time immemorial, and it yet continues.

These Indians are generally an ignorant race, but with all their degradation, they possess some of the virtues in a singular degree. The women are proverbially chaste and modest, and of all the young girls that annually visit our city, none have been known to depart from the path of rectitude A strong interest ther fore surrounds these simple daughters of the woods, who resist all the blandishments of their station, and pass unharmed through the streets of our city Many of them are quite handsome, and possess, beneath their rustic garbs—the calico gown and the red blanket—considerable graces of manner and appearance. As they invariably refuse to talk English very little conversation can be had with them, and that only in refference to the small bargains which they desire to make. "Champa" and "picayune," are almost the only words which they employ in their intercourse with our inhabitants Still, they are not reserved in their movement, where they wish to make a bargain, and enter the different houses of the city, stores, dwellings, and offices, without ceremony, hesitation or announcement. Who has not been startled many a morning, by a voice at the chamber-door, exclaiming "Champa."

The stoical demeanor of these Choctaw maidens has often led to the impression that they are destitute of the natural sensibilities and sentiments of their sex. They have bright, flashing eyes, well developed, symmetrical and flexible forms, beautiful small hands and feet, and show in their love for brilliant articles of dress, rings, beads, and other personal decorations, the taste and vanity of their civilized sisters: is it possible that they are destitute of those delicate sympathies and tender affections which have marked woman in all other classes and conditions of life? This question has doubtless suggested itself to many, as an interesting problem of character. In one instance, at least, an attempt—perhaps a heartless one—was made to solve it, and it is to that the story which I have to tell refers It came to my knowledge in all its details but I will attempt to narrate it in such a manner as not to detain the reader with particulars which he can imagine for himself.

Among the Choctaw gipsies, who visited Mobile in the winter of 1846, was one of unusual beauty and attractiveness.—Although scarcely developed into womanhood, not more than 17 "suns" having kissed the rich bronze of her fair cheek—she was yet tall, round limbed, straight and graceful—a model of feminine form Her features, more prominent and regular than is usual with her tribe, were delicately sculptured, and the erect attitude of her head with her large fawn like eyes, and abundant coal black hair, always neatly plaited in massive folds, gave to her appearance an air of superiority such as the youthful Pocahantas is said to have possessed. Her dress was extremely neat, though with a large number of silver and wampum ornaments, and her small feet, which any of the fair promenaders of Dauphin might have envied, were javariably dressed in moccasins, ornamented in the most fanciful style with many colored beads. As she walked about the streets of Mobile, arrayed in this way, with her parcel of pine swung cross her shoulders, she attracted the attention of all spectators for her beauty, though she would hold converse with none except in the few words by which she endeavored to dispose of her burden.

Much interest was naturally felt for this young girl, and many efforts were made to learn something of her character and history. Nothing further could be gleaned, (and this was told by "Captain Billy," a drunken Choctaw, frequently seen in garrulous moods, in our streets,) than that she was the daughter of an Indian chief, of much note, who died many years before, leaving her, an only child, with her mother, in their cabin on the Pascagoula. Her singular beauty had made her quite a belle with the young Choctaw warriors; but she was very shy and called in the Indian tongue, the Wild Fawn of Pascagoula. She supported her mother, who was very old, and herself by her traffic in berries and lightwood. Her personal charms made her one of the most successful dealers in these articles, and every one, particularly the young men of Mobile, were glad to give the preference in their patronage to this young and attractive creature. Many were the efforts made to win her smiles, and enlist her in conversation, but they were all in vain. She would go her daily round, and enter with perfect unreserve, the rooms and offices of her patrons, deposit her little load of pine, receive her dime, and then quickly retire with the trick in her hands, to procure another parcel.

Things glided on this way for some months during the winter of which I speak. At last an event occured which tested the stoicism and character of the young Fawn of Pascagoula. Among those whom she daily supplied with lightwood was a young lawyer, residing in an office in the second story of a building on one of our principal streets. Admiring the beauty of this timid vision, and feeling a strong interest for her, he determined to see if he could not, by kindness of manner, deferential notice, and elegant presents, win the heart of this simple child of the woods. Tho'gh his motive was mainly curiosity, his purposes were not bad, and he had no idea of doing any injury to the object of his experiment—by paying her those attentions which had been found potent to enchain the admiration, and win the love of more enlightened and accomplished maidens. He was a man of uncommon personal beauty, and singularly fascinating manners and all these he brought to bear, as well as he could, to effect his innocent and harmless flirtation.

It is needless to detail the arts resorted to by Henry Howard to win the heart of the Fawn of Pascagoula. He began in the most modest and deferential manner; he purchased from her, much more frequently than he need, supplies of fuel, paid her larger sums than she asked, and and made her presents of triukets, pictures and little ornaments of dress, and accomodated himself in every way to her apparent wishes. These things continued for some weeks, and at last began to have obvious effects. The Fawn tarried longer in her visits at his office than elsewhere; she always came there first, and took an evident interest in his attentions. At length she began to answer his remarks in such few words of English as she could command, and to look upon his handsome and fascinating countenance with pleased smile and earnest continued attention. The spell evidently began to work! Henry Howard understood the secrets of woman's heart well; but here he had to deal with an untored Indian girl, timid as a bird, and whose springs of emotion and sympathy could not be determined by the ordinary standards of feeling.

Do not think that I am depicting those subtle arts of fascination by which the rattlesnake lures and captivates the humming-bird. There was no purpose of evil in the heart of the young attorney. He was but practising with a simple savage heart, those tricks and elegancies of intercourse, which are recognized as legitimate in civilized society. He wished to see if the same affections could be developed in the beaded beauty of the forest, as are to be found with the polished belle of the ball room and the boudoir. The probabilities were, that the experiment would not succeed—a casuist would therefore think it harmless.

Months had passed in this way, and Henry Howard at last determined to make a more obvious demonstration of his love to the Fawn of Pascagoula. One cold morning in the month of February, just as he had finished his toilet, he heard a light step at the door, and a well known voice, as the speaker entered, playfully exclaiming, "Champa champa!" Arrayed in her most beautiful dress, with a band of silver around her hair, and long necklaces of beads falling from her graceful neck, the Fawn stood before him—She threw her armful of pine upon the hearth and looked smiling into his face. In his most graceful manner he approached her and took her hand in his. Suddenly he encircled her waist with his arm, and drawing her to him, he imprinted upon her lips, a long and fervent kiss. Modestly she looked into his face, with a slight expression of surprise, but not dissatisfaction; and then he poured forth to her warm and urgent words of love. Neither were these coldly spoken, for the young and ardent admirer had been no little interested in the object of his attentions. As he was about, however, to repeat his kisses, the now startled Fawn, by a quick movement, unloosed herself from his embraces, and glided across the room.

"Stand off, Mr. Howard," she exclaimed in better English than he had ever heard her speak before. "Me good friend to kind gentleman—but no love! The Fawn must marry her own people. She love young warrior up on Pascagoula! He have heart and skin the same color! Mobile man not good for Choctaw girl. Me go to my home—to Choctaw Chiefs cabin—to morrow. Good bye! Me love you much—you so kind—but no wife!"

As she said this she drew her red blanket as proudly about her, as ever a fashionable belle, donned her mantilla at a ball and glided from the door. Struck as motionless as a statue, the elegant Harry Howard, the Mobile dandy, stood gazing at the door through which the young Choctaw girl had vanished! His lips were slightly parted, his eyes widely open—a look of wonder and doubt upon his handsome face!

"By heavens!" he exclaimed; 'is it possible! Caught in my own trap! Jilted by an Indian! Well! it's a good joke and all right! But, by Tecumseh and Pusmataha! I must take care that the belles of Mobile do not find out this story Let who will hereafter experiment upon Choctaw charater, to discover whether these Champa girls have like affections with other people, I, for one am satisfied

"This Fawn of Pascagoula has for months received all my presnts and delicate attentions with the timid, gentleness of a nun, and now has given me the sack as completely as it could have been done by any fashionable coquette in a gilded saloon, by the light of a chandelier. Well that's something rich! Bravo! Harry Howard! Recollect hereafter, as Tom Moore says:

"What e're her lot, she'll have her will,
And Woman, will be Woman still."

How the Devil Lost.—The devil bargained for the soul of a young man. The devil was to furnish all the money Young America could spend, and if he did not spend it as fast as it came his soul was the forfeit. For several years Young America kept ahead of the devil, by the aid of women, wine, horses, etc., but the fiend made a large deposit with him, which it seemed impossible to get rid of. Young America, as a last resort, started a news-paper. The devil growled at the bill at the end of a quarter was savage at six months, and at nine, and owned up "dead broke" at the end of the year. The news-paper went down but a soul was saved.

☞ In the army of Chinese rebels there were in 1853, in Nankin alone, about half a million of women, collected from various parts of the country, and formed in Brigades of thirteen thousand, under female officers. Of those twelve thousand were picked women, drilled and garrisoned in the citadel, the rest had the hard drudgery of digging moats, making earthworks, erecting batteries, &c.

A gentleman was speaking the other day of the kindness of his friends visiting him—One old aunt in particular, visited him twice a year and staid six months each time.

"You are no gentleman," said an angry disputant to another.

'Are you?' quietly observed the other.

'Yes, I am, sir.'

'Then I am not,' was the caustic reply

Monday night was the coldest night we have had this winter.

Spicy Correspondence—True Wife.

We are assured by a friend, who is personally cognisant of what he states, that the following piquant correspondence is genuine. A gentleman, whose business calls him a good deal from home, is accustomed to give the custody of his correspondence to his wife, an intelligent lady, who, in obedience to instructions, opens all letters that come in her husband's absence; answers such of them as she can, like a confidential clerk, and forwards the rest to her liege lord at such places as he may have designated at his departure During a recent absence of her husband, the lady received a letter, of which the following (omitting names, dates and places) is a true copy:

My Dear Sir:—I saw a fine picture of you yesterday, and fell in love with it, as I did with the original in W——— last winter, when I saw you more than an hour, though I suppose you did not see me among so many. I fear you will think me forward in thus addressing you; but I trust you are as noble and unsuspecting as you are handsome and brilliant. Perhaps you would like to know something about me, your ardent admirer. Well, I am not very good at description, but I will say I am not married (though you are I am told) My friends tell me I have not a pretty face, but only a good figure. I am rather petite, have black hair and dark complexion—that is, I am what is called 'brunette.' I am stopping for a few weeks with my brother-in-law and sister, in this town, and I dearly wish you would meet meet me there before I return to W———. At any rate, do not fail to write me at least a few words to tell me whether I shall ever see you again, and know you more intimately. Forgive my boldness, and believe me, Your friend ———"

To this letter the wife—who, by the by, has not the slightest knowledge of the person to whom she was writing—made the following answer:

"Mademoiselle—Your letter of the—inst, addressed to Mr.—, was duly received. Mr.—, who is my husband, directed me, when he left home some days ago, to open all his letters, and to answer any of them that I conveniently could. As you seem be rather impatient, I will answer your letter myself. I do not think that your description of yourself will please Mr ——. I happen to know that he dislikes black eyes, and hates brunettes most decidedly. It is quite true true (as you seem to suppose) that he judges of woman as he does of horses, but I do not think your inventory of 'points' is complete enough to be satisfactory to him. You omit to mention your height, weight, wind, speed and [here the word is illegible] Taking your charms at your own estimate, I doubt whether they will prove sufficiently attractive to draw him so far as B———merely for the satisfaction of comparing them with the schedule. You say you trust my husband is "unsuspecting." I think that is his nature but yet he is used to drawing inferences, which are sometimes as unkind as suspicious.—You say you are unmarried. My advice to you is that you marry somebody as soon as possible. In most cases I would not recommend haste; but in yours I am convinced there is truth in the proverb which speaks of the danger of delay.—Should you be so fortunate as to get a husband; (which may God mercifully grant,) my opinion is that you will consider any woman who should write him such a letter as this of yours, impertinent, and, perhaps, immodest.

"I will deliver your note to Mr.——— when he returns, and also a copy of my reply which I am sure he will approve.

"I am with as much respect as you permit. MRS.———"

This was the end of the correspondence.

Horrible Death.—The Niles Republican states that the dwelling of Horace Salisbury near Terre Coupe Prairie, was recently burned to the ground with all its contents. The fire originated with his little girl three years old, who went to throw shucks into the fire from her apron, when she stumbled, by a hole in the hearth and fell into the fire face foremost. Springing out, with her clothes on fire, she ran to a bed and that caught fire from her clothing. Her mother was engaged in the garden. The screams of the child brought her in just in time to save her child from the burning building, but not its life. She was so horribly burned on the stomach that she burst open, and was burned to the bone on the back and shoulders. The little sufferer lived about four hours, when death relieved it from its agony.

In Memory of Cousin Loria.

BY JENNY HARSH PARKER.

He is dead.
Let Christ's tender words be read,
Words of comfort chasing out
All the anguish, all the doubt —
Filling up the loneliness
With a radiance heaven-bright,
Soothing down our bitterness,
Lifting up with holy might,
What would else our hearts to breaking,
What would else our faith be shaking —
Father, bear us through this night,
Make us comforted.
He is dead.
We have laid him in his bed,
And he'll wake not on the morrow
To our toiling life of sorrow.
Surely, surely that is blest,
Yet we murmur in our weeping
For the lost one from our breast,
For the darling in God's keeping
Safe from pain and mad unrest.
Saviour! Saviour Crucified!
In thy love we trust for healing
In thy mercy's blest revealing—
Since this precious one hath died.
Rochester, N. Y.

To my old friend Augusta.

BY KATE MONTAGUE.

Oh! call me not cold though my lips curl in scorn,
Tis the cankering moth of false friendship I've borne,
It has sorrowed my heart that once beat fervent and warm,
And gone are my friends and each cherished form.

The world calls me heartless when only I'm sad
And think I'm too proud to longer seem glad,
That the deep "streams of affection" are frozen too low
To even love earthly when only tis woe.

But I'll tell thee what once a "treacherous friend"
Put flight to my friendship and my happiness end;
And now the fond friends that I've trusted of old,
Have called me so heartless so proud and so cold

Jackson Coal.

The Jackson Patriot gives the following description of one of the coal mines in that vicinity. As these mines have attracted much attention from our citizens since the opening of the Jackson Branch Railroad, the sketch will no doubt be read with interest:

"We took advantage of the good sleighing last week, to visit the coal mine of Root & Co., at Sandstone. It is situated in the village of Sandstone, some forty rods north of the Railroad station, on the side of the hill rising from Sandstone creek. Arriving at the mine we placed ourselves under the care of Mr Joseph Bailey, Superintendent of the work, who kindly pointed out to us all the points of interest. It would seem that the vein of coal shows itself on the face of the hill, and has been excavated in 4 or 5 different places. The main entrance is by an inclined plane, some six or seven feet high, and five feet wide.—The vein of coal is about 4 feet thick and lays between ledges of slate or shale The rock above is not, however, of sufficient density to support itself, and a timber roof is obliged to be built as the drift progresses. The main shaft extends about 240 feet into the hill, from the sides of which, drifts have been made, and the coal taken to the surface At this point the vein is four feet thick, which compels the miner to lay on his side as he picks the coal from the vein. When once loosened, it is shoveled into small c rts, containg 700 pounds, which are drawn to the surface by a windlass, and after passing through screens, three qualities are ready for market. * * *
With the few hands at present employed, from eighteen to twenty tons of coal are taken out per day, which finds a ready market. We are told that additional force would be put on in the spring, and that the daily yield would be from 100 to 200 tons. The Detroit Coal Co., will resume operations soon, which, with the mines of Hayden and Co, and those to be opened in this city, we may expect the yield will be over 1000 tons per day."

DEATH OF COLONEL LEMANHOSKY.—A few days ago Col Lemanhosky, the illustrious Pole, who served under Napoleon during the time of the Republic and the Empire, died near Hamburg, Clark county Indiana, aged 88 years. He was among the first to rally the standard of the little Corporal, and never betrayed his trust or his master from the seige of Toulon to the final overthrow and exile. Many of us have listened to his lectures, and remember the thrilling incidents related by the old man. He was in Italy and Egypt, and beheld the sanguinary conflicts that took place under the shadows of the Pyramids, cruised the red sea, and among the arid wastes of the desert beheld the ravages of the plague cut down the flower of the army, yet did he cling to the fortunes of the great captain with that peculiar tenacity that marked the followers of the greatest General that ever trod the earth For his devotedness he suffered imprisonment in the loathsome dungeons of Paris, and at last exile from the land of his first adoption to the home of the free.

He was buried with Masonic honors and while he lived could boast of being one of the officers that initiated the great Napoleon into the mysteries of that ancient and honorable order.—N. Y. Ledger.

National Integrity.

We would especially call the attention of our readers to an able original article, (but by mistake not noted as such,) upon the first page of our last week's issue, entitled "The right alone expedient" as having a direct bearing upon this subject.

Unless we have indeed become a nation of practical atheists; and our professions of a regard for the authority and principles of the Christian religion, are only for show and not for use, we have an interest in knowing that they not disregarded any more in our National councils, than in our individual and private life.

It is a strange infirmity of human Nature, to always seeks upon the least possible excuse or pretext, to throw off the restraints of the divine law, and seek for happiness or success in the opposing devices of a human sagacity. God's own chosen people, called even from Abraham, again and again did this, and the terrible retributions of two thousand years could never divert it wholly from their hearts and minds. But it may be well for every true patriot, whether christian or infidel, carefully to consider whether in the entire length of their eventful national career, they ever once secured anything but disappointment and defeat by their disregard of the divine will.

Nor are they alone in this. The whole history of this sin cursed world for almost six thousand years, shows most unmistakably, that they are not the only people, whom God has blessed or cursed according as they have regarded, or disregarded, his revealed will or known laws of universal right and wrong.

Our own history is but brief. Less than a century contains it all. There are yet those upon the stage who have been spectators of the sad departures from an inflexible regard for divine law and human right, which we as a nation have made in that brief space of time. Nor do they need our warning voice, lest they be found at last, bringing down upon us they retributions of divine justice, for they have seen, and felt, and feared it all.

Less than a century ago, our nation in its feebleness and inexperience, but strong in its trust in the divine approbation, and inflexible in its adherence to the divine law, and proclaiming as its cardinal doctrines the inalienability of human rights and the unchanging duty of resistance to tyranny and oppressin at all times and in all places, commenced a career of unexampled brillancy and sucess. Dieu et Mon Droit, was the heart motto of every American soldier. This at least they had received from their mother country, and the lesson it taught, made them the unyeilding enemies of colodial oppression.

How is it now? It may be thought partizan in us to enumerate the many acts of an American Congress, an American Executive, an American Supreme Court, which stand so boldly forth in utter disregard and contempt, of the purer patriotism and principles of that early day. We will not do so, but only ask our readers to observe and reflect for themselves; and if upon reflection, they see, as we think they will, constantly recurring evidences of a high handed disregard alike of divine law, and human right, then let them once more consider, what right we have as a nation to presume ourselves exempt from those laws of retributive justice which have ever, from earth's primeval morn, so surely executed themselves upon the God-defying people of other lands.—If Jefferson, in view of human slavery as it was then permitted and sustained, could n his comprehensive sagacity and sense of justice, and with the history of a world before his eyes, exclaim "I tremble for my country, when I reflect that God is just,' how much more should that fearful reflection now occupy the heart and mind of every true patroit, and if he labored to restore his country to the purer principles and holier patriotism of its early revolution, how much more earnestly should we seek and striving faithfully to restore it to the old ways, and the ancient landmarks.

☞The January earnings of the Mich. Southern Railroad were $96,089, against $112,244 for the same month of last year —a decerease of 16,155. In view of the saving in running expenses, it is thought that the net earnings must have been larger this year than last. The subscription list to the loan of two millions for for this company is now closed, and the remainder of the bonds are now offered to the holders of the unsecured floating debt at 85, in liquidation of their claims. Many of them have already settled their demands against the compony upon this basis.

They left Camp Scott January 1st. The troops were in good spirits, earnestly wishing for good weather and reinforcements, to make a descent on Salt Lake City.

From Mormon prisoners and the straggling Utah Indians, Col. Johnston is well advised as to the movements of the Saints. Active preparations continue for resistance of the troops in the Spring. Cincinnati, Feb. 20.

Last evening, the Methodist Church on Sixth street, was partly destroyed by the explosion of defective gas pipes. Some fifteen persons were assembled in the basement for meeting, when a strong odor was observed; an effort was made to discover the leakage, and a light was applied to the metre, when the blaze burst forth, but was quickly extinguished and quiet almost restored when the explosion took place, tearing up the floor, shattering the walls, and making a complete wreck of the basement. In the church above, half of the pews were torn up, windows blown out, portions of the floor were thrown high as the ceiling, doors were forced from the hinges and blown into the street. The explosion was heard a distance of half a mile.—The windows of many buildings in the vicinity were destroyed. Eight or ten persons were severely wounded two or three of whom are not expected to live.

St. Louis Feb. 20.

The Pacific Hotel was burned at 3, o'clock this morning. Eight or ten persons were killed, and many seriously injured by jumping from the windows.—It is impossible to obtain particulars, or the names of the killed and wounded now.

LATER.

The burning of the Pacific Hotel proves to have a much more terrible calamity than was reported this morning. There were about 100 persons in the house, between 40 and 50 of whom are missing. The following are names of persons so far known to have been killed:

Bruce McNitt, Burkheart Wurst, Paul Sterrill, Mrs. Jenny Jones and child, all of St. Louis; Johnson, of Chicago; Henry Rochester and T. Hart Strong, Rochester, N. Y; Wm. Saunders Taylor, Geo. Crane, and Miss Jones, residences unknown; Chas. Davis, Wm. Cunningham, Terre Haute & Alton R. R.; Miss Hunter, Mr and Mrs. Hubbard, nine persons in one room, names unknown, and a negro boy.

The following persons were seriously injured: James F. Gary, reporter for the St. Louis Leader; Elihu Hays, New York; Jonathan Jones, Wm. Towns, Wm. Turner, and——Shape, watchmen of the house.

The fire caught in a drug store under the hotel, and the flames spread so rapidly that before the inmates could be roused, the stairways were enveloped in flames, and all egress cut off, except by the windows. Many leaped from the third story and were horribly mangled or instantly killed, and many more unable to reach the windows, were burned in their rooms. Several bodies are supposed to be in the ruins, and hundreds of excited men are energetically engaged in removing the rubbish.

The wounded men were promptly taken in charge by their friends, or sent to the hospital, where their injuries were promptly attended to. Several of the wounded cannot possibly recover. The loss of property is upwards of $50,000.

St. Louis, Feb. 22.

In the confusion and excitement, some errors crept into our report of the burning of the Pacific hotel, as telegraphed on Saturday. The loss is not so great.

The names of those positively known to be among the dead are as follows: Henry H. Rochester and Thomas H. Strong, of Rochester, N. Y. H. M. Gregg, Charles Davis, Wm. Cunningham, and Ephraim Doane, of Chicago; Miss Hunter, missing supposed to be dead; Bruce McNitt, Burkheart Wust, Paul Sterill, Wm. Taylor, J. Wagner and Dr. Lord, of Cincinnatti; Bodies found and others were taken out of the ruins so badly burned that they cannot be recognized.

Seriously injured—Mr. and Mrs. Hibbard, of Boston, the latter fatally; Elisha Hayes, Wm. W. Torrence, James F. Geary, Wm. Turner, Mr. Sharpe and Mrs. Jonathan Jones.

Several committees of citizens were formed yesterday to collect means to supply the wants of the destitute and furnish attendance for the wounded and to provide for the obsequies of the dead. The funeral of those not identified or taken care of by friends, takes place on Wednesday. Other bodies are supposed to be in the ruins. Vigorous search is still being made.

Washington, Feb. 22.

This afternoon ex-Lieutenant Rhind and his friend Capt. Corrie of South Carolina, were held to bail in the sum of $2,500 each, for their appearance before the Criminal Court for challenging and posting Comodore Boutwell, at whose instance the arrest was made.

The American party of the Board of Managers of the Washington National Monument Society, having more than six months ago retired from all further connection therewith, at a meeting of the subscribers to-day a new board of opposite politics was elected to serve one year or till the next triennial election as provided by the Constitution. The voting was all one way. A number of Military Companies paraded the streets to-day, notwithstanding their slushy condition, in honor of the Anniversary of Washington's birthday. Flags were displayed from the shipping and public buildings.

Up to noon to-day, so far as known no meeting has been arranged between Messrs Collum and Clay.

A fisticuff altercation occurred yesterday morning in a barber shop, underneath Willard's Hotel, between Lieut. Bell of the Cavalry and Lieut. Williams of the Dragoons, which may result in a duel, a challenge having passed between them.

Despatches just received from Kansas, indicate a marked change in the aspect of affairs in that Territory. The person who sent the intelligence occupies a high official position. He says, that at the present time a large majority of the people are in favor of the immediate admission of Kansas under the Lecompton constitution.

Gen Harran, the New Granadian minister, is in receipt of intelligence from his Government to the effect that the difficulties between the two Governments will be satisfactorily adjusted. He is of the opinion that the treaty recently negotiated, will be ratified, the reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

Washington, Feb. 23.

Lieuts. Bell and Williams, who had a collision in a barber shop on Sunday, went beyond Bladensburg this morning, at five o'clock, accompanied by their respective friends. It is said that Bell fired at the word one, the ball from his pistol penetrating Williams's hat. Williams, as the assailing party, having given the satisfaction demanded, discharged his pistol into the snow. The belligerents returned to Washington, apparently reconciled.

Washington, Feb 22.

The efforts to reconcile the difficulty between Hon. James B. Clay and Cullom have proved abortive. They left this city at 5 o'clock this afternoon, accompanied by their respective friends, for, it is said, a place about 30 miles distant.—They probably will fight to-morrow.—Much excitement exists throughout the city.

Kalamazoo, Feb. 12.

The main part of the State Insane Asylum caught fire last night at 11½ o'clock, and was partially consumed, with carpenters' tools and considerable wrought lumber. Through great exertion, the roof, at the junction of the main building with the wing, which is the largest, most expensive and nearest completion. The origin of the fire is as yet unknown, but it is supposed to have caught from shavings. No portion of the building has been occupied as yet. The damage is estimated at from $25,000 to $30,000, and will not probably exceed the former figures.

CONGRESSIONAL NEWS.

Washington, Feb. 23.

House.—The House went into the Committee of the Whole on the Indian Appropriation bill. Mr. Silas M. Burroughs vindicated the North from the charge of sectionalism preferred by the Southern gentleman. Referring to statistical facts, he showed the immense preponderence of expenditures by the Government in behalf of the South over the North. He also contended for the superiority of the North over the South in wealth, industry, population and education, &c. He proceeded to denounce Messrs. Pierce and Buchanan, and their course on the Kansas question.

Mr. Smith, of Va, called him to order. It was disgraceful for a gentleman to denounce on this floor, a co-ordinate branch of the government.

(Cries of no! no!!)

Mr. Burroughs would be happy, if he could say in his heart that he honored James Buchanan; but he must be allowed to speak his candid opinions. He was proceeding when Mr Smith again interrupted him. Much confusion ensued, during which his hour closed.

Senate.—The Senate passed the bill to amend the act of March 2d, 1851, limiting the liabilities of ship owners.

Mr. Bell presented a resolution from the Legislature of Tennessee, respecting his opposition to the Kansas-Nebraska bill, endorsing the Lecompton Constitution, and intimating that he ought to resign. He referred to the date of the resolutions, February 10th, 1858, 4 years after his vote which they censured, saying that it had been usual when the constituents of a member of Congress felt aggrieved at his course to act promptly

Senate.—Mr. Bell referred to the fact that the resolutions endorse, unconditionally, the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, notwithstanding the mischievous result of that repeal had become patent and unmistakeable, which, in the language of the President, have convulsed the Union to the center, lighted the flames of civil war in Kansas, and produced dangerous sectional parties throughout the Confederacy. He alluded to the various elections in Tennessee, since the vote now called in question, showing that the Kansas Nebraska bill was but slightly alluded to in the different canvasses.—Mr. Fillmore, who declared that had he been a member of Congress, he would have voted against the Nebraska bill, received 66,000 votes for President, in Tennessee. Mr. Ethridge, who voted against the Nebraska bill, was returned to Congress by an increased vote. He thought at no time since the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, had there been any settled indications of opposition in the South; and he believed, if a fair, impartial vote could be taken on the question, there would be an overwhelming majority for pronouncing it the most unfortunate measure that Congress ever passed.

Mr. Johnson of Tenn. alluded to the Tennessee elections, showing that in 1854 before the passage of the Kansas Nebraska bill, the Tennessee Legislature passed resolutions approving that measure and requesting the members of Congress from that State to support it. The Nebraska bill was also the main issue in the elections of '55 and '56. He contended that, therefore, a large majority of the people of Tenn. condemned Bell's course. He asked Mr B. whether he would vote for the Lecompton constitution, with or without instruction.

DIED

Of consumption, on the 20th inst., Miss. JULIA WELLS, aged 21 years.

For two years she had suffered with that flattering but fatal disease, during which time she exhibited the utmost christian patience and submission. Her life was a beautiful exemplification of the purity and meekness of the Gospel, and her death, an impressive testimony of the christains' faith to sustain and comfort in the last mortal struggle. Her funeral was attended on Sunday at Raisin church by a very large concourse of friends.

EAR ACHE CURED.—This painful affection to which so many persons especially children are subject every fall and winter, is readily curable by the use of Barker's Anodyne Liniment. A few drops upon a piece of raw cotton should be put into the ear as warm as can be borne, and the surrounding parts well bathed with the Liniment, applied with gentle friction with the hand. Thousands of cases have been relieved in a few minutes by this invaluable liniment. It is also infallible cure for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sprains and Bruises, Burns and Scalds, and all diseases of the skin It is for sale by all respectable Druggists.

There is an article selling throughout the country that has attained the widest celebrity ever known as a remedy for Liver Complaints. We have reference to Dr Sanford's Invigorator, or Liver Remedy, that has performed cures almost too great to believe, and were it not for the undoubted evidence that accompany the testimonials. It is, in truth, the greatest remedy known for Dyspepsia, Jaundice, or general debility that so often baffles the skill of our most eminent physicians.
Dr. Sanford has been for a long time one of the eminent physicians of New York, and it is said, most of his cases were treated with the Invigorator with such invariable success that he has been induced to offer it as a family medicine, and let the world have the benefit of his discovery. If those who are troubled with debility, headache, languor, or slow, lingering fever will try a bottle, we think they might save physicians' bills, and days, perhaps years of suffering.

BILL POSTING.—The bill posters of Buffalo are running opposition to each other in business. Col. Lum Smith advertises post bills all over the Union and in California and Havana, and endorses his merits by referring to Hon. Milliard Fillmore, James Buchanan, Martin Van Buren Wm. H. Prof. Read puts forth a counter advertisement, in which he states that although he has no special agencies in California, Havana, and other small places he is fully prepared to post bills on the shortest notice, in China, the Sandwich Islands, Jerusalem, Brazil, at the sources of the Nile, on every peak of the Alps, and all over the North Pole. He gives among his references, the Emperor of Russia, Queen Victoria, Bayard Taylor, of Sweden, Ching-Ching-Ching of China. and the editor of the Rochester Union.

One of 'Em.

Hon. JAMES CRAIG, a Member of Congress from Missouri, is it seems, an Ohioan. A letter in the Missouri Democrat, from S. C. Frey, dated Canton, Ohio, says that Mr. Craig, on his way to Congress, stopped at old his home and staid several days. How he doported himself and what expectations were raised in regard to his future course on the questions before the public may be best learned from the letter, a part of which we quote as follows:

He declared openly and above board that he would not before he would vote in Congress to receive Kansas into the Union with the Lecompton constitution, without its being fairly submitted to the people of Kansas for their rejection or adoption.—It was remarked by a number of persons here, that when Craig took his stand and gave his word he could be depended upon. Consequently we have watched his votes in Congress closely, and what is the result? In every vote given on various motions relative to Kansas, the name of Craig, of Missouri, is with the Lecomptonites. So much for his honor He cannot plead ignorance, for he boasted here that he knew all about Kansas, that he lived on the border and was familiar with the whole transaction. He said he lived in a Slave State, and preferred it to a free State, but never would he give his vote to make Kansas a Slave State against the wishes of its people.

MR. EDITOR.—At a meeting of the Board for the village of Tecumseh on the 8th. inst. the following petition was received and upon motion the village Marshall was directed forthwith to notify the dealers and venders of intoxicating liquors in said village in accordance with the prayer of the petitioners and also that said petition with the names annexed be published in the Tecumseh Herald. F. S. SNELL Clerk, Pro tem

Tecumseh Feb. 8th 1858.

PETITION.

To the President and Members of the Village Board of the village of Tecumseh Lenawee County, Michigan.

The undersigned citizens of the aforesaid village of Tecumseh would respectfully memoralize your honorable body that according to section 1st. of An Act passed by the Legislature of the State of Michigan entitled "An Act prohibiting the manufacture of intoxicating liquors and the traffic therein." "No person shall be allowed to manufacture or sell at any time, by himself, his clerk, servant or agent directly or indirectly any spirituous or intoxicating liquors, or any mixed liquors a part of which is spirituous or intoxicating, except as heretofore provided." And whereas in section 5 of said Act it is made "the duty of the common council of any City, the village board of any incorporated village &c to commence an action according to law in the name of the people of the State of Michigan against any person guilty of a violation of any of the provisions of this act. &c.

And whereas it is well and publicly known that there are divers persons in this village who are selling and trafficking in intoxicating liquors contrary to law; Your memorialists would therefore respectfully request your honorable body to give notice to all persons in this village who are unlawfully selling or trafficking in spirituous or intoxicating liquors that they discontinue such unlawful selling or trafficking therein within thirty days from the date of such notice, or they will be dealt with according to law.

Bragg's Arctic Liniment.

This uncomparable Liniment, upon which the great mass of afflicted of all lands now rely for relief from the pangs of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout, Erysipelas Cancer, Scrofula, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds and all cutaneous diseases, is rapidly superceding all similar preparations. The proprietors give for the unsecur agement of sufferers, the following memorandum of a few of the wonderful cures effected by it during the past few months. Certificates from the parties named are in the possession of the proprietors: their length precludes the publication of all but a few.

One Bottle Triumphant.

Mrs. Moffitt, No 345 Morgan Street, St. Louis, having suffered for three years with Rheumatism, and tried many preparations without effect, was cured by one fifty cent bottle of Arctic Liniment.

Out of Purgatory.

Henry Davis, Mound street, St. Louis, who says he was "suffering the pangs of purgatory" with neuralgia for months, was cured by three or four applications of the Arctic Liniment.

Pity the Little Children.

A little daughter of Mrs. Lee, residing on Lake St. Chicago, was scalded all over by the upsetting of a kittle of boiling water. The Arctic Liniment was applied according to the directions, and the fire was instantly extracted, and in a few days the little sufferer was well.

Restored to Beauty.

Mrs. George S. Tyler, Canal street, N. Orleans had long suffered from a painful and disfiguring eruption on the face, and by the use of one bottle of the Liniment was cured, and restored to her original beauty.

Horrible Tumor.

Eugene Mattery, Natchez was three years the victim of a horrible tumor on the neck, which resisted all remedies until he tried the Arctic Liniment. Three bottles cured him in a few weeks.

Wonderful Cure!

Mrs. Bedford, Mobile, was confined to her couch for three years with numb palsy and after being in despair from the failure of all other remidies, was cured by the Arctic Liniment, in a little over a month.

An Explosion.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov., 28th. 1857.

I hereby certify, that having been badly bruised and scaled by the explosion of a Steam Boiler, a friend induced me to try Bragg's Arctic Liniment. The smart was instantly extracted from the scalds, and in a very short time all the pain was gone from the bruises—In two weeks I was well, and able to resume my business.

The Blind See!

Webster City, Iowa, Nov. 9th, 1857.

Dr. A. G. BRAGG.—Dear Sir: For more than three years I had been afflicted with inflamed eyes, in an aggravated degree, and tried various Physicians, and several nostrums, to no effect. I was induced by Dr. Baum to try the Arctic Liniment, and in two months was nearly well. My little daughter was afflicted in the same manner for the same time, and during a portion of the time was entirely blind in one eye. I applied your valuable Liniment, and her eyes are perfectly sound. Thus have I with one two-bbit bottle cured my daughter's eyes and my own, besides curing the rheumatism in my back. I would not be without your invaluable remedy in my house. Yours Truly

Wm RUSSELL.

Webster City, Iowa, Nov., 9th. 1857.

I hereby certify, that I am well acquainted with Wm Russell, and with the astonishing cures he mentions, and know his statement to be strickly true.

Good for Animals.

This invaluable Liniment is also equally efficatious in curing the diseases of animals, as witness the following certificate; Messrs J. & A. Arnot, and Lynch, Arnot & Co., keep the two largest livery stables in the west and are generally known throughout the U. S.

St. Louis, Dec 23rd, 1857.

We, the undersigned, having used Dr. Bragg's Arctic Liniment for a number of months, cheerfully testify to its superior efficacy in curing the diseases of horses; so well are we satisfied of the Arctic being the best Liniment made, that we would use no other. We keep and have kept for a number of years, extensive livery stables in this city, and consequently our experience about horses and their diseases is great, and we unhesitatingly say, that the Arctic Liniment is the only one we have ever found ALWAYS EFFECTIVE. We cordially recommend it to all livery stable keepers and others having the care of horses.

Caution.

Many Druggists, having old Liniments on hand, will try to sell them to you as the best, but do you positively refuse to purchase them, ask for BRAGG'S ARCTIC LINIMENT," and take no other.

Liberal Proposition.

The proprietors agree to furnish each puchaser of a dollar bottle with a free subscription to the U. S Journal, for one year. This is one of the best N. Y illustrated papers. A certificate, entitling the holder to the benefit of this proposition, is enclosed in the wrapper around every dollar bottle. The Arctic Liniment is put up in 25 cent 50 cent and $1. bottles. The 50 cent and $1 bottles contain 50 and 100 per cent more Liniment in proportion to their cost, and are the cheapest. For sale by

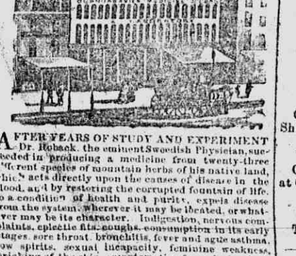
DR ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD PILLS.

DISEASE VANQUISHED.

—BY—

Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies.



AFTER YEARS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT succeeded in producing a medicine from twenty-three different species of mountain herbs of his native land, which acts directly upon the causes of disease in the blood, and by restoring the corrupted fountain of life to a condition of health and purity, expels disease from the system wherever it may be located, or whatever may be its character. Indigestion, nervous complaints, epileptic fits, coughs, consumption in its early stages, sore throat, bronchitis, fever and ague asthma, low spirits, sexual incapacity, feminine weakness, pricking of the skin, symptomatic of paralysis, rheumatism, neuralgia, tumor, cancer, diabetis, lassitude and debility diarrhea, and all other disorders of the organs of respiration, the liver, the kidneys, the stomach, the nerves, or the muscular fiber are unerringly cured by this preparation. It is to the unseen world or seeds of disease what an alkali is to an acid: it neutralizes them with absolute certainty, while at the same time it regulates the secretions, removes obstructions from the bowels, creates appetite, renews bodily vigor, and regenerates every animal function. Such is the nature, such are the effects of Dr. Roback's famous Scandinavian Blood Purifier, which if taken in conjunction with his Scandinavian Blood Pills, will not only obliterate the most painful disease, but prevent their recurrence, and lengthen life beyond the ordinary span.

In the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS, Dr. Roback presents the result of twenty years of experience, hard study and experiment as to what a perfect pill should be. No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial. Prices of the Scandinavian Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half-dozen; Scandinavian Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or five for $1.

Penn. Miami Co. Ind. Aug. 4. 1857.

Dr. C. W. ROBACK: I have received so much benefit from your scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills that I have thought it my duty and it is no less my inclination to give you a plain statement of my case. I was for years afflicted with that bane of all comfort and efficiency in business, dyspepsia. To recapitulate all the so-called remedies which I have used in ridding myself of this disease, would indeed make a mockerie's catalogue. I also committed with the best physicians could bear of. I was induced to try your remedies through the persuasions of a friend, and after using them a few days was greatly benefitted, and in a short time less than a month I was entirely and permanently cured. I was also afflicted with the most violent nervous headache, which I suppose was produced by my disordered stomach, for when my dispepsia left me, my headache left with it. I now feel better in every respect than I have for ten years.

Very truly yours, JOHN S. DEMUTH

From the Rev. Mr. McMULLEN, Pastor of Roberts Chapel, Indianapolis, Oct. 5, 1857.

DR. C. W. ROBACK—Dear Sir: I have used your Blood Purifier for a scrofulous affection, from which I have suffered much at times. While it is pleasant to the taste it certainly has a happy effect upon the nerves. Please accept my thanks for your kind regards and acts, and believe me,

Yours, J. W. T. McMULLEN.

FROM A WELL-KNOWN STEAMBOAT CLERK.

Louisville, June 4 1857.

DEAR DOCTOR: Send me half a dozen boxes of your Pills, care of H. G. Curd & Co., as I can get them next trip. Six weeks ago nothing could have convinced me that a twenty-five cent box of Pills could have relieved my obstinate chronic constipation with its attending evils. I told you so when I bought them but I am bound to own that your Pills fill the contract. Why makers' sometimes without effect and sometimes with too much effect, but I have no trouble with yours—they are just what I want.

CINCINNATI, Friday, Sept. 4, 1857.

DR. ROBACK—Dear Sir: Having been afflicted with neuralgia or rheumatism for the past year and a half and having seen your medicine called the Scandinavian Blood Purifier, highly recommended by gentlemen with whom I am acquainted, I was induced to try it, but not before I had used various other medicines—After using two bottles, I felt its effect very sensibly and upon using two more, I found myself perfectly cured. You will allow me therefore, to congratulate you upon having a discovery in medicine which is proving itself to be a marker of such wonders in the diseases of the human family.

GEORGE S. BENNETT.

Local Editor Cincinnati Daily Enquirer.

INDIANAPOLIS, Wednesday Sept. 2, 1857.

DR. C. W. ROBACK—Dear Sir: Having been troubled for several years with extreme debility and weakness, so much so that I was unable to attend to my ordinary business at times, and having heard of the wonderful cures that your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Pills were effecting, I was induced by a friend to try them. I have been using the Purifier for the last twelve months, and find the medicine fully equal to its recommendations. So valuable is it to me that I cannot now dispense with the use of it as my advanced age of life—seventy-seven years.

I cheerfully give this information for the benefit of those similarly afflicted. MORRIS MORRIS.

Bloody Murrain.

I have lately seen it stated in the papers that this disease had appeared among western cattle, and another writer pronounces the disease incurable. In the absence of proper books setting forth the western diseases of cattle, I have thought it a public service to say somthing to the readers of the Farmer on this subject.

BLOODY MURRAIN.—CAUSES.—Many persons think this disease infectious; no doubt the discharges in a herd of cattle intensify the predisposing causes but nothing more; and for that reason the diseased animal should at once be removed from its fellows. I believe the disease to be caused by malaria.—It generally appears in excessively wet pastures, and where cattle have been fed a long time in a short space of surface, fouling the soil.

SYMPTOMS.—Yellowish water infused in the ordinary white coats of the eyeballs, and exhited in the urine, drooping, and great inactivity, loss of appetite, and especially will the deseased animal stand apart, and become solitary for some days before the disease fatally exhibits itself; then follow bloody discharges from the bowels, and somtime the urinary vessels, as death approaces.

PREVENTIVES.—Keep always in tight troughs salt sprinkled on ashes, accessable to the cattle. This is almost a sure preventive; occasionally, however, as cattle get very fat, remove them to new standing places.

CURE.—As soon as an animal shows any of the above symptoms, remove him at once from the herd; mix common slacked lime as if for whitewash, and give a full grown bullock from three to four pints of it at once; if it does not cure the case is hopeless, so far as my experince goes, The lime opperates not only as a powerful purgative, but in some other unknown way, as other purgatives fail to have any efficient result. I need hardly say that the sooner the drench is given afer the disease shows itself, the better—as after the bloody discharge from the bowels begins, it is rarely curable.—Ohio Farmer.

UNSOUND CORN AS FOOD FOR CATTLE.—In looking over your paper I observe the death of several fine colts from eating bad corn, and that they could do no better than to feed it.—Now, let me suggest to your readers the propriety of kiln-drying their wet corn, and then using it for feed. I have done so at my Cherry Hill farm in Kentucky, and find it to work well. Some may complain that they had no facilities for so doing; neither had I but I made up a large fire on the hearth and got it very hot, then took the fire out and threw in six or seven bushels of shelled corn at a time. This process thoroughly dried it; and it is now eaten with as much gusto as the best corn grown. A little labor bestowed in this manner will save much feed to some who can, perhaps, poorly afford to loose it.

Respectfully, T. WRIGHTSON.

Sowing Grass Seed.

MR. T. B. MINER.—I have been a subsciber to your Rural American since July 1st, and like it very much indeed. I noticed your offer of the paper one year free, to those who would write an article on the vocation of farming, which I think is a very liberal offer; and as money is scarce, especially with me, I will try, at least, to avail myself of the opportunity. My subject is that of sowing grass seed, timothy for instance.

I have noticed many times, that people sowed too small a quantity to the acre, and thereby met with a loss in trying to be economical. My father was always a farmer, and I have sowed a great deal of seed. He taught me to sow one peck to the acre, saying nothing of the quality of the land; but on land that has been considerably worn, several crops having been taken off in succession, this is too small a quantity. While we used a peck of seed to the acre, and consequently received light crops of hay in return, our adjoining neighbor used half a bushel, and recieved bountiful crops the first mowing. I have often heard it remarked among farmers that a small quantity of seed was sufficient, for though it might not come up very thick the first season, it would spread in time to be thick enough. This may all be true, but while their grass is spreading, they not only loose half the crop which they might have had, especially at the first mowing, but they give a good chance for Canada thistles and all other foul weeds to spring up and take the place of good timothy—not realizing a few shillings worth of seed added to a peck to the acre, would fetch them in the first season from $8 to $5 estimating hay at eight or ten dollars a ton.

In the spring of 1856, I tried the experiment on my own land, by sowing half a pushel of timothy seed to the acre, on a piece from which potatoes had been raised quite a number of years. I sowed early in the spring in a moist time; without harrowing it in. It is best to sow early, as then it gets the benefit of the rains, and is more apt to become rooted before the dry weather comes on. If it cannot be sowed early, it would be better to go over it with a light bush. Try half an acre with a peck to the acre, and half an acre with half a bushel to the acre, side by side, and see if it don't pay well to sow the larger quantity per acre. A. P. WHITE.
